$300,000 FUTILE SEARCHES

EDMONTON (CP) — More than $300,000 was spent unnecessarily last year when Canadian Forces' aircraft flew 300 hours searching for pilots believed to have crashed, an armed forces official said Saturday.

"We sent up planes on 99 incidents before we found out we were wasting our time," said Capt. Don Fish.

"We often found pilots sitting having a beer after failing to follow correct procedure. We had no alternative but to commit men and aircraft to look for them."

In 23 instances, Fish said, pilots must have discovered their emergency locating transmitter was on and stopped it. Searches were called-off and pilots were not traced.

Academy Award Count-Down

More than 1,000 entries have already been received in the Times-CJVI Academy Award contest with just over a week to go.

First letter drawn March 30 that has correctly predicted the winner of Oscars for best picture, best actor and best actress will win a trip for two to Hollywood. The Academy Awards will be announced March 28.

Official entry form for the contest is on page 31.

Entries received by March 25 will be eligible for an early bird draw in which 700 double passes to a theatre party will be awarded. The party will include an afternoon premiere of a motion picture at the Capitol plus the chance to win numerous door prizes. The event, starting at 2 p.m. Wednesday, March 30, will also be the occasion of the drawing for the grand prizes.

The grand prize includes airfare for two via CP Air to Los Angeles followed by a tour of Universal movie studio. In addition, the prize includes hotel accommodation and a side trip to Disneyland, courtesy of Budget Travel.

Five runners-up will win a dinner for two at The Empress plus a double pass to a Famous Players theatre.

Ten other runners-up will win Life Goes to The Movies, a nostalgic picture book of Hollywood.

In the Academy Award race the oddsmakers have named Network and Rocky as early co-favorites as movie of the year, although All the President's Men also has a lot of support.

The other two nominees, Bound for Glory and Taxi Driver, are rated as longshots.

In the race for best actor most of the interest has centred around whether the academy will honor Peter Finch posthumously for his role in Network. Another sentimental favorite is William Holden but he may act as a vote-splitter as he is also in Network. Sylvester Stallone, a newcomer who wrote and starred in Rocky, is regarded as a very strong contender to win it all. The other two nominees are Robert Deniro and Giancarlo Giannini.

Deniro's performance in Taxi Driver was good enough to win an Oscar but he doesn't have the kind of sentiment behind him that the other three major contenders have. Meanwhile, Giannini is definitely a longshot in this field.

The race for best actress is wide open. The nominees are Marie-Christine Barrault, Faye Dunaway, Talia Shire, Sissy Spacek and Liv Ullmann.

Campaigning on behalf of the nominees is continuing in Los Angeles and the odds can change during the next few days.

In addition, academy voters are notoriously unpredictable and sometimes cast their ballots out of personal whims or studio politics.

$200,000 Blaze Guts Paint Shop

A spectacular fire early today destroyed the Saunders and Hitchman Auto Paint Shop at 509 Ellice causing an estimated $200,000 damage.

A spokesman for the Victoria fire department said by the time firemen reached the scene shortly after 6 a.m. the roof of the two-storey building had collapsed and flames were shooting 50 to 60 feet in the air setting nearby power lines on fire.

Assistant fire chief Bill Jones said all three city fire halls responded and Saanich and Oak Bay fire departments were placed on emergency standby.

The crew of 19 firemen had the fire under control within half an hour and by 9 a.m. were in the process of mopping up.

Jones said a preliminary investigation indicates the probable cause was a malfunction in the shop's electrical panel. Arson has been ruled out.

Jones said four cars inside the building were destroyed.

B.C. Hydro crews were called in and cut off power in the area.

The building is owned by Fred Zeilinger.

HIJACK ENDS

BEIRUT (Reuter) — Two armed men who hijacked a Turkish airliner to Beirut surrentered tonight shortly after freeing the passengers.

The hijackers, identified as two young Turks, allowed the passengers—according to different reports, varying between 118 and 182—to leave the Boeing 727 at Beirut.

If Money Talks, Message Heard

If money talks, people in Greater Victoria have been saying this week they like what they read and hear about the Society for the Recreation of Handicapped Persons.

Cheques from $2 to $500 have been rolling into the Victoria Times office, a total of $2,053.50 by Friday.

The society is in fact eight young people assisted by about 80 volunteers who conduct 17 different programs for local handicapped people.

The idea is to give handicapped children, teens and adults in the Capital district a chance for a little fun, the same opportunities the rest of us take for granted.

About 200 handicapped people a month turn out for the society's activities. They know better than anyone else what it means.

"As a handicapped person for 40 years, but blessed with a wonderful husband and loving considerate friends, I want to express my appreciation to the young people who inaugurated this worthwhile project and enclose a donation for its continuance. Good luck," one note to the Times said.

Among programs conducted after school for children are physical education activities, fine arts (painting, music, crafts), drama and special events, which can mean anything from playing in a park to going swimming to stopping in for a milkshake.

Saturday programs bring mentally and physically handicapped children into activities they would join if they had no handicap.

For teens with handicaps, Friday night get-togethers might lead to a party, a movie or a visit to a mini-golf range. A cooking class is popular and there is a drama group.

Society staff and volunteers turn out on a one-to-one basis for a group of 20 profoundly retarded adults from Glendale Hospital every Tuesday and Thursday.

Activities vary but even having lunch at the society's storefront office, 2535 Government St., provides a rare and prized look at the world outside their hospital home for this group.

Make Love, Anglais

MONTREAL (CP) — English-speaking Quebecers can ensure the survival of their language by making love, Premier Rene Levesque said Friday night.

The premier said the province's English-speaking minority should take its own "revenge of the cradles" on the French-speaking majority by raising large families.

Levesque gave his advice to reporters after addressing some 400 Parti Quebecois delegates at the opening of this weekend's convention of the party's Central Montreal region.

He said the future growth of English in Quebec under his government's language charter, to be presented before the end of this month, is, "up to the power of your loins."

In a separate interview, Intergovernmental Affairs Minister Claude Morin declared the PQ government is committed to independence and does not believe that any form of constitutional reform can meet the province's demands within Confederation.

In an interview published today in Le Soleil, Morin said Quebec will continue to function for the time being as part of the federal system, and will try to show other provinces that PQ members are not a bunch of "monsters" or "barbarians."

But no decentralization of power under the current system can satisfy the province's needs, he said.

In fact, said Morin, decentralization or granting of special status to Quebec might do more harm than good for other provinces.

"To impose on other provinces, say Prince Edward Island, the status sought by Quebec — that would be rigid federalism in reverse, and it would be more unacceptable than the current regime."

Meanwhile, Quebec Environment Minister Marcel Leger said Friday he cannot understand why "a big thing" was made over his announcement that he was speaking for Quebec and not Canada during a United Nations conference in Argentina earlier this week.

Leger said he "was surprised at Prime Minister Trudeau's attitude."

On Thursday, Trudeau said Quebec will be barred from attending international conferences if provincial ministers renounce their ties with Canada.

VANDER ZALM GIFT TO DOG

Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm was presented with a can of dog food Friday by University of Victoria students protesting treatment of British Columbia's needy and told them it would make a meal for his dog.

A letter accompanied the dog food said some people are forced to eat dog food as a regular part of their diet because of their meagre social assistance payments. It was signed by Joe Barrett, Alma Mater Society external vice-president and son of New Democrat Party leader Dave Barrett.

The society wanted an increase in social assistance to single persons and a cost-of-living allowance to all welfare recipients.

Vander Zalm said he would give the food to his dog because that is who it is intended for but he did give the students a message to take back to the university.

He told them if they would become active and good contributors to the economy through productivity, then the govtrnment would have the means to provide still more for the needy.

Vander Zalm said the students expressed strong dissatisfaction with the government's proposed abolition of death duties.

Riots Sweep Karachi

KARACHI (Reuter) — At least 17 people were killed today in savage riots in Pakistan's largest city.

The government imposed a curfew on the city after eight hours of clashes and a major fire which destroyed a state-owned motor vehicle assembly plant.

Troops patrolled the main troublespots warning people through loudspeakers that they risked being shot if they ventured into the rubble-strewn streets.

Riots began Friday over the arrest of six opposition leaders in the protest movement against Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto.

The worst violence flared in the district of Pathan, where 13 people were shot and killed in a gun battle between political opponents.

Fires burned in various parts of the city as rioters set fire to at least 15 shops, five large buildings, three movie theatres and about 10 buses.

QUAKE HITS

MANILA (UPI) — A powerful earthquake hit the northern Philippines today, levelling buildings in one town and panicking people in swaying Manila high-rise buildings. At least one person died and nine others were injured.

2 Lawyers Differ Over 'Bribe' Interpretation

VANCOUVER (CP)—The interpretation of a Feb. 24 conversation between two lawyers surfaced as the key issue during a five-hour inquiry Friday into allegations of bribe offers and threats by a member of the Vancouver Crown counsel office.

The inquiry, ordered by Premier Bill Bennett under the Public Inquiries Act, revealed that both sides in the dispute agreed with what was said during the conversation.

But their interpretations were significantly different.

Thomas Fisher, a Crown prosecutor and treasurer of the Law Society of B.C., presided over the inquiry, which was to determine whether regional Crown counsel Alan Filmer "bribed or threatened, or inferred bribery or threats" when he spoke to Crown prosecutor Gil McKinnon.

The inquiry also heard testimony that:

—McKinnon had no respect for deputy attorney-general David Vickers;

—Filmer believed McKinnon was "professionally impressive," but also highly volatile and sensitive;

—Filmer told McKinnon that publicizing conditions in the Vancouver Crown counsel office could jeopardize McKinnon's chances for ad hoc prosecuting work.

Filmer told the inquiry that McKinnon resigned Feb. 23, and that the two discussed the move the following day.

He described McKinnon as a "highly volatile, very sensitive individual who tended at times to get upset."

He said when McKinnon told him he had no plans to join a private law firm, he (Filmer) offered him prosecuting work for the Vancouver Crown counsel office on an ad hoc basis at $35 an hour or about $34,000 a year.

Filmer also said he told McKinnon to be careful about how he publicized conditions in the Crown counsel office because he (McKinnon) could jeopardize his chances for ad hoc work.

Filmer's lawyer, R. M. Hutchinson of Nanaimo, said the Feb. 24 conversation was "a straightforward bargaining session."

Allan McEachern, commission counsel, said: "It would be a frightful thing if every government official . . . trying to work out some future contract is under threat of charge."

NEWS BRIEFS

Nurses Settling

VANCOUVER (CP) — A tentative contract settlement has been reached between negotiators for 2,600 public health and psychiatric nurses in British Columbia and the Government Employee Relations Bureau, averting a threatened strike, at least temporarily. Both sides in the dispute are recommending acceptance of the agreement, worked out with the aid of labor relations board registrar Ron Bone. Details are being withheld pending ratification.

Pay Hike for Aides

Deputy ministers in B.C. will be able to receive salaries as high as $50,000 a year under a new salary scale made public Friday. The scale allows deputies to be paid between $39,000 and $50,000 annually. Previously, they received between $36,000 and $48,000.

Congo Head Killed

Tavern Shoot-Up

OTTAWA (CP) — A city man was killed and two others were wounded early today when three masked men burst into a west-end hotel tavern and shot at about 20 patrons and four emplyees. The suspects escaped after robbing the tavern safe and patrons of an undisclosed amount of money.

FLIGHT BUG FELLS 21

KODIAK, Alaska (AP) — Federal health officials were investigating an outbreak of a flu-like illness on Friday that struck at least 21 passengers aboard a Wien Air Alaska flight.

Dr. Michael Moser, an Anchorage-based official of the United States public health service's centre for disease control, said there's no evidence to suggest that fumes from an engine malfunction caused the outbreak.

Moser, who has been attempting to contact all of the more than 50 persons aboard the flight, said:

"I'm not saying it's flu, but it's nothing more serious." He also said it appears the disease is infectious. As of Friday morning, he had contacted 26 passengers. All but five had experienced the symptoms of the illness.

Dr. Spencer Falcon of Kodiak, who has treated some of the passengers, said he doubted the illness was a virus. He said a chemical or fumes could have released into the cabin while crews were working on a malfunctioning engine during a stop in Homer, en route to Kodiak.

The illness, is characterized by chills, fever and muscle aches.

12-Year Wait Ends for Killer's Family

VANCOUVER (CP)— Ronald Eugene Ingram, 48, who has spent 12 years in a mental institution for a killing in 1962, can expect to be reunited with his family soon.

An order-in-council made public Friday authorizes his release from the Forensic Phychiatric Institute at Coquitlam.

The cabinet order followed a bid by Ingram's lawyer, George Macintosh, to have his client released on grounds that his mental condition had drastically improved from 1966 to 1971.

Ingram was incarcerated in Riverview Mental Hospital in 1965 after he was found not guilty by reason of insanity in the murder of Dianne Phipps, 19. The crown entered a stay of proceedings on a second murder charge in the death of Leslie Dixon.

The bodies of the young woman and her boyfriend were found in the area of Piper's Lagoon, at that time a Nanaimo lovers' lane. Both had been shot with a .22-calibre rifle and Phipps had been beaten with a rock.

Conditions of Ingram's release specify that he must reside in the Lower Mainland area of British Columbia, he will be subject to supervision, and he must avoid alcohol and firearms.

Macintosh said the order-in-council "is wonderful news."

"I fully expect the family will be reunited very soon."

However, Ingram's release met with a different reaction in Nanaimo.

"We're not very happy about it — we're sure upset," said Arthur Phipps, the father of the murdered girl.

And Nanaimo Mayor Frank Ney called Ingram's release "a matter of concern to many people."

"The judgment and decision for this must rest on the shoulders of the cabinet, each and every one of them," he said.

"I wish you could get someone who decided to release him to say they'd be glad to have him move next door."

Ingram is the husband of Carol Ingram and the father of three children.

Their lawyer said "the togetherness shown by Carol and Ron Ingram has been amazing."

In a recent affidavit filed by Mrs. Ingram as part of the family's three-year campaign for Ingram's release, she said that when her husband was first incarcerated, she tried to stand by him, visiting him every day for two years.

Then she stayed away for four months "trying to decide if I was going to stay with him."

"I was sick with loneliness and miserable but I decided to stay with my husband because I still loved him and my life was empty without him."

Mrs. Ingram said in her affidavit that she was pregnant with their third child, now 13, when her husband became "very troubled and very nervous."

"I considered his anxiety to be a reaction to the pregnancy.

"I was unaware of the gravity of the conflict between him and his mother who was continually nagging and belittling him (and) the effect of these confrontations on my

Grits to Study Confederation

Times News Serivce

OTTAWA — A Liberal Party Conference in Toronto next week will try to produce a re-assessment of Confederation.

The conference has been described by Senator Al Graham, president of the Liberal Party of Canada, as: "perhaps the most important event in the recent history of the party."

Prime Minister Trudeau and 28 cabinet ministers are scheduled to attend. Former Finance Minister John Turner, who quit the cabinet in 1975 will also attend.

The entire conference, which begins Thursday evening and runs through noon Sunday, is devoted entirely to the question of Canadian unity.

The conference will draw on academic and political figures who have prepared background papers for the meeting.

Graham compared the meeting with the 1960 Liberal thinkers' conference at Queen's University, Kingston, which led the the economic and social policies of the Pearson administration three years later.

Liberals from the provinces and each of the 282 federal ridings set up under the latest redistribution of boundaries will not pass formal resolutions but will prepare policies for presentation to a national Liberal policy conference in Ottawa in October.

Senator Maurice Lamontagne, conference co-chairman, and 34 others, not all of them Liberal party members, will present background papers on social policy, federalism, Quebec, language rights, management of the economy and international aid, among other subjects.

OAK BAY HIGH SETS RECORD IN DONORS

"That's the best ever at the school," said Red Cross spokesman Gerry Savage. "The kids did a good job."

It brought total number of donors in the week-long campaign to 1,341. Target for the week had been 1,450, Savage said.

COFFEE STRIKE A SUCCESS

ROME (AP) — A one-day boycott of coffee in dozens of Rome cafes was so successful the protest against high prices should be expanded to the entire capital, a Rome newspaper said Friday. Commenting on Thursday's boycott, the daily Il Messaggero called for a city-wide campaign of "self-defence" against expensive coffee.

Conspiracy Against King In Letter

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Rep. Gene Snyder (Rep.-Ky.) said Friday he has given the House Assassinations Committee information that FBI agents and police officers conspired to kill Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

Snyder said he received a letter late in February from a "former policeman" who claimed he was twice offered $500,000 to kill the black civil rights leader. While refusing to name his informant, Snyder described him as a police officer with more than 20 years experience.

The Kentucky Congressman also declined to disclose the names of three FBI agents and several other policemen allegedly involved in the plot, or the name of their city police force.

J. Richard Sprague, chief counsel for the assassinations committee, confirmed last Friday night that Snyder turned over the letter to the House panel. But he refused further comment because the matter is under investigation.

King was murdered in Memphis, Tenn., in April, 1968. James Earl Ray was convicted of the murder, but now maintains he is innocent. The House committee last fall began investigations into the assassinations of King and President John Kennedy.

Interpretation Differs

The allegations of bribery and threats were contained in published reports of interviews with McKinnon after he submitted his resignation.

But McKinnon told the inquiry that he did not use the words "bribery" or "threats" in interviews with reporters about conditions in the Vancouver Crown counsel office.

McKinnon did not name Filmer in the interviews, but subsequently named him during a closed-door meeting with Bennett.

McEachern noted that McKinnon was quoted as saying: "It was an outright bribe to keep my mouth shut about the low pay for prosecutors and the intolerable administration of criminal justice in Vancouver."

Asked if he made the statement, McKinnon said: "I did not use the word threat. The reporter asked me if I thought it was a threat and I agreed it was."

McEachern asked McKinnon how he interpreted the statement as a threat, and he replied: "That if I did go to the media and did not handle it properly, that I would not get any ad hoc work.

"These are not my words," said McKinnon, when asked about the specific quotes. "I don't speak in that fashion.

"In fairness to the reporter, I did agree that the interpretation was that it was an outright bribe."

McKinnon described the operation of the Crown counsel's office as B.C.'s "Watergate."

He said he had used the word "Watergate" to describe the situation because it had the connotation of a government cover-up.

Questioned by his own counsel, John Rowan, McKinnon said that in February he learned that eight ad hoc counsel were to be hired at $6,000 a month each.

He had approached Filmer on Feb. 21, to discuss the matter.

"I told him he'd better get the mess straightened out by March 1, 1977," McKinnon said.

Hutchinson asked if McKinnon had been aware that the $6,000 payment to ad hoc counsel was based on a $35-an-hour rate charged by law firms to meet overhead.

McKinnon said he knew of two individuals who were offered that amount who would not be paying any overhead.

"We did object to the fact the government couldn't pay people in the office more than $1,300 a month, but at the same time it had unlimited funds to pay ad hoc counsel."

Asked why he had not discussed problems in the Crown counsel office with deputy attorney-general David Vickers, McKinnon replied: "I have no respect for Mr. Vickers."

He said he had an excellent relationship with Filmer.

"I'm truly sorry for any embarrassment that Mr. Filmer and his wife and family have suffered," McKinnon said.

He added that he hoped improvements to the Crown counsel's office would result from the public inquiry.

It was not known when inquiry commissioner Fisher would bring down his report.

Canada Post Postes Canada

"Daddy, what's a Costal Pode?"

He's probably too young to know that Costal . . . uh . . . Postal Codes are your way to better mail service, or that an address in Canada is not complete without a Postal Code.

We can process up to 23,000 pieces of mail an hour with the help of just one of our many machines. But this kind of efficiency is only possible if everyone uses Postal Codes.

It isn't difficult. If you don't know your code already, you can find out from your local post office.

And if you're using Postal Codes now, congratulations. You're helping us to give you better mail service until way past the time our young friend will be writing letters to his grandchildren.

Remember.

Dixie Vs. Fleur-de-Lis

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — The flag of the province of Quebec has resulted in a flag battle among Canadian tourists and their U.S. neighbors in mobile home parks in this area.

The dispute over flying the blue fleur-de-lis Quebec flag has chilled relations between residents of two adjoining mobile home parks and has involved the Dade County sheriff's office.

It all started when French Canadian tourist Remy Ross arrived at the Sun Haven trailer park and promptly hoisted the Quebec flag over his trailer. Beneath it was a U.S. bicentennial banner.

A short time later, a delegation from the Dixie mobile court marched over and hauled down the flag. Meanwhile, back at Dixie, U.S. flags were being hoisted.

Ross and other Canadian visitors raised the Quebec flag again the next day, this time with an American flag on top. But the American flag was smaller than the Quebec flag and Dixie neighbors called the sheriff.

"When some of our people saw that Quebec flag they got very, very upset," said William Roche, manager of the Dixie park, who organized the group which removed the flag. The group included a number of war veterans.

"I'm no redneck, but we've got some rednecks in Dixie," Roche said.

A deputy dispatched to the scene hauled down the Quebec flag, leaving a note saying: "In order for you to fly your French flag here in the United States you must fly an American flag of the same size and it must be higher than your flag."

CLARK SEES POLL DROP

QUEBEC (CP) — Conservative leader Joe Clark said Friday he wouldn't be surprised if the next public opinion survey shows a further drop-in his popularity in favor of Prime Minister Trudeau.

Speaking to students at Laval University, Clark said it was natural that the last survey showed an advance for Trudeau because it came soon after Premier Rene Levesque's speech to the Economic Club of New York and Trudeau's speech to the Quebec City Chamber of Commerce.

As for the next survey on the relative popularity of the Liberals and Conservatives, Clark said he thinks the Liberals will benefit from the good publicity received by Trudeau in his recent speech to the U.S. Congress.

RESCUERS OUT MORE

The Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre at CFB Esquimalt has clocked 44 per cent more incidents in the first three months this year compared to the same period in 1976.

Major Lou Villeneuve, commanding officer, said Friday that 538 incidents had been dealt with, compared to 375 in the same period of last year.

Of these 337 were marine incidents, 81 air cases, 111 medical evacuations, by both air and sea and nine were "civil assists."

The last two civil, assists happened Thursday and Friday.

A man was reported trying to throw himself off the Lions Gate Bridge in Vancouver at 7:30 p.m. Thursday. He failed.

At 3:30 a.m. Friday a man again tried to jump off the bridge He became hung up in the bridge's underpinnings and was rescued by firemen and police.

Villeneuve said the drastic increase in marine incidents is partly due to the extra vigilance being given the herring fleet.

"To date, we have done 25 herring patrols with the (Labrador) helicopter and, to date, we have done 20 with the Buffalo," he said.

He explained these were precautionary patrols only but, even excluding the patrols, the number of incidents, 493, show a 20 per cent increase.

Sober, Seat Belt Users Deserve Low Tax—MD

VANCOUVER (CP) — A program of preventive medicine could include legislation ot lower taxes of those with good health habits "while persons who choose to smoke, drink, own guns, etc., could be taxed to cover the medical consequences of their act," says Dr. Doris Kavanagh-Gray.

She told a lecture audience that "the automobile, the cigarette, abuse of food and alcohol, physical inactivity and carelessness, have replaced the bacteria and virus as malevolent agents."

Medical science has reduced major ailments to the extent that further advances against death and disease are not so impressive, yet the costs for maintaining the present health standards are rising sharply, she said.

Kavanagh-Gray, head of the caridology division at St. Paul's Hospital here, said improvements in health care will not depend on some new therapeutic breakthrough but on the individual's acceptance of responsibility.

"If the lifestyle were charged and Canadians became sober, wore seat belts and drove slowly and carefully, some 75 per cent of motor vehicle accident fatalities could be prevented, while if Canadians spent billions on better ambulances, efficient emergency departments, more and better trained doctors, nurses and paramedics, the mortality could be reduced only five pe rcent."

She said that when sickness strikes "the self-indulgent expect that all the forces be mobilized, and all the resources marshalled on his behalf without regard to cost."

As a result Canada spends $7 billion a year on medical treatment.

The greatest financial burden falls on the sober citizen who remains healthy and productive, rather than on the victim of self-imposed risks.

Kavanagh-Gray suggested that one form of promoting more individual responsibility would be a reward and punishment technique. If the patient agreed to clean up his living habits he will receive treatment.

Syrians Quell Rash of Killing

Times News Services

At least 200 Christians have been killed over the past two days by members of Jumblatt's Druze sect, an 11th century offshoot of the Moslem religion. Syrian officials fear the killings could plunge Lebanon back into civil war.

That fear was echoed Friday by the Most Rev. Antonios Kreish, the patriarch of the Maronite Christian Church, who called the killings "massacres."

"I have warned and I am warning again," he said. "that violence will only lead to violence."

Druze and Maronite Christians had lived peacefully side-by-side in the Chouf mountains during most of Lebanon's 19-month civil war, although there has been a long history of tension between the two groups. In the 19th century fighting between Druzes and Maronites culminated in a war that led to European intervention in 1860.

According to Maronite officials here, at least 7,000 Christian villagers have fled from their villages near Jumblatt's home in the mountain town of Mukhtara.

Syrian officials have told diplomats here they are not afraid of, violence breaking out in Beirut, despite the killing of about a dozen people since Wednesday and scattered gunfire all during Thursday night and Friday.

But they are fearful of the Couf area, with its long history of violence and the Druze tradition of exacting revenge.

Meanwhile, Interior Minister Salah Salman has denied rumors of new killings following the assassination of leftist leader Kamal Jumblatt, calming the tension that the stories had created.

There were at least two demonstrations in the Lebanese capital and suburbs Friday and the Arab peacekeeping force has been put on alert.

McGregor Diversion

The McGregor River dam project, which would have drastic effects on the Fraser River salmon fishery, moves slowly ahead at B.C. Hydro. The utility wants to build a 460-foot dam on the McGregor, a major tributary of the Fraser, northeast of Prince George.

The water would back up over the divide between the Pacific and Arctic watersheds and flow into the Parsnip River which feeds the Bennett Dam on the Peace River. Thus more water would be available for power generation at the dam. The McGregor Dam would not generate any power itself — Hydro has found that to be unfeasible — but would be only a diversion device.

B.C. needs power, more and more every year, but it also depends upon its forestry and fishery resources. The McGregor Dam will destroy some of both. The McGregor once supported a very productive chinook salmon population, according to the McGregor Action Group at Prince George, but has been heavily overfished in the last two decades. It could again be a productive fishery.

Four streams flowing into the McGregor have a potential for spawning capacity 30 times their present level, the group says, quoting an environment department study done in 1964. These are only estimates, but similar staggering increases have been accomplished on other rivers where salmonid enhancement programs have been carried out. The late Roderick Haig-Brown stated that the returns from such a program would be nearly ten times the cost of the improvements.

But the dam wouldmeanmore than just burying the spawning grounds under 400 feet of water. Since the McGregor contributes about one-third of the Fraser River's flow at Prince George, cutting it off and diverting the water northwards will lead to higher water temperatures and lower water levels in the Fraser. Every degree above 50 degrees Fahrenheit that the water temperature is increased eight per cent of the fish will probably be killed, according to a fisheries biologist at Prince George.

The worst possibility, however, is that the dam will create a waterway that would allow transfer of fish diseases and parasites between the Pacific and Arctic watersheds. "Every study on the subject has commented on the possible introduction of the northern pike into the Fraser River system," says the McGregor Action Group.

The pike is host to a tapeworm parasite which feeds on young salmon and causes visible cysts which reduces their commercial value considerably. Although it is considered unlikely, "it is a matter of major concern.

"Who is willing to accept responsibility for this potential danger to B.C.'s third largest industry?"

The dam would eliminate a potential chinook run that would be worth up to $4.3 million a year, flood about 55,000 acres of productive timber (20 per cent of Northwood Timber Co.'s production) and destroy 95 per cent of the wildlife habitat in the McGregor basin.

On the positive side, there will be flood control benefits and an extra 292,000 kilowatts of power generated at the Bennett Dam as a result of the diversion, although the first-mentioned is questioned by environmental groups.

A joint federal-provincial study 13 years in the making estimates the chances for a repeat of the disastrous 1894 flood on the Fraser — much worse than 1948 — to be one in five in the next 60 years, unless the McGregor diversion project is built.

Ottawa is already embarked on a $60 million flood control project in the Fraser delta south of Vancouver, and the McGregor Dam itself has a predicted lifespan of only 60 years. What happens after that to flood control benefits? Does Hydro build another dam then?

The arguments against the dam, and the adverse effects it would have on the salmon fishery of the Fraser, the sawmills in the Prince George area, outweigh the few positive benefits. Don't build the McGregor Dam.

EDITOR'S NOTEBOOK

The Canadian Hero's Ambivalent Position

While our American cousins revel in the cult of the anti-hero, Canadians still search for real heroes. We yearn for this rare species of maple leaf fauna, although we never affix the label of certified hero until other nations have added their blessings.

So it went with Margaret Trudeau's escapades last week. It was front page news here that Margaret's association with the Rolling Stones was front page news in Britain and the United States. If they were interested, then Margaret must really be a jet-setter, and we all could bask in the vicarious titillation knowing that one of our fairest Canadians could hang out with Richard Avedon and Yasmin Aly Khan.

Our hero yearnings are especially evident in the world of entertainment. The Canadian Radio, Television and Telecommunications Commission rules Canadian-born Percy Faith qualifies as a certified domestic so we hear a lot of his music, although other than brief appearances here over the last 20 years the closest Faith approached Canadian content was when he played a syrupy rendition of Canadian Sunset.

Commentators never fail to inform us that Glenn Ford, Walter Pidgeon and Donald Sutherland are Canadian-born. Yet in the latter case we never heard about Sutherland until he went on anti-Vietnam protests with Jane Fonda, or more lately played Casanova in Federico Fellini's film extravaganza.

A real, live Canadian hero is recognized by the famous foreigners with whom he associates.

It is almost as if our institutions and individual psyches consciously work against the creation of national icons. Every time the dear old CBC produces anybody approximating a Stanley Burke, Patrick Watson or Laurier Lapierre, he is sooner or later squelched by the corporation.

The search for heroines stopped after Laura Secord.

As a small boy at the end of the Second World War I can remember reading reams of books on intrepid British and American airman. In fact I was sure that Squadron Leader Bigglesworth and Douglas Bader won the Battle of Britain singlehandedly.

Then one day I came across a tattered comic book chronicling the adventures of George (Buzz) Beurling, the Canadian ace who shot down more enemy aircraft than any other allied fighter pilot. With utter fascination I read how Beurling's duck hunting experience at home had trained his eye to aim those eight .50 calibre machine guns in a Spitfire's wings.

The comic book was in black and white, of course, while lesser American airmen received full color treatment in their publications. Three years later I read a little squib in the newspaper's back pages that Beurling had been killed while ferrying war material to Israel in 1948.

With the infinite sadness of an eight-year-old who has lost his first hero, I couldn't understand why Beurling received such small space. It was my first lesson about Canadian heroes.

Later as a student I was forced to write long essays on Sir John A. MacDonald, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Lord Durham's report. None of the school's reference books referred to Sir John's penchant for taking bribes from the CPR, or his letters in which he said Jews would make good pedlars in the Northwest. We didn't even know he had a booze problem.

Saluting the Union Jack each morning it never occurred to us to question Laurier's obsession with royalty or pomp and circumstance either.

Even at the university level information on William Lyon McKenzie, Louis-Joseph Papineau, Louis Riel and Gabriel Dumont was scant. Most textbooks dismissed them as wild-eyed revolutionaries or republicans, as if the latter term explained everything.

Louis Riel is a tragic example of the Canadian hero complex. More than one hundred years after he was hung in Regina, we put his face on a stamp. Operas and plays about his life soon followed. In a very real sense today, Riel is a central Canadian character, a hero to many and still a rogue to some.

He represents the central dichotomy about Canadian heroes. Considering the price he paid for this ambivalent position it's little wonder the country is as unsure of itself as it is of its heroes.—G.R.O.

Abbott's New Combines Act

OTTAWA — Recognition that Canada's legislation on combines and competition has been inadequate is of long-standing and the work of replacing it has been prolonged and at times instensely controversial.

One fact alone tells a great deal about the weakness of the old legislation. There has been a section in the Combines Investigation Act since 1923 making it an indictable offence to take part in a merger that has operated or is likely to operate to the detriment of the public. There has never been a conviction after a full trial under that clause which was not reversed on appeal. Before the Second World War there was only one prosecution. It led to an acquital. After the war there were a handful. Once a company pleaded guilty.

This pattern, and other obvious weaknesses in the old act which is now in the process of being replaced, were so striking that they led to a widespread popular suspicion that the Liberal party was so business-oriented in its upper reaches that it did not want a competition act which would offend the most powerful of the nation's tycoons. That is not a proveable suspicion but the legislation, left uncorrected over so many years, is probably a factor of some importance in popular cynicism towards government.

By the middle 1960s the Liberal government of the day, under the late Lester Pearson, was taking a less complacent approach. In 1966 it asked the Economic Council of Canada to study the problem and report proposals for improvement. The Trudeau government is more closely associated with efforts to improve competition in Canada than any other but the winds of change had started to blow well before the present prime minister came to power.

Ron Basford tried and failed — will Tony Abbott succeed?

Left Suspicion

The original draft bill produced under Ron Basford when he was minister of consumer and corporate affairs proposed powers for a new tribunal which the business community found so arbitrary that it produced an outraged debate and led to breaking into two parts the project of providing the country with new and hopefully improved means of ensuring an appropriate mix between desirable competition and economic efficiency. The first part of this has been law for two years now and the second has just been put forward by the new minister, Tony Abbott.

Abbott has both highly developed political instincts and a business background. It is no great secret that he was critical of the draft legislation that he found when he took over the portfolio and has worked hard on revising it. New in the cabinet, it is understandable that he wants a successful piece of legislation to mark his debut.

Corporate lawyers will spend weeks now trying to decide whether he has produced one or not and on their side consumer advocates will be carrying out the same exercise. In fact, no one is likely to know for sure for quite a while because time and experience are the only real tests of legislation that is complex and which seeks to marry competing goals. The principles on which Abbott is proceeding seem to be sound enough if the legislation in fact creates the machinery and detailed provisions to carry them out.

It is obvious that not all mergers of business firms are in the public interest or are even intended to improve economic efficiency. The country clearly needs legislation that will give it the power to stop or disrupt mergers that are clearly against the public interest, that have for instance no purpose except the destruction of competition. On the other hand, industry in this country serves a relatively small domestic market compared to the local markets which American, British, Japanese and European firms enjoy. This creates a strong case for permitting the sort of merger between firms that is necessary in order to create a productive unit of sufficient size to be able to compete with imports that have their true base in the size of the domestic market in the country where they originate.

Abbott has clearly tried hard to create a workable balance between these two opposing considerations. One of the devices which he has favored is attractive. This is the scheme to use tariff policy more actively as an instrument of competition policy. Under this, a merger which significantly reduced competition within Canada would be permitted in order to achieve a more efficient scale of operations. The lost element of competition might then be restored, at least in part, by a tariff reduction making the alternative of imported products more attractive.

In theory, this is an attractive approach. In practice, there is no immediate way to judge it because to do that it will be necessary to know how it has actually been applied over a period of time.

This same consideration applies to other aspects of the new legislation. Abbott believes that only a small number of company mergers will actually be reviewed by the new competition board and, since it is obvious that many can have no significant effect on competition, that is desirable. But time is necessary before any one will be certain whether the mechanisms in the legislation are producing the right mix or not, ensuring that mergers which are meaningful in terms of public interest are examined while those that are irrelevant are left alone.

Bryce Commission

There is one gaping hole in the legislative package and, since the subject matter of it is still under study, that is unavoidable. The hole involves concentration of economic power in ways that do not directly affect competition. Typically, this occurs through the development of the conglomerate which pulls one corporate roof widely together under diverse companies.

This problem is currently in the hands of Robert Bryce, a former deputy finance minister, and his colleagues on the royal commission corporate power. There has been some criticism of the commission. It arose partly because Bryce himself, while a very highly respected public servant, has been so closely associated with many of the policies that have influenced the existing economic structure of Canada. Far more than tax policies and government decisions go into this but his appointment was, nonetheless, much like asking a man to review the outcome of his own work. Criticism also arose when one of Bryce's colleagues seemed not to be divorcing himself completely from his own business interests. That committee will, however, in due course report on this aspect of the Canadian commercial and industrial scene and any further legislation will await that development.

Square People

Man, it's got to be the greatest! The idea, even if not yet a complete reality. A square tomato! It does sort of smack of a flat earth concept with four corners yet!

But if the genetic engineers, as depicted in your editorial, (What This Country Needs . . ., March 12) have really succeeded in "tinkering" up an indispensible fruit-vegetable, namely, the tomato, to a tougher-skinned, squared product, well then luck is still on the side of our increasing gastronomic needs.

Hats off to wonderful science: Never demean science. Especially genetic scientists, bless their hard plastic hearts, ever defying the impossibilities that are constantly being flogged flat by some of the cruellest pieties centuries deep with glib promises of certain heavenly rewards only for the ductile meek on earth.

Now. A humble suggestion to the dogged manipulators of laboratory crucibles: How about getting on and hasten the reconstruction of a now physically vulnerable species, us, as it is becoming increasingly more untenable for successful adherence to a round planet, soon unable to accommodate the rapidly crowding ambulatory numbers?

In others words, to recreate a more squarish dimension and then toughen it up some, say, like adding another backbone right down the middle of the now rather defenceless belly part with little dabs of "ethylene gas" for a nice, riper finish to the whole.

So on with it, lads and lassies in the genetic labs. And then keep us posted on your progress toward some instantaneous and agreeable evolution before we have to vanish regrettably via H-cloud, totally, prematurely, permanently. — M. Anderson, 640 Dallas Road.

Tell Your MLA

In mid-January a resolution was introduced in our legislature regarding the Trident nuclear submarine base, and regarding proliferation of nuclear weapons generally. As of today (March 14), this resolution has not received debate. It would be very useful at this time for citizens in our province to write to their MLAs urging that a debate be scheduled soon, encouraging them to give their support to the resolution. It reads as follows:

"That this house expresses grave concern to the Canadian government at the continued construction and proliferation of nuclear missile bases in neighboring countries and other nations around the world, such as the Trident Base in Bangor, Washington, and any Russian equivalent.

"And that it is of continuing concern that not only the number of bases are increasing along with strike capability but the number of nations including those not necessarily regarded as major powers are now entering into this build-up.

"And this house supports those people or organizations genuinely concerned with the proliferation of nuclear arms and bases threatening world peace."

This resolution, if passed, would be a small but useful step in the struggle towards nuclear disarmament. It is appropriate to remember the saying "the surest way for evil to triumph in the world is for men to do nothing." Elected representatives do heed letters from voters, so let's make our views known. — Rose Ann Jackson, 326 Beckwith Avenue.

Keep AIB

We have read with consternation that the Trudeau government intends to do away with the AIB this year. Although the board has been much criticized mainly by the labor establishment and leaves much to be desired from an administrative point of view, it has been effective.

In our opinion the greed complex of the strongly organized groups in our society has not been cured, only barely held in check by the AIB. Even yet, some unions in B.C. are demanding 30 per cent increases and some contracts presently in force have clauses calling for renegotiation when controls end. It is certain if the AIB is disbanded this year the demands from these well-organized groups will break out again with renewed fury. When you consider that the 1971 dollar is now worth 64 cents, what lies ahead with the removal of controls?

We agree that corporation profits are too low to stimulate new industry and jobs. However, with the removal of controls the unions will siphon off any surpluses which corporations might, under normal conditions, have for reinvestment and job creation.

Sooner or later we will have to get down to living within our means or face the complete destruction of our currency. Printing paper money is hardly a solution for low productivity and incompetence. Surely the prime minister knows that most Canadians either have no pension or have non-indexed pensions and that the majority of them will ultimately be financially destroyed if inflation breaks out violently again, as it most surely will, with the end of the AIB. — Jack and Muriel Armstrong, (Help End Inflation Association), 4353 Northridge Crescent.

Seal Saviors

There has been a great hoax perpetrated upon people both at home and abroad concerning the Newfoundland seal hunt. Recently, a great hue and cry has been sent up against the seal hunt by so-called conservationists who slander Newfoundland and mislead well-intentioned supporters with vicious propaganda. They ignore the fact that the hunt is strictly regulated by the federal government.

The Canadian Wildlife Federation has said: "The hunt this year will not only allow the seal population to be maintained but it will permit the increase in population to continue." The federation also added: "We believe this year's hunt will be humane . . ."

These "seal saviors" portray the sealers as blood thirsty slaughterers, rather than the honest, hard-working men they are. The seal hunt forms a vital part of a fisherman's income, providing the only alternative to welfare in the winter season. If the seals flourish unchecked, their intake of fish will cut into the catch taken by Newfoundland fishermen. The time has come to accept the seal hunt as an industry such as the beef or pork industry. The hunt must no longer be used as a means of money-grubbing publicity seekers.

For those wishing a more complete explanation of the seal hunt a booklet has been prepared by the information branch of the Department of Fisheries and Marine Services. — Susanne M. Ryan, St. John's, Newfoundland.

Jobless Students Rampage

By SARI GILERT

ROME — One evening two weeks ago the near silence of a Roman mid-winter night was pierced by the sound of war-whoops, rythmic clapping and the tramp of booted feet.

"It's those university students again," complainedan annoyed diner in a downtown restaurant. "You'd think they'd have gotten it out of their systems by now and be back at their books."

"But what's the use of studying if there aren't any jobs?'- asked one of the young demonstrators, whose face was covered with an Italian version of war paint.

Most observers agree that the current recession plus years of inadequate educational planning are the major underlying causes of the first nationwide outbreak of student protests here in almost a decade.

Italy's current education problems, in part similar to 'those of other European countries, reflect the gradual success of a population that has been trying to force its way into the ranks of what was originally a minuscule middle class. Their route has been through the university.

Today there are 70,000 university graduates a year here in comparison with 23,000 in 1962 and 56,000 in 1970-71. Almost 300,000 students get high school diplomas each year, compared to only 76,000 in the early '50s, and 77 per cent of that number now go on to college.

Despite these advances, chaos on the campus, poorly prepared teachers and inadequate equipment in the classroom cast doubt on the overall quality of education. The last school reform bill dates back to 1962 and a university reform package promised in 1969 has failed to materialize.

"But the real problem," says a well-known Socialist educational expert, "is that we can't expect students to study seriously when the current economic situation has made their diplomas worthless."

According to estimates by the ministry of labor, nearly two-thirds of Italy's 1.2 million officially unemployed are young people looking for their first jobs. At least 100,000 of these are college graduates or laureati, and another 425,000 have diplomas from a vast variety of secondary schools.

The unexpected nationwide protests erupted in early February when rumors circulated that Italy's Christian Democratic minister of education was planning to restore the limitations on university enrolment that were swept away by the student movement of 1968.

The concept of an "open university" where anyone with a high school certificate can attend was considered a major victory in a country where, despite the advances of recent years, only 13 per cent of the school children passed through socio-economic barriers to get a college education.

In 1968, protests against the almost despotic power of many senior professors — Italy's academic barons — also won students the right to individually planned study programs that, together with unlimited enrolment, appear to have backfired. Now there are too many students, trained in the wrong areas, seeking too few jobs.

Indeed, although much of the current uproar has been cloaked in abstract political rhetoric, the present malaise of Italy's 900,000 university students seems to have more mundane origins.

In Palermo, Sicily, where an exam to fill 2,300 teaching positions recently drew 80,000 applicants, only two out of every 10 college graduates now find jobs.

Italy's minister of labor, Tina Anselmi, recently proposed a new law that would use incentives to businesses to stimulate employment for some 300,000 young people between the ages of 15 and 28. At best, the new government plan is considered an inadequate stop-gap measure for a socially-explosive problem that is expected to seriously worsen in the next 3 or 4 years.

Critics of the present system complain that the government's failure to plan ahead has produced a dangerous imbalance. Sociologist Gianni Statera says: "Ours has always been a country where there has been no contact between the world of labor and the educational system." Thus, in recent years the universities have turned out thousands of doctors, lawyers, sociologists, teachers and philosophers, who cannot be absorbed by the market while more specialized jobs that often do not require a college education remain vacant:

Stefanis, a 28-year-old unemployed Roman woman with a college degree in philosophy, has a master's degree in economics from an American university and has done graduate work here in that field in the hope of turning herself into a more "saleable" product.

"It might have helped if we'd had some vocational advice during high school," she says, adding that her three best friends from high school, all college graduates, are now seeking out their livings as a baby sitter, a pornography writer and a part-time cosmetics saleswoman.

The revival of the student movement has led to sit-ins and occupations in most of Italy's major universities and to violent clashes in Rome between Communists and leftist extremists who say they are fed up with all the traditional parties. It has brought to light an unsuspected degree of frustration and hate among Italy's largely leftist students.

"But how can we blame them?" says historian Leo Valiani. "The extreme difficulty of finding a job leads many to lose their desire to study and work. The weakness of our democratic state leads to demogogy, and the absence of real opportunities is creating in our youth an authentic and hardly imaginary sense of desperation."

'I Want To work'

By DON MACLEAN

(A letter to the editor of The Sun)

Those among you who are steadily employed don't really want to hear someone whining and moaning, do you? You want to remain smug and self-righteous about working hard and earning one's place in the productive element of society. Well, listen, I want to be smug. I want to be self-righteous. I want to be a winner. I want to work! Are you listening, Mr. Vander Zalm?

I gained a variety of experience in a variety of jobs from the age of 16 to 27, then I went back to university, acquired a degree which I quickly discovered was relatively useless, so, responding to the seduction of the government's teacher intern program and the assurance of work when I finished, I went back again. Partially because of my years of experience with young people, partially because of my age and partially because I'm clever and have a head on my shoulders, I was very successful in the program and received the merited praise.

Big deal! I managed to acquire a one-year teaching job because some tired fellow needed a year off. The principal assured me that I would be kept on because there was a new school opening up. Great! I signed on. When the end of the year came I discovered that the promised job had been given to someone's wife as part of a "deal" between a principal and the superintendent. Sour grapes? Of course it is! Naive? Of course I am!

Apparently I am not alone in my naivete. Many hard-working education students are working away while visions of sugar plums dance in their heads. There are hundreds of people about to graduate from universities in this province. My God, they can't all go to Dawson Creek. There are numerous well-paid professors in the universities (got to keep them off the streets) slogging away, turning out teachers faster than Datsun puts together station wagons and nobody seems to be monitoring the number needed, Datsuns or teachers.

If it's difficult to get into law, medicine, engineering, social work, etc. because demand has something to do with supply, why on earth is the education faculty wide open to everyone who manages to scrape through high school? Having had many discussions with intimate friends at the university who are presently on faculty, my guess is that this tight club resists any appreciable cutback in enrolment because, obviously, they might be out on the street.

But I'm out on the street, for want of better words, Mr. Vander Zalm, and I don't like it any more than those overpaid, underworked university professors.

So I looked to the newspaper for an idea of the needs of the community, having given up totally on my Manpower counsellor. It appeared that skilled tradesmen were needed all over the place. Great! I'll retrain . . . Not a chance! Manpower tells me retraining is for people without skills so they have a chance in the job market.

I am 35, married, with two small children and two large mortgages, so I continue to do part-time work. I substitute teach for half the regular daily pay, I direct plays occassionally for little theatre groups, I drive 10-to-12-hour shifts in taxis when I'm forced to and I also shovel garden dirt for my friends.

Oh, yes, I collect unemployment insurance (for the last eight months), except for every dollar I make over $30 they take a dollar off my cheque. (Great incentive to work.)

Speaking with young people, I strongly advise them to get as much education as possible (keep them off the streets, then they're not competing with me for the jobs) and also try to make as many political connections as they can, then they will probably end up with one of the $19,000-a-year positions in the provincial government as an "executive assistant." Sour grapes? Of course it is!

Levesque Takes on Big Legislative Program

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

Canadians have become accustomed to hearing, at the opening of Parliament or of a provincial legislature, a glowing but vague account of the legislative program to come. The rhetoric is sonorous and the cadences stately; but the outline is blurred by airy generalities that hint at many good things but lack any sharp points that might pin a government down or snag its sleeve if it encounters a need for elbow room to back off.

From this pattern the speech presented by Premier Rene Levesque at the opening of the Quebec National Assembly marks a distinct departure. Mr. Levesque's speech was heavy with specifics and substance. He took on, with few of the hedges and escape clauses common to such occasions, a commitment to an exceedingly heavy program, a program both broad and far-reaching.

He promised: a program to affirm the primacy of the French language in Quebec, a goal that is straightforward in principle but complex and challenging in practice; public automobile insurance; a new and significantly different labor code; an overhaul of the whole education system; a new approach to control of pollution and protection of the environment, including the safeguarding of agricultural land; legislation dealing with election campaign financing and an end to patronage; an overhaul of municipal financial structure and establishment of regional governments.

Mr. Levesque also committed the Parti Quebecois government to provide free dental care, and free milk, to school children; free drugs to the old; transportation for the handicapped.

He pledged new legislation for the protection of children, a program to identify and remedy the problems that confront women in Quebec society, a policy to give Quebec control of its asbestos industry.

And, to deal with "the most fundamental of all questions, namely that posed about Quebec's political evolution," he declared the government's intent to submit to the Assembly a bill to provide for the holding of a referendum and to undertake a study leading to precise formulation of the new relationship to be sought with the rest of Canada.

It is an ambitious program: some of it essential and long overdue, much of it admirable, most of it, perhaps, desirable. To pick it apart piece by piece, and say yes to this and no to that, to establish priorities, to arrive at trade-offs between the desirable and the possible, is not up to us but to the people of Quebec.

What Canadians from other provinces can observe is that the Quebec government is taking on, in one broad commitment, a number of challenges each one of which, if experience in other jurisdictions can be taken as a rough guide, may take some hard chewing before it is digested. Establishment of regional government; public automobile insurance; barriers to the sale of farmland for development; a stronger labor code; establishment of control of a powerful, foreign-based resource industry. As the premiers of other provinces in Canada, and the leaders of many independent countries, could testify, such change encounters the opposition of entrenched interests, some perhaps more legitimate than others, but most of them stubborn and ornery. Farmers, to pick one modest example, like the high prices that only a developer can afford to offer for their land.

It is not the prerogative of Canadians outside Quebec to tell the government of that province what it should do or not do within the jurisdiction of its own sovereignty as a member of the Canadian federal system, although we do have a responsibility to make it clear we would be leery of a new form of association, like a monetary or customs union, that kept intact most of the complications, and the capacity to step on one another's toes, of interdependence, and just got rid of all the tools we now have for resolving those difficulties or at least keeping them manageable.

But, that being said, Canadians who care about this country, of which Quebec is a part, can in all sincerity wish the Quebec government the greatest possible success with the heavy load of social and economic change and reform it has taken on.

We reserve the right, however, to turn the PQ government's successes in this field against the raison d'etre of the PQ as a party. If the problems can be dealt with, and they can, within the federal system, why break that system up?

In his speech Mr. Levesque said, of the coming language legislation, it should "reflect the self-confidence and mature tolerance of a nation which knows now that it has no need to create a ghetto to affirm itself and to expand." Mr. Levesque may be known for his way of wielding words like a rapier. But those are two-edged.

I Heard the Pump Call My Name

Between the noise of traffic on Metchosin and Happy Valley Roads, the roar of a motor revving-up at Bickerdike's Garage and the general scuffle of people going and coming at Jenkin's Store, I knew it wasn't going to be easy — but I had to give it a try.

The sun had been set about half-an-hour but, despite a gathering overcast, there was still a faint glimmer of light in the west — just the right conditions, I thought, to get Doug Wood's Screech Owls going.

Doug, a resident of Metchosin, had told me about the owls of Metchosin Corners earlier that day, and since I hadn't heard a Screech Owl since calling one up at Miracle Beach last May, I figured the time had come for another test of my owl-calling technique.

After pulling the car onto the parking lot at the Community Hall, I stepped out to let my ears get tuned-in for listening — but with little enthusiasm. Aside from it being a still, windless evening, all those human noises suggested a poor night for hearing owls. A mental inventory of the commotion found two more components — several barking dogs and the disconcerting bup, bup, bup, bup of a pump of some sort.

But I persisted, and when a lull finally came in what now seemed like a general din, I let go in my best Screechowlese. Pursing my lips and sucking in a good long breath, I exhaled it through my lips in short, evenly spaced spurts. The result was a fair imitation of a Screech Owl's spring "song," which can best be described as a series of whos which gradually slow as they continue — much in the tempo of a bouncing ball slowing down.

Unfortunately, before my solo was half finished, a noisy truck wheeled up to the corner, stopped, revved its motor a couple of times, and roared off towards Victoria. The result was that I had to give up hooting and settle back for a few minutes to allow my ear drums to recover.

Soon I was ready for another try. This time, a little preliminary lip-wetting and jaw exercising seemed appropriate. They just might add that seductive quality to my calls that would give success to my efforts. But even this was to no avail. I got no answer — at least none that I could finger as coming from a Screech Owl. The cars, people, motors — and that pump — continued to plague me.

A change of venue seemed called for. Down the road a bit, away from the corner and its noises, closer to St. Mary's Church, might be a good place to try.

Well, my third presentation of the patented Hosford owl-call was allowed to proceed to its conclusion without interruption. Better still, I got several seconds of comparative quiet, to listen for a reply. None was forthcoming.

Maybe the churchyard itself would be a good place to try? Owls had been heard there too — and I'd be a little farther from the road noises.

By the time I decided to try the churchyard, it had become completely dark, so, hoping no one would spot me and call out the constabulary, I moved back from the road and settled under a large oak whose great bole towered into the darkness above me.

I was ready for another try. But first, a check of the noise situation. Sure enough, they were all still there but now much muted by distance and foliage. Even the pump had died away. For the first time the omens seemed right for a successful communication with those denizens of the night—the Screech Owls.

So, once more licking my lips, I gave out with what had to be the finest imitation of a Screech Owl that the Screech Owl of Metchosin had ever heard. As I finished, the thought crossed my mind that if Doug Wood was close by and heard my efforts, even he'd be fooled.

Well, suffice to say, all I got for my efforts was more dogs, more people, more cars, more motors and, yes, that pump. It had started up again.

But wait! While I hadn't heard the pump when I came into the yard, I could sure hear it now; it seemed a lot closer. Before I could get a good line on it, the sound stopped. But almost immediately it started again: bup, bup, bup, bup, it went, gradually slowing down — like a bouncing ball — before it stopped again.

Then it came again; this time from the darkness directly overhead and now — freed of the distortions of distance — it came through as the clear, mellow, measured whu, whu, whu, whu, of a Screech Owl. He'd been listening to me and answering me all along but we just hadn't been able to make connections through the noises of Metchosin Corners.

Queen Charlottes' Oil Potential High

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Robertson, president of Skaist Mines Ltd., says the company's oil shale leases on Graham Island in the Queen Charlotte Islands have a reserve potential of 50,000 barrels a day for 100 years.

In a letter to shareholders, Robertson says a study by consulting engineers suggests production costs of $6 a barrel, compared with the current world oil price of $11 to $12 a barrel.

"These are numbers which are indicative of potential and which must remain largely in the area of guesstimates until the detailed engineering and research work is completed over the next several years," the letter says.

Robertson says the company has written assurance from the petroleum resources branch of the provincial ministry of mines that Skaist will receive exploration permits for 60,000 acres.

Ten thousand acres involve 217 mineral claims on oil shales about 12 miles northwest of Queen Charlotte City. Robertson says he hopes to have the permits in time to resume exploration this summer.

Another Distinguished Dillingham Project

Kihei Akahi on Maui, Hawaii vs. other Maui condominiums: same sky, sand, ocean, tradewinds, sunsets, mountains...

The difference is Dillingham.

Dillingham, builder-developer of the world famous Ala Moana Shopping Center on Oahu, Hawaii and one of the most respected and reputable companies in the Pacific brings you Kihei Akahi. A superb condominium consisting of studios, one- and two-bedroom units that live up to their name. Kihei Akahi means Number One in Kihei, Maui's Gold Coast. Ready for immediate occupancy. Realistic financing.*

Two freshwater swimming pools, a tennis court and, of course, the magnificent sandy beach is just a short stroll from your door.

KIHEI AKAHI. FEE SIMPLE FROM $38,700.

And if Waikiki and its excitement, things to do and night life are your thing, look into Keoni Ana Condominium, another distinguished Dillingham project. One- and two-bedroom units designed for carefree and secure living. Ready for immediate occupancy.

TAX TIPS '77

Q. When filing tax returns, are commercial reserves and elevator deductions to be reported as income for the year they were paid out to a farmer?

A. Normally these will have been reported in the year when credited to his account, and would therefore not be included in his income when actually received.

Q. My husband has a farm tractor that he uses, not to earn his living, but to do his farming and a little logging and collecting of firewood. Can he claim any depreciation on this farm tractor?

A. If your husband is a farmer and is reporting income from farming or logging he would be able to claim depreciation on the tractor. However, if he has no income from farming or logging, and the tractor is not being used for the purpose of producing income, he would be unable to claim any depreciation.

Q. My husband and I jointly own a farm. The income has always been declared on my husband's income tax return and the cost of running the business has been claimed on my husband's return, also. As the farm is owned by both of us, can I claim the cost of operation on my income tax return?

A. The taxability of any income derived from this particular source, where there is a joint ownership, depends entirely on which of the partners supplied the money that originally purchased the property or business. In most cases, it comes entirely from the husband. Unless the wife has money of her own that she earns herself, or she had money that was left to her to invest in the farm, it is always considered for tax purposes to be the husband's income.

Q. I am a farmer and employ a laborer for approximately 20 days each autumn. Must I make deduction for Canada Pension Plan and Unemployment Insurance?

A. No. But if you employ this laborer for 25 days and pay him $250 or more in cash, you must deduct for the whole period of employment.

Q. I purchased a combine and gave grain and livestock as part payment. How would I handle this transaction on my income tax return?

A. You should report the dollar value of the grain and livestock as income. Capital cost allowance could be claimed on the full cost of the combine.

Q. The farm I operate is about 10 miles from town. During the summer months we live on the farm, then move to town for the winter months. Can I claim on my income tax, expenses such as taxes and repairs on our townhouse, for the portion of the year during which we live in it?

A. Expenses paid for the maintenance of your townhouse are considered to be of a personal nature and are therefore not allowable as a deduction from income.

C-Z to Sell Wood Chips To Sweden

VANCOUVER (CP) — Crown Zellerbach Canada has reached agreement with a Swedish company for the sale of 14,000 tons of wood chips from the company's Interior lumber and plywood mills.

The company said in a news release the agreement was reached March 12 with Eric Ullnerg, managing director of the pulp industry's Wood Import Ltd., of Stockholm, which represents a number of Swedish pulp and paper manufacturers.

Crown Zellerbach said the first of some 500 rail cars of chips began moving to the coast this week from its operations in Kelowna, Lumby and Armstrong.

Tom Rust, company president, said the sale provides a first step toward reducing the serious oversupply of wood chips which has plagued the industry for the past two years.

He said the company hopes the sale will lead to future exports.

$850 Million Deficit For Japan

TOKYO (Reuter) — Japan's overall balance of payments slumped to a $850-million deficit in January, but finance ministry officials say the downturn had been expected because of seasonal factors.

Preliminary figures showed a visible trade deficit of $80 million compared to a record surplus in December of $1.65 billion. The deficit on invisible earnings such as freight and tourism increased by $74 million to $590 million.

The Manufacturers Life Insurance Company

The Workers' Compensation Board of British Columbia is seeking three highly qualified persons to fill Director positions. All positions will be located in Vancouver.

DIRECTOR/MEDICAL SERVICES

(Bulletin #77-70)

This position is open to a senior physician or surgeon.

The responsibilities of the position include providing medical interpretations, opinions and advice to the Board of Commissioners with respect to medical aspects of the administration of the Workers' Compensation Act and Criminal Injuries Compensation Act. In addition, the Director of Medical Services directs a large medical staff, including the medical supervision of a modern rehabilitation clinic, and advises the Executive Director and departments of the Board on matters of a medical nature.

Applicants should be graduates of a medical school of recognized standing with a degree of Doctor of Medicine and with certification as a specialist by the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Canada. Applicants with equivalent qualifications and experience will be considered.

Salary will be in the range of $40-$43,000.

DIRECTOR/EMPLOYEE RELATIONS

(Bulletin #77-71)

Reporting to the Executive Director, the Director of Employee Relations is responsible for planning, developing and managing a department providing a full range of Personnel/Industrial Relations support services for an organization of more than 1300 employees.

This is a position in which labour relations and contract negotiations are emphasized but also includes the development and administration of effective salary administration, personnel administration, job evaluation and staff training and development programmes.

The successful applicant preferably will have graduated with a degree in Industrial Relations and will have well developed negotiating and inter-personal skills and proven experience as a Personnel/Industrial Relations generalist.

Salary will be in the range of $28-$32,000.

DIRECTOR/REHABILITATION SERVICES AND CLAIMS

(Bulletin #77-72)

The Rehabilitation Services and Claims Department of the Board is responsible for the administration of the Workers' Compensation Act involving the processing and adjudication of all compensation claims; the administration of vocational rehabilitation assistance programmes and the determination of eligibility for, and processing of, awards involving permanent disability.

This is a challenging senior management position. The Director is responsible for the effective implementation and administration of the compensation claims, vocational rehabilitation and disability awards programmes; for the assessment and evaluation of the effectiveness of the programmes; for the planning, organization, management and direction of the activities of claims and rehabilitation staffs throughout the province. Liaising with other departments and with both industry and labour organizations is included.

The successful applicant must have strong administrative ability with extensive experience in business, government, or other agencies; proven leadership and organizational abilities and be familiar with the techniques for evaluating the success of existing programmes and assessing the possibilities for improvement.

Salary will be in the range of $30-34,000.

Applications, including a detailed curriculum vitae and quoting bulletin number should be addressed before April 15, 1977 to:

Indians Aim To Stop Pipe

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — The Dene Indians of the Northwest Territories have begun an intensive public information campaign directed at stopping the proposed Mackenzie Valley natural gas pipeline.

"There's going to be increasing pressure on the government to delay that pipeline," Dene leader George Erasmus said in an interview Friday. "We're going south."

Erasmus, Northwest Territories Indian Brotherhood president, said rallies, lectures, and lobbying of politicians are planned in the south to turn public feeling against the pipeline.

"The Dene feel they have a good chance of stopping the pipeline and buying time," he added.

The Dene are the estimated 12,000 Indian people of the Mackenzie Valley. Most are status Indians represented by the brotherhood.

They say they do not want the pipeline built at least until their land claims are settled and possibly not at all. Their claim, submitted to Ottawa last fall, calls for creation of a Dene government in the resource-rich valley.

Meanwhile, Canada's one million Metis and non-status Indians are getting ready to launch continuing research into major land claims.

Harry Daniels, president of the Native Council of Canada, the Metis' national organization, in a speech prepared for delivery today to the Yukon Association of Non-status Indians in Whitehorse, says the formal agreement on research funding has been reached with the federal government.

The agreement will fund research at the national level and by provincial Metis associations.

The NCC, according to Daniels, is going to hire a land claims research director and a number of assistants to do original research as well as to provide help for the provincial groups.

It was estimated earlier in Ottawa that $1 million would be needed in the first year for the land claims work.

Manitoba Metis are prepared now to launch intensive research into land claims in that province, a NCC official said in Ottawa Friday.

GOV'T FURNITURE BOOM ENDS

OTTAWA (FP) — The federal government's restraint program has inadvertently given Canada's office furniture industry a poke in the eye.

Faced with cabinet orders to cut spending, departments and agencies have cut their furniture purchases to a bare minimum.

In the "good old days" the department of supply and services bought anywhere from $8 to $18 million worth of new furniture annually for its 125 departmental and agency clients.

In the fiscal year that ends March 31 it has layed out just $650,000 for new desks, credenzas, bookcases, chairs and filing cabinets for bureaucrats.

In its buying heyday Ottawa took close to 10 per cent of domestic office furniture production annually.

Today, that has shrunk to practically nothing. The furniture boom ended a year ago when Treasury Board issued tough new restrictions on what bureaucrats could buy for their offices.

That coincided with a drastic cutback in the hiring of new staff, especially senior management types, to produce the furniture savings.

Ads for Diet Soft Drink Called Immoral by CAC

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canada Dry soft-drink company was accused Friday of immoral and irresponsible advertising by the Consumers Association of Canada (CAC).

The company has taken out advertisements in a numberd of Canadian newspapers telling shoppers to stock up on low-calorie ginger ale by the case "while it lasts."

The government has announced that beverages containing saccharin must be off the market after July 1 because tests have revealed a connection between cancer and consumption of large amounts of the sugar substitute.

"This looks to me like a prime example of corporate irresponsibility in the interests of making a buck," said CAC spokesman Barbara Sulzenko.

Meanwhile, the federal official who designed the research which led to the Canada-U.S. ban on saccharin set out to prove the sugar substitute was safe and an impurity created during saccharin manufacture was the cancer culprit.

Dr. Ian Munro, a health protection branch toxicologist, says two American saccharin studies done in the early 1970s — which also showed increased rates of bladder cancer in rats fed large amounts of saccharin — were discounted because the saccharin was contaminated with orthotoluenesulfonamide (OTS), a manufacturing impurity.

Munro said he set up the federal saccharin study to prove that OTS was the cause of the bladder cancer in the rats in the American studies. But OTS doses of up to five per cent of the rats' diets failed to trigger cancer.

However, the male offspring of rats fed saccharin doses equal to five per cent of their diets did develop bladder cancers and this evidence — along with the two American studies — provided evidence that couldn't be ignored, he said.

New Anti-Monopoly Law To Be Tougher—Abbott

OTTAWA (CP) — New competitive practices legislation would lower the standard of proof now needed for courts to rule that a business monopoly is illegal, says Anthony Abbott, consumer and corporate affairs minister.

Abbott said he is confident K.C. Irving Ltd., which owns all five English-language daily newspapers in New Brunswick, would be found to be an illegal monopoly if the case were considered under the proposed new rules.

He was commenting in a radio interview broadcast today on proposed amendments to the Combines Investigation Act. The amendments were tabled Wednesday in the Commons.

Abbott said a problem with controlling monopolies and mergers until now has been that criminal law required a very high standard of proof before a monopoly could be ruled illegal.

But under the proposed amendments "there wouldn't be such a high test required and I'm sure in cases like the Irving one, changes would be made and I think we would win the case if it were brought forward," Abbott said.

The Supreme Court of Canada dismissed the final appeal in the five-year-old Irving case in November, saying federal combines lawyers had failed to prove Irving ownership was harmful to the public.

The decision was seen to be landmark in combines law as it affects newspapers and was one of the chief factors that convinced the government that amendments to the law were needed, Abbott said.

In making the Supreme Court judgment, Chief Justice Bora Laskin rejected a special prosecutor's argument that complete control of New Brunswick's dailies must lead to the presumption that competition is lessened with resulting detrimental affects to the public.

He also ruled critical evidence by prosecution witnesses was insufficient, saying they spoke theoretically without any specific studies having been done to show that the Irving group threatened newspaper independence and would likely result in public detriment.

The proposed legislation would also allow companies to merge or form monopolies as long as they could show that they were operating more efficiently, and would permit consumer class actions against companies that allegedly violate combines laws.

LABOR TALKS URGED

VANCOUVER (CP) — James Rhodes, former chairman of the British Columbia Energy and Petroleum Commission, called this week for a "chips down, blood-letting" conference between industry, government and labor leaders to resolve B.C.'s endless labor-management disputes.

He told a service club the trade union movement or the B.C. Employer's Council should take the intiative in convening the conference.

"In this way, government could not be accused of forcing its will on unenthusiastic groups."

West Germany and Japan, both with "an excellent three-way rapport between government, industry and labor" are good examples for B.C. to follow, he said.

"Why has private enterprise not been prepared to launch a pilot project which would permit employees representation in the boardroom?" he asked.

"Our one small experiment in British Columbia at Kootenay Forest Products in Nelson, where employee nominees comprise two members out of a six-member board, appears to be achieving excellent results."

"At this plant, plywood productivity is among the highest in Canada and labor-management co-operation is good."

Rhodes, now a Vancouver business man, said both inflation and developing third world countries pose problems for B.C.

COWICHANS GET HELP FOR HOUSING

The Cowichan Indian Band will receive $199,600 in housing funds, Urban Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet has announced.

The funds will be used to construct eight single-family homes on the reserve to be rented to band families of low and moderate income.

Total cost of the five three-bedroom and three five-bedroom houses will be $359,000, with $160,000 coming from band funds.

The federal funds will be in the form of a capital grant of $35,900 and a long-term loan of $163,640 at an effective interest rate of about eight per cent.

Herring Season a Success

VANCOUVER (CP) — Despite a late start, the herring fishery is very successful so far this year, says Dick Crouter, director of field operations for the federal fisheries department.

Crouter said 37,000 tons of herring had been caught on the west coast of Vancouver Island, of which 13,000 were taken by seiners and 24,000 by gillnetters.

Within a few hours of the close of the season on the Strait of Georgie Thursday afternoon, 10,000 tons of herring had been caught, 6,000 by gillnetters and 4,000 by seiners.

Crouter estimates that the total goal of 80,000 tons will be met by the time the season closes in other areas in about two weeks.

So far, 2,200 tons of herring have been caught in the Queen Charlotte Islands and 1,000 tons in the Bella Bella area.

A catch of 2,000 tons is expected in the Johnstone Strait area.

The herring fishery is difficult to administer, Crouter said, because officials are trying to meet two criteria: at least 10 per cent of the weight of the catch must be herring roe; and ensuring seiners get their allotment of 65 per cent of the catch.

Roe is the prize sought by the fishermen. The fish eggs are sold in Japan as luxuries.

Crouter said the value of the roe to fishermen last year was $23 million and the export value was $65 million.

This year's profits will be even higher, he predicted.

Crouter said 11.5 per cent of the catch off the west coast of Vancouver Island was roe and about 12 per cent was roe in the Queen Charlottes. In the Strait of Georgia, roe made up 10 to 10.5 per cent of the catch.

The start of the season was delayed by winds up to 70 miles an hour, but Crouter said that since the season started March 3 conditions have been excellent. The season opening was originally scheduled on Feb. 27.

"This year the herring have been handled in a most efficient way," both by the fishermen and the packing plants, Crouter said.

Several boats have been lost but no lives have been taken, a sharp contrast to the disastrous 1975 season when 13 lives and 12 boats were lost.

B.C. Ferry Workers Certification Probed

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Labor Relations Board has begun a three-part investigation into a union struggle to represent workers at the government-owned B.C. Ferries.

The struggle stems from the government's application to bring licensed and unlicensed workers into one bargaining unit because it recently transformed the ferry system into a Crown corporation.

The B.C. Government Employees Union is opposing the application and wants to continue representing the 2,000 unlicensed workers and 500 licensed officers in two separate components.

Meanwhile, the Canadian Merchant Service Guild has applied to represent the officers, saying it has signed up more than half of them.

Peter Marshal, Government Employees Union spokesman, said Thursday his union has laid a complaint of raiding against the guild with Senator Carl Goldenberg, impartial jurisdictional umpire of the Canadian Labor Congress. The complaint is to be heard March 25 in Montreal.

Coal on Schedule

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Work on the Quintette coal field could start within two years, an official of a coal consortium said Thursday.

Dick Herman of Calgary, vice-president of Dennison Coal Ltd., told the chamber of commerce that if his firm signs a contract this year for sale of coal to Japan, the way would be cleared for establishment of a town of about 4,000 people, 1,700 of whom would be employed in the mine.

Assault Conviction

CRANBROOK (CP) — Jim Geewon, 44, was sentenced to 18 months by Mr. Justice A. A. Mackoff in British Columbia Supreme Court Friday on a charge of assault causing bodily harm in a shooting last October.

Geewon, a member of the St. Mary's Indian Band, was originally charged with attempting to murder Chief Vic Clement, 23, at the chief's reserve home eight miles north of Cranbrook.

Geewon, who was described by defence witnesses as quiet and passive, testified he was drinking and was not rational on the night of the shooting.

Woman Guilty

COQUITLAM (CP) — Dorothy Mountford, 43, was found guilty in provincial court Friday of criminal negligence causing bodily harm. The charge was laid after she struck a pedestrian here last November. A second charge of leaving the scene of an accident was dismissed for lack of evidence.

SALMON 'RANCH' PLAN IN WASH.

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — A bill to allow private "sea ranching" of salmon in Washington is headed for an uncertain future in the Senate after clearing the house with heavy opposition.

The measure, which passed 58 to 31 Friday, would allow private production of salmon, which would be released and recaptured in traps on their return migration. It would be limited to streams flowing into the ocean, but not Puget Sound.

"What disturbs me is the very companies that helped destroy our fishing resources are trying to profit from them now that we know how to rebuild them by artificial means," said representative Mary Kay Becker (Dem.—Bellingham) one of the leading opponents.

It would bring back fish traps, outlawed years ago, and result in ultimate domination of salmon fishing by industrial giants, she said.

Both sport and commercial fisheries would benefit, said representative Rick Smith Dem.—Bremerton), a sponsor of the measure, because the bill requires half the salmon to be released to be "sport" varieties such as coho and chinook.

Smith said the bill might have difficult in the Senate because of opposition of commercial fishermen.

Bugaboo Skiing Victims Named

GOLDEN (CP) — Police have identified four persons killed in two separate avalanches in southeastern British Columbia Wednesday and Thursday.

Harald Hans Neinrich Eicke, 34, Ursula Franziska Sedlmeier, 39, and Werner Friderick Scherbaum, 28, all of West Germany, died when smothered under 10 feet of snow Thursday on the Groovy Ski Run in the Bugaboo Range of the Purcell Mountains about 35 miles south of here.

Henri Jacques Cousteau, 28, of Banff, Alta., and Ottawa, died Wednesday in an avalanche near Diana Lake in the Kootenay Range, east of the logging community of Brisco.

In both cases, the victims were experts, skiing with others, and were accompanied by guides as they skied slopes reached only by helicopter.

Eight other visitors were in the fatal Thursday party, including a doctor who pronounced the three dead.

It was a relatively small slide, said Bruce Harding, tour organizer, but it piled deep in a relatively flat area of the ski run, and took 1½ hours to dig the bodies out.

Harding is general manager of Canadian Mountain Holidays of Banff, the agency which booked the visitors to the Bugaboos for helicopter skiing.

Police were still waiting a chance to fly back to the area to get statements from survivors who were at the Bugaboo Lodge, west of Spillimacheen and about 10 miles from the site of Thursday's avalanche.

Cousteau was one of another group of 11 skiers who had been flown to the Diana Lake snowfields.

Police said that "these were expert skiers; they all had beepers (Used for locating people caught in avalanches) on and everything, they were prepared for avalanches.

There was 10 to 12 feet of snow in the areas where the avalanches occurred, police said.

COURT DELAYS FERRARI GRAVE

LOS ANGELES — A Beverly Hills woman who said in her will that she wanted to be buried in her lace nightgown inside her favorite Ferrari, has been temporarily interred in a regular Texas grave until a court can rule on her unusual request.

Sandra Ilene West, who died last week at the age of 37, leaving an estate estimated at $2.5 million, wanted to be buried "next to my husband in my lace nightgown . . . in my Ferrari, with the seat slanted comfortably."

Mrs. West, the widow of Beverly Hills millionaire Ike West, aimed the instruction at her brother-in-law, Sol West of Comfort, Texas.

"If a coffin is used except other than for shipping, he is disinherited except for $10,000," she said in her will.

Margaret To Work Part-Time

NEW YOR K— People magazine says that Margaret Trudeau's next step for personal independence will be to take an apartment in New York City and begin work, on a part-time basis, as a photographer.

But she will stay in New York only part of the week, commuting to her Ottawa residence, the publication says.

The wife of Canada's prime minister earlier denied a report in the New York Post Thursday that she intended to move to Manhattan and set up shop as a photographer.

"I have no intention at all of doing that," Mrs. Trudeau told an Ottawa reporter for News-radio Ltd., an organization that serves private radio stations in Canada. She said she had no intention of moving to Manhattan but would work there occasionally.

A spokesman for People Magazine says writer Robin Leach taped a three-hour interview with Mrs. Trudeau in New York last week and he confirmed that Margaret's words about pursuing a photographic career in New York were in the tapes.

The magazine says Mrs. Trudeau disclosed her plans last Friday, the last day of what she called in the interview her "ultimate freedom trip," a headline-making jaunt that linked with the Rolling Stones in Canada and the Unted States.

Isaac Hayes Singing The Blues Over $6M

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Soul singer Isaac Hayes, whose debts may total $6 million, was unable to answer specific questions about his troubled finances Friday in federal bankruptcy court. Hayes told U.S. bankruptcy Judge Odell Horton that he does not know how he got into financial trouble but that "leeches and parasites" had taken advantage of him. Horton reacted critically to Hayes' comments. "I'm beginning to think this is being conceived as a lark."

Machine Keeps Calves' Hearts Beating

By WARREN LEARY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hopes of a $100-million program to build a device that can take over when the human heart fails is resting on the heartbeats of a small herd of calves scattered in research institutions across the U.S.

In the calves the heartbeats already are produced by an artificial heart. It's still a long distance from calf to human, but it's narrowing.

Some medical scientists long have held that the best way to replace a hopelessly damaged heart would be through a mechanical device rather than heart transplant. But so far, artificial hearts have worked only in calves, up to four months, while some transplants have done much better in human patients.

Still, after years of toil, with more than $100 million spent over the last decade and $13 million more to be spent this year, scientists are guardedly optimistic. Some believe a completely artificial heart is less than a generation away.

"I won't name any date, but I think it will be in our lifetime," says Dr. Michael DeBakey of Baylor University.

"We are making progress when you look back over the past 15 years," the noted Texas heart surgeon says. "We have a greater understanding of the problems, and we have solved some of them."

While the complete artificial heart is the longer-range prospect, a partial one that can handle some of a damaged heart's functions may be reality within five years, researchers say.

Both devices are the goal of the artificial heart program run by the National Heart and Lung Institute since 1964. But for now the emphasis is on developing a "Left ventricle assist device," or LVAD, says Dr. Peter Frommer, the institute's associate director of cardiology.

The heart is divided into two main pumping chambers called ventricles. The right ventricle pumps blood into the lungs to pick up oxygen. The left pumps the oxygenated blood through the arteries to the body.

GRAPEFRUIT ANSWER TO SACCHARIN BAN?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The grapefruit may hold the key to a dilemma now confronting millions of dieters.

Now that the U.S. Food and Drug Administration has porposed saccharin — a favorite sugar substitute — be banned because it caused bladder cancer in rats, dieters must find another low-calorie way to satisfy their sweet tooth.

The agriculture department said Thursday a low-calorie synthetic sweetener made from natural substances in grapefruit peels may fill the bill. The substance is called Neo DHC, one of a group of citrus-derived sweeteners discovered in the early 1960's by department scientists.

Neo DHC is made from a bitter substance called naringin, found in grapefruit rind. It has no more calories than saccharin and is three times as sweet, a department official said.

Officials said an ounce of Neo DHC is 1,500 times sweeter than an ounce of sugar.

Tight Tanker Rules Introduced by U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States proposed today setting up a $200-million fund to compensate victims of oil spills and promised to develop improved oil tanker safety regulations within 60 days.

Transportation Secretary Brock Adams said the new regulations will require that all new oil tankers that weigh more than 20,000 deadweight tons be equipped with double-bottomed hulls to lessen the chances of an oil spill caused by a grounding.

Adams also said his department will require that all existing oil tankers of more than 20,-000 deadweight tons using U.S. ports be equipped with segregated ballast tanks.

The double-hull provision represents a significant change in policy. The U.S. Coast Guard has for years insisted that the benefits of this type of construction are outweighed by the extra cost and other factors.

The coast guard has supported segregated ballast tanks, which are designed to prevent the dumping of oil residue at the end of a voyage. This dumping occurs because most current oil tankers pump seawater into their oil tanks after they have delivered their oil, thereby mixing oil left in the tanks with the sea water, in order to get the necessary ballast for the trip back home. Once the return trip is completed, the sea water and oil mixture is pumped out.

Some 85 per cent of the oil spill from marine transport sources comes from what Adams called operational discharges of vessels in international waters.

"These chronic discharges frequently pass unnoticed, but they may result in more permanent environmental damage than that caused by the relatively infrequent large spills that occur near our coasts," he said.

An oil industry spokesman says new federal regulations on the construction of oil tankers would cost consumers millions of dollars and would not prevent future oil spills.

Don Cornett, a spokesman for Exxon in Boston to testify on oil spills before the Council on State Governments, said the industry "strongly" opposes requiring segregated ballast on existing tankers or new tankers of less than 70,000 tons.

He said segregated ballast on all tankers, as suggested by Adams, would cost anywhere from $500,000 to $7 million per ship.

"Exxon estimates that confining this system to new tankers in excess of 70,000 tons alone would cost consumers $1 million daily," he said. "Adding to all tankers would increase costs to industry and consumers substantially more."

The industry also opposes installing double bottoms on new tankers on "technical grounds," he said. "To illustrate their limited value, let me add that double bottoms would not have prevented the Argo Merchant breakup, in the opinion of the Coast Guard."

The Liberian-registered Argo Merchant dumped 7.6 million gallons into the Atlantic last December after running aground off the Massachusetts coast.

Cornett said the industry also would resist installation of inert gas systems designed to reduce the risk of explosion on vessels lighter than 100,000 deadweight tons.

"We do not support installing this system on smaller tankers because of its very high cost and our experience shows they are not necessary," he said. He said the industry estimates the inert gas systems would cost up to $2 million for some ships.

Dairyland's Sales Total $126 Million

CHILLIWACK (CP) — Dairyland, British Columbia's largest dairy organization, had increased sales of $11 million last year and increased production of 8.6 million pounds, but provincial per capita consumption of fresh milk dropped slightly.

The farmer-owned organization had sales of $126 million of which $66.7 million was returned in cash payments to producers and a further $1.2 million returned in deferred payments.

Neil Gray, Dairyland general manager, said production last year of milk for the fresh and processing markets totalled 547 million pounds or approximately 60 per cent of the 903 million pounds produced in B.C.

Gray said consumption in B.C. dropped last year to 230.6 pounds per capita, down .5 pounds from 1975.

He said the decrease was attributed to price increases in 1975 that were reflected in a consumer resistance in 1976.

Consumer acceptance of the four-litre plastic pouch containers has been good and sales of these made up 50 per cent of Dairyland's fresh market, Gray said.

Murderer Identified

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Police say they know who killed labor leader Al Bramlet — they have a witness under heavy guard — but must find corroborative evidence to make the charges stick before the killers can be arrested.

Bramlet vanished Feb. 24. His body was found in the desert Thursday.

"We probably will file kidnapping and murder charges next week," District Attorney Geroge Holt said Friday.

He said the case will not be presented to the grand jury. The suspects will be charged directly and brought before a preliminary hearing.

Outside Help For Overeaters

MERIDEN, Conn. (AP — "Don't take a friend to dinner tonight" might well be the motto of Overeaters Anonymous (OA).

Most compulsive eaters can't hope to win the fight against fat without outside help, the group preaches.

"Any time during the day, if you feel like eating a cupcake, call any of us," the leader of the local chapter tells new members. "Just say, 'Talk to me awhile, I'm having trouble, I want to eat.' By the time you're done talking, you don't feel hungry any more."

If the message sounds like advice from an Alcoholics Anonymous meeting, it's no coincidence. The nationwide eaters group uses the same 12 steps that AA has found so successful in repulsing demon rum.

Each member gets a sponsor, a veteran of the weight war who discusses the newcomer's daily menu and is available around the clock for moral support.

Abstinence, religious faith and anonymity play important roles in the program, says Miss A., a nurse who doesn't want her name publicized."

The crucial trial for each novice is going 21 days without between-meal snacks except diet soda, tea or coffee.

"The first 21 days are the worst," said Miss A. "But once you abstain for 21 days, you're not hungry in between meals any more."

The group also suggests alternative dieting plans, low and no carbohydrate menus. A physician's plan may be substituted.

12-Year Wait Ends For Killer's Family

husband's emotional stability."

She said she knew nothing about the murders until her husband was arrested Aug. 7, 1964, following a two-year RCMP investigation. Her husband, who attempted suicide in jail while awaiting trial, was committed to Riverview Sept. 21, 1965.

During his confinement, as a maximum security patient, the children — aged 13, 17 and 15 — visited him once a month on Sunday.

Mrs. Ingram said she told the children about the murders "and after the initial shock they came to accept that their father was sick at the time."

"They now relate to him very positively in a health father-child relationship," the affidavit says. "We have managed very successfully to deal with this severe strain on our family life."

After the family savings were spent, Mrs. Ingram lived on welfare for several years before going to work as a $400-a-month typist in the North Vancouver social welfare office.

By 1971, Ingram had graduated from maximum security status to unsupervised grounds privileges and four-hour visits with the family on weekends.

With the money he earned at Riverview, as much as $1,500 a month from the sale of his copper artwork, they were able to keep the North Vancouver home they bought in 1963.

Mrs. Ingram and the children lived there until early 1976 when they moved to Edmonton where Ingram was working as a baker following the second of his two escapes from Riverview.

At a B.C. Supreme Court hearing in November, at which Macintosh applied for Ingram's release, the lawyer said his client's first escape in May, 1974, was an attempt to demonstrate his ability to readjust to society. The patient voluntarily returned to custody four days later.

The escape followed five appearances before Riverview's psychiatric review board by Ingram and three recommendations from the board for his release.

In Edmonton, Ingram resumed his trade as baker and became a bakery foreman, says the affidavit which was presented to the Supreme Court hearing.

Shortly after Ingram spent Christmas, 1975, with his wife and children in North Vancouver, they sold their home and moved to Edmonton.

One of their children, who had remained temporarily in Vancouver, went to Edmonton to visit the family and he returned by plane, enabling RCMP to trace the escaped patient and take him back to Riverview last April after eight months of freedom.

"In Edmonton, my husband was very successful in his job and with his daily living," Mrs. Ingram wrote. "For the first time in years, we had a normal life and my husband was happy being able to once again provide us with full financial and moral support."

A spokesman for the forensic unit said Ingram will be released as soon as outside accommodation can be found.

Vietnam Bodies Returned

HANOI (AP) — The government turned over 12 black steel caskets containing the remains of U.S. pilots killed in the Vietnam war to President Carters' special commission Friday.

A commission member said, meanwhile, that some U.S. servicemen who deserted may be living voluntarily in Vietnam.

The five-member team leaves today for Vientiane, Laos, to seek an accounting of Americans missing in that Indochina country.

Commission Chairman Leonard Woodcock, president of the United Auto Workers, told a news conference that the Hanoi government also agreed to set up machinery to determine the fate of Americans still listed as missing in action in the Vietnam war.

Another member of the commission, Democratic Representative G. V. Montgomery of Mississippi, said that after 15 months of investigating and the visit to Hanoi, "I personally believe no American is still being held captive."

St. Ann's Slated For Culture

Historic St. Ann's Academyu will eventually be turned into a cultural centre, Parks and Recreational Minister Sam Bawlf said Friday.

He disclosed his plans for the building at the unveiling of a plaque at the academy honoring Modeste Demers, first Roman Catholic Bishop of Vancouver Island.

The structure dating from 1871 and which includes a beautiful old chapel, was purchased by the former NDP government and is currently being used as a government office building.

Bawlf at the ceremony recalled the important part St. Ann' sAcademy has played in the life of the Victoria community.

He said the building will be used again as a cultural and spiritual centre as soon as there is no longer need for the office space.

Labor Ducks Vote . . . For Now

Times London Bureau

LONDON — Britain's ruling Labor government this weekend faces the technical chance of defeat on a confidence motion next Wednesday that could plunge the country into a general election, possibly on Thursday April 21.

Conservative leader Margaret Thatcher submitted to the House of Commons a motion of "no confidence" in the minority government after a night in the Commons of what the political editor of The Times called "pathos or tragic-comedy."

A bitter debate on government plans to cut public spending ended with a vote in which the government refused to take part and which the opposition therefore won by 293-0. Government avoidance of the vote was based on a realistic judgment that the Labor side would have lost anyway, because Tories who want bigger spending cuts would have combined with left-wing Labor MPs who want no cuts at all.

But on Wednesday, the day the government has made available for the no-confidence debate, government survival fears will bring all Labor MPs back into the fold. Even so, the government could lose because it just fails to have more than all opposition parties comibned in the 635-seat House of Commons.

No Illusions for PLC In Anti-Trident Fight

By AB KENT
Times Staff

It's a David versus Goliath situation.

Goliath, is this case, represents nuclear weaponry.

David Jackman, 30, a member of the PLC, tends to shrug off portrayals of either the organization or himself as giant-killers.

But he makes it clear he and the PLC will continue to make a strong effort to slay Goliath, represented by the Trident nuclear submarine complex at Bangor, Washington.

He has no illusions that tilting at the Bangor missile base will by itself stop the project or change the U.S. first-strike weapon policy.

He believes his commitment — along with other members of the community — to oppose nuclear proliferation, war and other forms of social waste and violence brings its own reward.

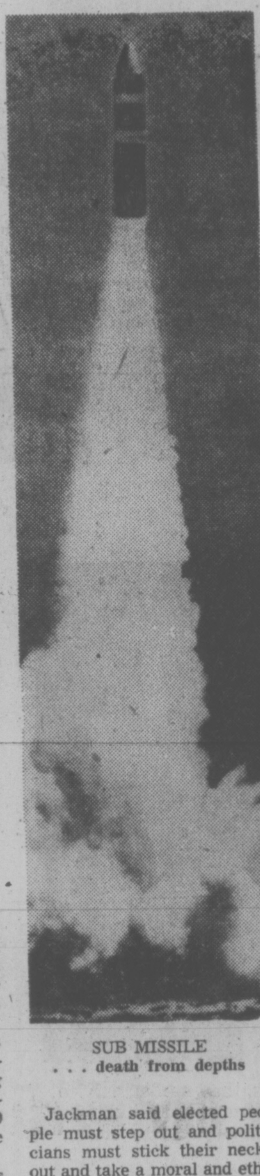
Pacific Lifers are realistic enough to recognize their non-violent stance will have little direct effect on the American military colossus — or the equally abhorrent Soviet nuclear machine.

"Trident is a symptom and there is no way Pacific Life Community can stop it," Jackman said.

But if the PLC can inspire others to support its protest, on both sides of the border and across the Pacific, then eventually policies can change and help make the world a safer place, its members feel.

A major achievement this year has been PLC's campaign against Trident among members of the B.C. legislature, where 35 of the 50 members canvassed to date agree with the protest.

Recently PLC members took part in a national campaign in Ottawa, seeking MP support for a nuclear-free Pacific.



SUB MISSILE
. . . death from depths

Jackman said elected people must step out and politicians must stick their necks out and take a moral and ethical stand.

"We don't expect everyone to go out cutting fences with us at Bangor, but I do expect them to reassess things," he says.

The Pacific Life Community is an informal organization of people on both sides of the Canada-U.S. border dedicated to non-violence.

Jackman came to British Columbia looking for a self-supporting existence in the so-called counter-culture, but failed to find it.

He became involved with PLC soon after its formation in late 1974, with the return to North America of pacifist Jim Douglass, a theologian, and his wife Shelley, from Hawaii.

While there, Douglass was involved in an anti-war demonstration at Hickam air force base and was eager to sustain the campaign.

At a meeting of about a dozen interested people on the mainland it was decided to combine in one "community" of spirit, politically active force with inner constructive energy.

Ian Gibson, 26, gave up a fledgling medical practice to join the PLC last November, and finds it liberating after six hard years of study.

He agrees that if Trident is halted, it will not be due to any small group of people engaged in experimental living but through the support of many groups having similar philosophies.

"Whether we will forestall the end of the world or prevent the world from ending is a question none of us can answer. But we know we are moving in the right direction," Gibson said.

"Trident is a symbol of the utmost evil used for the utmost evil purpose. If we as a group can find it in ourselves to oppose that implacable thing, we know we can accomplish anything else."

The Trident project gives the PLC a focus that is easily identified.

But even without it, the need for non-violent solutions to problems will remain and similar techniques will continue to be explored for many years — in groups or by individuals, Gibson said.

The PLC, unlike many organizations seeking public support, does not engage in recruitment as a means of adding impact to its influence.

"It is not for us to tell them what they should do."

The amount of publicity and the attention drawn by the group to Trident is astonishing considering the PLC's numerical size.

In Victoria, about five members form the core of the group numbering 12-15 in active roles. They are all Canadians.

About 30 Victoria and Vancouver Island people are on the group's mailing list and there are other groups in Vancouver, Powell River, Bellingham, Seattle and San Francisco, totalling about 100.

DAVID JACKMAN
. . . Trident fighter

The groups usually meet monthly for informal discussion. There are no officers or group leaders, but discussion may be segregated into men's and women's groups.

Meetings are Quaker style, in that individuals are free to speak without interruption or debate.

Jackman said participants sit in a circle and speak in turn and where there is disagreement, no action is taken until there is a consensus.

Linda Green, also a physician, said these talks are considered "safe periods," taking place without confrontation.

Jackman describes the community as a non-violent revolutionary group, implying widespread social change emanating from individual relationships.

At Heede, which contracted to make hoisting gear for the missiles, PLC members wondered whether lying down on the railway tracks would be effective.

But they decided the best approach was to talk person-to-person with office staff and the men in the yard.

One of the Vancouver community dressed himself as Death and sprinkled symbolic ashes on the floor, which upset some of the office workers.

But Jackman said it is the simple, personal approach and discussion that is sometimes disconcerting to the other side, and even to outsiders who support anti-violence campaigns.

"You have to find the right tension in a situation. We don't want to stimulate a violent reaction, but to communicate that we are human, too," Jackson said.

Green said before going out on a demonstration members try to put themselves in the position of those they want or expect to meet, helping to foresee what may develop and avoiding an un-wanted situation.

PLC shuns subversive arts, preferring to conduct its campaigns openly, even to telling authorities beforehand exactly what they intend to do so there can be plans to deal with the action without frightening anyone.

RCMP Building Bid Premature

An application before Victoria council from a Burnaby construction form to erect two new buildings in the 2800-block Blanshard to house RCMP headquarters may be premature.

A spokesman for the federal public works department says no decision has been made yet on where the headquarters will be located.

In a letter to city council, deputy city engineer W. N. Jorgensen said Foreman Enterprises of Burnaby has taken out demolition permits to tear down buildings in the 2800 block Blanshard to make way for a new four-storey building for the RCMP divisional headquarters and a new two-storey building for the sub-division.

The first project would cost $1¼ million, the second $700,000.

But the DPW spokesman said tenders for the sub-division headquarters, presently located at 999 Fort, are still being evaluated and, in any event call for leasing existing office space, not a new building.

Seven bids were received, three from Foreman Enterprise and one each from Hawarth Investments Ltd., Roanne Properties Ltd., Michael and Williams, and Point Properties Ltd.

A condition of the tender is the RCMP must be able to move into the new quarters within five months of the announcement of the winning bid.

Car Clinic Just for Women

A car repair clinic for women only will be held in the evening Tuesday and Thursday at Metro Honda Ltd., 2151 Blanshard.

Admission is free but tickets must be obtained in advance by phoning 384-5312.

The program includes training films and instruction on how to do simple repairs.

There will be no classroom lectures. Both sessions involve demonstrations using various vehicles.

The program is sponsored by the Automotive Retailers Association. The Tuesday program deals with starting the car and keeping it running, the exhaust and suspension system, cooling, brakes, wheels and tires.

The Thursday program deals with understanding a work order at a repair shop.

Statistically, 88's a Bad Year

. . . And March Is Bad Month

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

There are 15 people in the Capital district over 100 years old, more local people died last year at age 88 than at any other age and premature deaths meant 8,781 "work years" were lost.

These are among voluminous statistics on the life, death and health of the 228,815 people from Sooke to the Gulf Islands in 1976, compiled by Dr. Allan Arneil, regional health officer.

There's a lot of information on people dying, 2,321 or them in the district last year of whom 1,250 were male.

"More men than women die each year," Arneil explains. "That this should happen each year is explained by the fact that more boys are born than girls and women live longer than men."

Average age at death was 75. For women it was 77 and for men 73. Diseases of the heart and blood vessels were the commonest cause, claiming 1,177 or just over half. Cancer was second at 538 and accidents third at 177.

People in their 80s formed the largest age group dying with the peak year being 88. Except for the first year of life, where the death rate was 14.8 per 1,000 live births, mortality remains very low (especially among females) until the poulation reaches into the 40s. Oldest death last year was a woman 105.

Graphs show that whatever the cause, March is the peak month for deaths. Of 45 deaths last year blamed on flu, 32 were last March, with elderly people the victims.

A chart shows the vast majority of cancer victims are over 70 years old. People 90 to 96 formed the largest age group of cancer victims with females in the majority. Next came people in their 80s, with males in the majority.

A table on the 177 accidental deaths lists 44 of them from falls, 37 from poisonings, 37 from motor vehicles, 12 from firearms, eight by hanging, six by drowning, five involving boats, five in fires, five "struck by objects" and 16 "other."

Most of the fatal falls involve old people. Asked about poisonings, Arniel said they would include drug overdoses and these can be divided into four groups — suicides, people who accidentally took too much of an illegal drug for kicks, people who accidentally took too much of a prescription drug and people who were poisoned by someone else, although he knows of none in the last group.

Drug overdoses by people in their 30s to 50s are not likely to be accidents, he said. In his report he says probably 15 to 20 per cent of "accidental' deaths are actually suicides but this can only be a guess.

Under a graph which shows 20 of the road fatalities last year, more than half in the district, involved males 15 to 24, Arneil's cryptic comment is: "The reason why young men pays so much more for insurance is all too obvious."

Birth rate in the Capital district last year was 10.5 per 1,000 of population in contrast to the provincial average of 14.4 for the year before. Rate of death was 10.3 per 1,000 where the provincial average was 7.7 in 1975 but Arneil says both comparisons can be misleading.

With 16 per cent of people in the Capital district over age 65, in contrast to a provincial average of nine per cent, "there is an obvious physiological explanation of our lower births . . . similarly more old people than young people die."

He calculates the loss of "productive" work years by premature death by subtracting age at death from 65 and counting those who died under 15 at 15.

That produces a total of 8,781 productive work years lost, with deaths from accidents the biggest factor at 3,499 lost years.

Many of the accidents were preventable, he says. "Truly in preventative medicine we should be interested."

Private Eye Calls in Max in Missing Man Mystery

How on earth can someone just disappear?

That's what Jack Moxam wants to know.

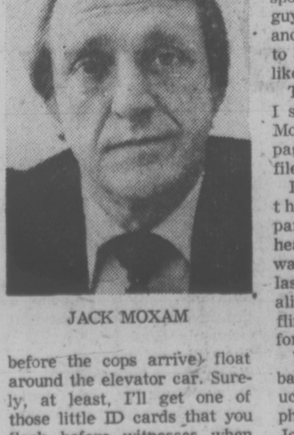
Now you'd think that Moxam would be the one with all the answers. After all, he's been chasing disappearing people around Canada for 23 years.

That's right. Moxam's a private eye. He had his own firm in Edmonton for some time and for the last year has been Vancouver Island manager of World Investigation Services (which also has branches in Vancouver, Winnipeg and Toronto).

It's obvious he knows the ropes. But there's this one job, see, that's got him in the corner. Quite frankly, he's baffled.

So what does he do? He calls me in on the case!

Feeling very much like Joe Mannix, I ride the elevator up to the sixth floor of the Sayward Building on Douglas Street. Visions of me out tracking the suspects (catching them red-handed seconds before the cops arrive) float around the elevator car. Surely, at least, I'll get one of those little ID cards that you flash before witnesses when you flip open your jacket in a very official way.



JACK MOXAM

But no. What he has in mind for me, Moxam says as he leans earnestly across his desk, is perhaps a column about the vanishing Brian Guberman. He hopes I'll use a photograph so someone might spot it, say "Ah, isn't that the guy who lives next door?" and get straight on the phone to Jack at 382-8358. Something like that.

Though somewhat deflated, I sit and listen fascinated as Moxam flicks through the pages of the thick Guberman file.

It was back in June of 1974 that Brian Guberman's parents in Winnipeg last heard from their son. And it was in April, 1975, that he was last reported as being seen alive. What makes it so baffling is there seems no reason for him to disappear.

Well educated (he has a bachelor of arts degree in education, majoring in philosophy), Brian taught at Hugh John McDonald School in Winnipeg before going to Edmonton to work for a couple of years with Big Sisters, a government-funded group helping wayward girls. During those two years his parents received regular letters which gave them no indication he was upset or thinking of going away anywhere.

Then suddenly, nothing. Silence.

The Gubermans checked with Brian's sister in Edmonton who told them he'd quit and gone to B.C. Their inquiries on the coast led them to a man named Paul Rattray, who Moxam says is leader of the Hare Krishna movement in Vancouver.

Rattray identified a photo of Brian and said in a letter to the Gubermann (signed in his Hare Krishna name):

"He has been a visitor to our temple but not a member and has since gone travelling in his van to other parts of the country."

That was April, 1975, and it's the last anyone has seen of Brian Guberman or his yellow and black 1964 Volkswagen van (Alberta plates ET 3366).

If he is still alive today, Brian will be 30.

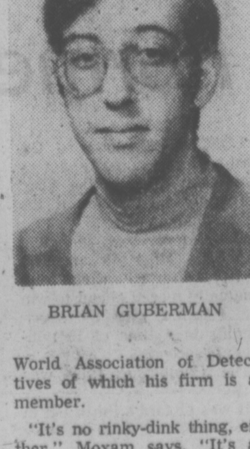
'So you' can see he's no runaway kid," says Moxam, who was put on the case by the Gubermans in March, 1976.

"We've contacted every corner in the country, the motor vehicle branches in each province to try to trace the van, and the Canadian Penitentiary Service," he explains. "Nothing! And, because he's listed as a missing person with the RCMP they've established he has not applied for work everywhere nor did he file a tax return for 1975-76."

Both the RCMP and Moxam have checked out a Hare Krishna retreat in Bridesville not far from Osoyoos with no results. The sect has about 80 temples scattered throughout North America so, if Guberman had chosen to go that route, he could conceivably be in one of those.

"But then his van registration expired in March, 1975," Moxam points out. "It has not been renewed anywhere and if he'd sold it we would be able to trace it. But it has disappeared, too."

The distraught Gubermans have offered a $750 reward for any information that leads to the locating of their son, and Moxam has contacted the World Association of Detectives of which his firm is a member.



BRIAN GUBERMAN

"It's no rinky-dink thing, either," Moxam says. "It's a really good network and we're putting a bulletin in their newsletter so if Guberman shows up in any other country they'll have a record of his Canadian passport number." (There is no record of your departure from Canada, just a record of when you re-enter).

But he can't help being puzzled over this one.

"Over the years, I've tracked down hundreds of kids and they all seem to have patterns or reasons for running away," he explains. "But this guy has no reasons. He just seems to have melted.

"It's not beyond reason that he's still living somewhere and that old truck's lying in the bush. But everyone uses his numbers nowadays for welfare, hospitals, unemployment, everything. And there has been no use of Guberman's numbers.

"This is definitely the most baffling case I've run into in 23 years," Moxam admits. "Normally, you get a whisper. But this time there's nothing.

Sun and Sand Is Great But Don't Bet Brewers

One week's work after two weeks in the sand and sun: And hey, that desert isn't half bad as a resort area as colleague Gorde Hunter has been saying all along . . . So the advice was well taken . . . or . . . let's see now . . . wasn't it just last Saturday that it was 86 in the shade, the California Angels and Milwaukee Brewers of the American Baseball League were cavorting in the sun . . . and with a hot dog in one hand a can of suds in the other, it just made the scene complete. And a private note: don't wager on the Brewers this season. Two fly balls were dropped and another lost completely in the sun . . . But those Angels, watch out! With Don Baylor, Joe Rudi, Nolan Ryan, Bobby Bonds, to drop just a few names . . . well, the only question might be: will their pitching be good enough over the long haul?

It was grapefruit league time in a western home of the cirtus fruit — 20 pounds for a dollar if you pick your own or if you happen to play golf, sometimes they throw in the fruit with the green fees. It's there for the picking . . . And speaking of golf, there's a price for every budget and maybe better priced than most people realize . . . And just over the hill, too, was Bill Prior's old baseball and fishing buddy, Herm Reich and his avocado ranch . . . And heavens, adorning the wall of the den was a news story about the famed Island Four-Q Club, Duff McCaghey, George Gunniss, et al, and their Qualicum fishing prowess . . . Oh, boy it's a small world, isn't it?

Alex McKeachie was looking great in retirement, Wilf Pelland had the best tan . . . Wil Wilson hadn't changed a bit . . . Jim Grant and wife Ann soon will be back on the way to their April Point summer home . . . Ted Maitland, the former ballplayer, wasn't about to miss the Palm Springs opener . . . and, according to rumor (make that fact), Sam Swetnam may be a better race handicapper than a golfer now that he has opted for the deep south and the occasional junket down the pike to Santa Anita. . . .

Then, Monday morning, stark reality. It wasn't even light and it was snowing on th south slope of Mount Tolmie . . . but the sportsmen's dinner was on the evening agenda, so all wasn't lost . . . The award winners were well received as they should be and it must be said that the committee must have had an extremely difficult time separating one star from the other in the final vote . . . The starting field in all categories was a classy lot . . . Vic Rapp, the B.C. Lions' new head coach was a welcome late addition and appears to be blessed with a wry sense of humor . . . He may need it . . . and he said what many others have been thinking that Victoria's Dave Cutler is one of the finest place kickers in football today and Victoria should be proud of him.

Later, Rapp wasn't about to give away any trade secrets as how he would lift the Lions out of the pit . . . but then this is only spring and obviously all will out in a few months . . . And, of course, the windup of the curling season is at hand with the police people here . . . and a well disciplined lot they are too, even the quipster who was heard to say when Norm Gilbertson of Saskatoon defeated Sonny Hirtle of New Brunswick . . . "Well, Saskatchewan certainly got over a big Hirtle, didn't it?" . . . Which is perhaps why honorary bonspiel chairman Glen Harper of Duncan was shipped back to the Mixed championships at Halifax for the duration . . . And it was a great plan, too, reserving all the front-row seats for the players' wives and friends . . . Because why come all this way if you can't watch!

John Best, new manager of Vancouver Whitecaps of the North American Soccer League, was in town, too, and sees a big jump upwards for the 'Caps this season. Two reasons are two new additions. Goalkeeper Graham Boseley of Derby County and defender Peter Simpson of Arsenal have signed with the Whitecaps . . . and Best is also looking for the best from two Victorians, Brian Robinson, who turned professional last season, and Bob Bolitho, a member of Canada's representative team . . . And best of all, Best has cut some ticket prices . . . and that idea has been well received . . . and the 'Caps will meet the Victoria All-Stars here March 26 in the annual CFAX Victoria Cup match with proceeds to go to the Lions Easter Seal campaign and the Lower Island Juvenile Soccer Association on a 75-25 basis.

It's a worthy cause and a sneak preview of the Whitecaps, who just might be meeting English League First Division championship contender, Ipswich, in an exhibition game at Vancouver this summer . . . Stay tuned . . . And then, in the post, maybe the best line penned in regard to the Canucks this season, a publicity release, stating: "A month ago, the Pacific Coliseum was on the verge of being declared a disaster area . . . today it's being referred to as Caesare's Palace" . . . G'nite all.

Let's Hear It for Kelly

KEN KIRZINGER
. . . Oak Bay spark

VANCOUVER — Depth is a great asset on a team for basketball coach. Foresight may be even more useful at times. When they go together, Bingo!

And when coach Don Horwood of the Oak Bay Bays looked down his bench Friday at the B.C. High School boys' basketball tournament for a replacement for star forward Ken Kirziner, little did he realize what a remarkable decision he was going to make.

With Kirzinger having four fouls and the Bays engaged in a life-and-death struggle with Kelowna Owls, Horwood called on rookie Kelly Dukeshire to take over. This was early in the third quarter.

And take over is just what Dukeshire did.

The six-foot, five-inch forward came off the bench to dominate the boards and neutralize Kelowna's big man, six-foot, eight-inch Brian Mayzes. And when the quarter ended, Bays were on top 54-43, on their way to a 73-55 victory over the Owls and a berth in the tournament final tonight against Princess Margaret Lions of Surrey.

Surrey gained the finals by downing seven-time tourney finalist Vancouver College 68-60.

They started out as if they were going to blow the Owls out of the Coliseum. But it was too easy. They went flat in the second quarter and then ran into foul trouble. The Owls came from behind a 14-point deficit to outscore the Bays 15-2 and get within a single point, 34-33, at the half.

When Kirzinger, who was to lead the Bays with 22 points for the evening, drew his fourth personal in the third quarter, things looked dark for the Bays who led by only three points at the time.

Enter Dukeshire, give him credit for 10 offensive rebounds, and the Bays were off and running again as it was Kelowna's turn to sag.

Kirzinger got 16 of his points in the first half. Craig Higgins had 18 points for the Bays while Wayne Andrews added 17.

Mayzes, a former Victorian and a goalkeeper with Coquitlam J-Hawks of the Western Canada Major Junior Lacrosse League, topped Kelowna with 21 points. Kevin Deboise scored 12.

Princess Margareet led by many as 18 points in its game before a late College rally fell short. Harj Sihota led the sharp-shooting winners with 20 points while Ian MacKinnon topped College with 14.

Nanaimo Islanders remained in contention for fifth place in the tournament with a smashing 101-77 victory over Point Grewy while guard J. C. Kootnekoff of Burnaby South Rebels took aim at the tournament scoring record of 125 points, scoring 45 to lead his team post Argyle of West Vancouver 118-67.

Kootnekoff, son of John Kootnekoff, most valuable player in the 1952 and 1954 tournaments, now has 104 points in three games, and will try for the record against Nanaimo this afternoon.

Gerry Kazanowski scored 35 points for Islanders while Mike Montgomery had 30. Nanaimo led 46-30 at the half.

In other games Mission eliminated Centennial of Coquitlam, 78-63, while Rutland defeted Dawson Creek 105-81. Mission and Rutland will determine fourth and seventh places.

The championship final of the B.C. high school boys basketball tournament will be broadcast on C-FAX (1070 and CJVI (900) starting at 9 p.m.

Gislason Near Third Title

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

Only Ken Ursuliak and his Edmonton rink stood between Roy Gislason of Winnipeg and his third consecutive Rothman's Canadian police curling championship as the final round of play began at the Victoria Curling Club this morning.

Gislason, who skipped Manitoba to championships in 1975 and 1976 Friday defeated Norm Gilbertson of Saskatoon 6-5 in a battle of the unbeaten rinks on the 10th draw of the 12-rink, round-robin competition; and with a win over Alberta this morning he will finish with a perfect record.

However, it may be easier said than done because Ursuliak, all-star skip in the Alberta Consols play downs this year, may feel he has something to atone for. He is 7-3 in this competition and hasn't been playing up to his best by his own admission.

If Alberta manages to beat Manitoba and Saskatchewan gets by Ontario (4-6), then a playoff would be necessary; and that would have started at 2 p.m.

Friday, the Gislason rink was the steadier of the two prairie foursomes.

Gilbertson took the first edge in a game that was to go down to last rock when he made a delicate tap back in the fourth for a deuce after Gislason had been forced to take a single point in the third.

Gilbertson then made a big double to escape what appeared to be serious trouble in the fifth and Gislason had to settle for one.

Gilbertson got the lead again in the sixth but in the seventh the crack showed that was to cost him deep trouble. Gilbertson couldn't get to shot rock with his last stone and Gislason drew for a pair to go in front.

Then in the eighth, disaster. Gislason was lying three when Gilbertson went down to shoot his last rock and the Saskatchewan skip appeared to have a relatively easy draw to shot rock in the back eight foot. But he either came out slightly narrow or his rock picked up a straw (he suggested "I think it picked up something") and he rubbed a covering rock allowing Gislason to steal two for a 6-3 lead.

He then bounced back by drawing through a narrow part in the ninth for his first counter and again hit the fourt-foot with his second for a deuce and headed home trailing 6-5.

Gislason cleared everything in the 10th and only had to hit Gilbertson's rock on his last stone to preserve the win.

In the ninth round earlier in the day, Manitoba defeated New Brunswick 9-3 and Saskatchewan got a scare before edging winless Newfoundland 5-4.

Alberta warmed up for today's closing test by whipping Northern Ontario 9-2 and Ontario 12-5.

B.C.'s Bob Hawkes' rink from Victoria assured itself of no worse than a third place finish (8-2) with an 8-2 triumph over Prince Edward Island and a 10-4 win over Northern Ontario. Hawkes' only defeats were at the hands of Saskatchewan 9-6, and Manitoba 8-5.

Home Girls Clear Preliminary Hurdle

SASKATOON — Victoria Home Lumber had little trouble advancing to the semi-final round of the Canadian senior women's basketball championship Friday.

The defending champions scored a 69-56 victory over Montreal in their first of two wins, and then ran roughshod over a completely outclassed Calgary squad, 95-38, in the second.

Victories gave the Jack Lusk-coached Home Lumber a sweep of the "A" side competition. They now meet Saskatchewan, represented by Saskatoon All-Stars, in semi-final action today.

Nova Scotia finished second in the "A" pool with a 62-50 victory over Montreal.

The Ontario champions, Hamilton Bobcats, topped the "B" pool with three straight wins. They took first place from Saskatchewan with a 65-48 decision after earlier defeating Manitoba 54-49. Saskatchewan (2-1) defeated Newfoundland 58-47.

Other results saw Manitoba Down Newfoundland 54-30 and Nova Scotia trim Calgary 96-62.

Hamilton will play Nova Scotia in the other semi-final with the winners of the two semi-finals meeting in the championship final tonight.

Angie Dobbie scored 14 points and Dee Freethy and Lorna McHattie each had 10 in Home's win over Montreal. In the evening game, Wendy Grant, added to Home from Vancouver BuzzBombs, paced the attack with 22 points.

Mary Coutts and Diane Morris each scored 12 while Gail Klaver of Simon Fraser, another pickup for Home, and Freethy, had 10 in the runaway win over Calgary.

Saanich midgets and Saanich peewees scored opening game wins in the Vancouver Island hockey championships Friday night.

The midgets defeated Port Alberni 9-1 at Fuller Lake with Randy Wickware scoring three goals and Marty Irvine two.

The peewees tripped Campbell River 5-3 at Pearkes Arena with Don Barber scoring three goals and Wilson Louie and Drew Ferrill getting singles.

The midgets meet Fuller Lake tonight at 8 p.m. while the peewees clash with Racquet Club at 5:15 p.m. Racquet Club was to meet Nanaimo earlier today.

Maravich Hits For 50 Again

By The Associated Press

A traffic accident left New Orleans Jazz with just seven men in uniform for Friday night's National Basketball Association game at Phoenix, but one of those on hand happened to be Pete Maravich.

"I'm so happy it's incredible," raved New Orleans coach Elgin Baylor after watching Maravich score 51 points—his third time over the 50 mark this season—to lead the Jazz to a 104-100 decision over Phoenix Suns.

Centre Otto Moore, guard James McElroy and forwards Aaron James, Bud Stallworth and Nate Williams were injured when the taxicab in which they were riding collided with another car early Friday afternoon.

All were treated at a local hospital and released, but on advice from doctors they stayed at their hotel.

In other NBA games, Chicago Bulls trimmed Kansas City Kings 114-112, Philadelphia '76ers beat Houston Rockets 124-104, Boston Celtics edged Atlanta Hawks 98-96, Seattle SuperSonics nipped Detroit Pistons 105-104, Cleveland Cavaliers beat New York Nets 101-88, Los Angeles Lakers topped Golden State Warriors 98-85 and Portland Trail Blazers routed Indiana Pacers 134-110.

Artis Gilmore poured in a career-high 42 points to give Chicago a game it had to win in its bid to overhaul Kansas City for the final playoff berth in the Western Conference.

Houston's nine-game winning streak, longest in the NBA this season, ended as the '76ers broke the game open with 18 consecutive points in the second quarter before a sellout crowd of 18,276 at Philadelphia.

Seattle climbed one game over .500 and within two games of Kansas City in that playoff scramble by holding off the Pistons.

Cleveland outscored New York 20-3 during a 6½-minute stretch of the fourth quarter to win. Jim Chones led the Cavaliers with 24 points and 12 rebounds.

Los Angeles broke away from Golden State with a 12-2 burst closing out the fourth quarter. Cazzie Russell led the Lakers with 27 points and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar added 24.

Portland scored 43 points in the fourth quarter to pull away from Indiana. Lionel Hollins was the Blazers' high scorer with 28 points.

Still Hope for Cougars

Six points down with six games to play. That's Victoria Cougars' position but coach Pat Ginnell still figures his Western Canada Hockey League charges can escape a fourth-place finish in the Western Division.

The key to the ecape, he reckons, is "to take all our remaining home games and the three games we have with Kamloops."

The Chiers are third and a Victoria sweep of its remaining games with Kamloops will put the teams on even footing.

But there are other teams to consider. Like Lethbridge Broncos, who visit Memorial Arena tonight, and New Westminster Bruins, who have two games remaining against the Cougars.

The Broncos, despite dressing only 13 skaters and two goaltenders, showed their ability to spoil things by playing New Westminster to a 5-5 tie Friday.

The Bruins were fortunate. Defenceman Miles Zaharko scored with only 18 seconds remaining and Bruin netminder Blaine Peterson on the bench in favor of an extra attacker to bring Westminster from behind.

The point meant little to the Bruins, who have clinched first place in the Western Division, but it was important for the Broncos, who still have a chance to overhaul the idle Winnipeg Monarchs for second place in the Central division.

Lethbridge is three points behind the Monarchs but has played one more game.

In the only other game, Saskatoon Blades struck for four goals in the second period of a 6-1 triumph over the hapless Regina Pats, who stretched their winless streak of games on the road to 31.

Former UBC Rower Sparks Oxford Crew

LONDON (Reuter) — Oxford scored a runaway victory over Cambridge in the 123rd university boat race on the River Thames today.

The Oxford crew, including Canadian Mike Moran, was in front after 28 seconds and gradually forged ahead to win the 4¼-mile race by seven lengths in a time of 19 minutes, 28 seconds.

The Cambridge time was 19:50.

It was Oxford's third win in four years and brought their total wins to 54.

Moran, at No. 6, won at Henley last year with the University of British Columbia eight.

Australian racing driver Max Stewart was in critical condition after suffering multiple injuries in a crash at the Calder Raceway in Melbourne today.

Stewart, who was practising for a Formula 5,000 race on Sunday, was accelerating into the back straight when his Lola collided with Vern Schuppan's Elfin.

Schuppan was not injured but rescue teams needed 20 minutes to free Stewart from his car.

SPRINTER PUTS SPEED TO WORK

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Johnny Jones, the gold medal sprinter at the Montreal Olympics, has found a practical application for his 9.1 speed.

Jones' wallet, watch and money were taken from his locker while the Longhorn track and football star was at practice. A friend, high jumper Johnny Calvin Jones, told him of the robbery and the two quickly overcame a half block lead, caught the two men and held them for police.

The two, James J. Parmentier, 18, and Dean A. Taylor, 18, were charged with theft.

25TH ANNIVERSARY

Cup Runneth Over For City's Curlers

The Silver Anniversary cup runneth over. . . .

The entry of rinks wishing to participate in the Victoria Curling Club's 25th annual men's bonspiel is so big, the 'spiel committee has been forced to enlist other facilities

With 96 rinks starting, the Quadra street club will have to use ice at Playland and the Racquet Club for draws next Thursday and Firday. All rinks, however, will play their first games Wednesday at Victoria Club.

To commemorate the 25th anniversary, "speicals" have been added to the five-event bonspiel.

That includes the bonspiel banquet next Firday. Again, with 384 rock tossers on hand, the committee has been forced to go "outside.." The dinner will be held at the daVinci Centre.

And four of the club's founders — Frank Burden, Dr. Kirby Moysey, Padre Tony Roberts and Gerry Lauder — will participate in the official tossing of the first rock to highlight the colorful ceremonies at 7 p.m. Wednesday.

Following are the opening draws for all rinks:

Crozier Back With a Bang

By The Canadian Press

Roger Crozier retired from hockey in 1975 but he's back again in fighting form.

In his second appearance as goaltender with Washington Capitals, Crozier stopped 14 shots in two periods of play to lead his team to 5-0 win over Colorado Rockies in a National Hockey Leage game Friday night.

"It felt great to get back into the thick of thing again," Crozier said. "I never doubted that I could play in the league again. It was just a matter of if I wanted to or not."

Crozier retired from the game in December, 1975, following a hitch with Buffalo Sabres. But the time span has not apparently affected his condition.

"I felt fairly sharp tonight," the 35-year-old goalie said. "When you come back after being out as long as I've been, it's more a matter of conditioning than anything else."

In the only other game Friday night, Minnesota North Stars and Cleveland Barons played to a 2-2 tie.

Ron Low relieved Crozier in the third period of the game.

"I thought two periods was enough tonight," Captials coach Tom McVie said of removing Crozier. "I didn't think he was challenging the shooters and he wasn't coming behind the net to clear the puck."

Guy Charron started the scoring for the Capitals as he grabbed a pass from Bob Sirois and put the puck past goalie Doug Favell.

Hartland Monahan scored another goal after taking the rebound of a shot by Craig Patrick. The Capitals third goal came on a power play as Patrick picked up the rebound of a Charron shot.

Jim Roberts scored on a 35-footer mid-way through the third period to give Minnesota its tie with Cleveland.

Rams Not Sure About Namath

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Los Angeles Rams still were undecided Friday as to whether they want the services of Joe Namath, the New York Jets' 33-year-old quarterback.

Namath had indicated throughout the 1976 season he would like to join the Rams. However, serious talks apparently didn't start until last week when the Rams traded first refusal rights for quarterback Ron Jaworski to Philadelphia Eagles.

Stingers Refuse To Concede First

By The Canadian Press

It seems everybody has conceded first place in the World Hockey Association Eastern Division to Quebec Nordiques except Cincinnati Stingers.

A check of the WHA schedule shows that the second-place Stingers are in control of their own destiny although they have only 10 remaining games to make up seven points on the Nordiques.

The Stingers blasted the Nordiques 7-3 Friday night at Cincinnati in the first of five games against the division leaders during the final three weeks of the schedule.

In other games, New England Whalers defeated Calgary Cowboys, 3-1, Houston Aeros dumped Phoenix Roadrunners 6-3 and Winnipeg Jets outlasted Indianapolis Racers 7-5.

Right winger Blaine Stoughton scored two goals in a game that saw the Stingers wipe out a 3-1 disadvantage following a brawl in the second period.

Cincinnati's Bryan Maxwell and Quebec's Jean Bernier started the brawl at 3:27 of the period. As soon as they were pulled apart, Stinger captain Rick Dudley and the Nordiques' Jim Dorey squared off.

"The big change in the game for us was the fight," said Cincinnati coach Terry Slater. "They started thinking and we started doing most of the playing."

Ferguson 19 Strokes Behind AGT Winner

EL PASO, Texas — Cec Ferguson of Victoria made money but not much on his latest stop on the American Golf Tour.

Ferguson finished with a 222 total in the 54-hole event which ended here Friday and that was good enough for only $25.

Ferguson was 19 strokes behind the winner, Bob Brisch, a touring professional who has his Professional Golfers Association card.

Ferguson shot 73 and 76 in his first two rounds. He will play next in a tournament at Montgomery, Ala., beginning March 30.

Braves Dumped

Port Alberni Timbermen have drawn first blood in the Vancouver Island Junior B hockey final, and they made it hurt, too.

The Timbermen whipped the defending B.C. champion Saanich Braves 6-0 Friday night at Pearkes Arena in the first game of the best-of-three final.

Second game will be played tonight at Pearkes starting at 8 p.m. with the third game, if necessary, Sunday at 2:15 p.m.

Goalkeeper Steve Phillippe was the hero of the piece for Port Alberni. He blocked 41 shots in a spectacular display before a standing-room-only crowd while his mates were establishing a 2-0 first-period lead and then pumped home four goals in the second period.

Saanich drew 51 of the 75 minutes assessed in penalties although there were no power-play goals.

Timbermen had 27 shots on Saanich goalkeeper Mike Duck.

Completing list of weekly winners in Times' Bowler-of-the Week contest are Sharon Beyer and Ettore Stefani, who topped women's tenpin and men's five-pin divisions during 21st week of 14th annual competition. Sharon bowled 224-220-164 — 608 series in Women's Major League at Mayfair Lanes while Ettore started off with eye-popping 401 game and then added efforts of 289 and 221 to finish 911 series in DaVinci League at Wilson Bowladrome.

Pros' Survival Course

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Mike McCullough, one of the longest of the longshots in a field of stars, confidently conquered the winds that destroyed the tempers of others and shot a 74 to retain a two-stroke lead Friday in the second round of the $300,000 Tournament Players golf championship.

"Just do the best you can," said McCullough, a 31-year-old former school teacher who hasn't come close to winning in five years on the tour and, until his opening 66, hadn't even led a tour event.

This time his 140 total, four under par, was one of only two sub-par scores for 36 holes over the tough Sawgrass, 714 yards of reclaimed marsh and swamp whipped by high winds.

Tom Watson, a two-time winner already this year, matched McCullough's 74 with a 41-33 and was alone in second at 142.

The course, long, tight, with tiny humpbacked greens, is being played by the PGA tour for the first time. It had the reputation of being one of the toughest in the country, and the unusual wind from the west turned it into something approaching a nightmare.

But, after tempers cooled, the players joked about it in the locker room.

"If this was an airport, it would be closed," said John Schlee.

"First time I ever withdrew with a ball in the air," said Cesar Sanudo. "I'd hit two in the water on the ninth, teed it up again, hit this big, high hook and saw it was heading for the lake and walked in with the ball still in the air."

About a dozen players either withdrew or shot such embarrassing scores they declined to sign their cards and were disqualified.

Some random scores: Johnny Miller, 77—154; Arnold Palmer, 75—153; Gary Player, 79—153; Lietzke, 75—150; Hale Irwin, 77—149; Ben Crenshaw, 79—158; Ray Floyd, 76—144.

George Knudson of Toronto had an 80 for a two-round total of 159, missing the qualifying cut for the last two rounds by three strokes.

CHAPPLE NAMED

Richard Chapple, a second-year player with the U-Vic Viking men's volleyball team, has been selected ot play for Canada's national team in the North American zone qualifying round next month in Santo Domingo.

Chapple, a Victoria resident, joins two former UVic players on the team, Greg Russell and Tom Graham. Russell, from Victoria, is studying this year at the University of Winnipeg, while Graham, a Comox resident, played for UVic until Christmas when he joined the national squad.

Chapple was instrumental in helping Vikings to a second-place finish in the Canada West University Athletic Association under coach Al Scott. UBC won the title.

The North American zone playdowns take place the third week in April and lead to the world championships.

Upset Opens Door For Alberta Rink

WINNIPEG (CP) — Paul Gowsell of Calgary won his second Canadian junior men's curling championship in three years Friday afternoon when Alberta defeated Nova Scotia 10-5 while British Columbia was upset 8-5 by Newfoundland.

Alberta and B.C. were tied with 9-1 records before the final round, and the possibility of a playoff existed until Gowsell got some unexpected help from Jeff Thomas and his St. John's foursome.

The Newfoundland rink broke a four-game losing streak to finish at 5-6 when Thomas stole two in the seventh end to lead 8-4. Skip Gary Smart of North Vancouver rolled out on his take-out attempt facing three Newfoundland shots.

Gowsell, meanwhile, stole two in the second end against Scott Saunders of Lunenburg and put the game away with four in the fourth end and three more in the sixth.

The 1978 world junior men's championship will be played in Grindelwald, Switzerland, while the next Canadian junior men's tournament will be in Charlottetown.

Bob Sigurdson and his Winnipeg rink finished third with an 8-3 record with a win over Emery Robidoux of Fredericton, dropping New Brunswick to 8-3.

Alberta's only loss in winning Pepsi-Cola trophy was in the fourth round to B.C. 5-4, when Gowsell was heavy with his last shot, allowing Smart to steal the deciding point.

B.C. won its first nine games before Sigurdson stopped Smart 5-3 with two clutch draw shots in the last end.

"Scalp tension, a sign of the times, is one cause for your hair loss," says Park Lane Trichologist to balding man. A specialist from the Park Lane Hair and Scalp Clinic will be here to advise men and women how to correct hair troubles by home treatment.

How to save and improve your hair demonstrated by expert here Mon. and Tues.

New home treatment methods for preventing baldness — and improving the appearance of the hair — will be demonstrated in Victoria this Monday and Tuesday, March 21 and 22.

This news was released here today by Park Lane Hair and Scalp Specialists. In their announcement, they named staff trichologist R. Arthur to conduct the Victoria Clinic. Mr. Arthur will personally examine hair-worried men and women from 1:00 to 8:00 p.m. Monday and Tuesday at the Red Lion Motor Inn.

Examine You Free

You incur no charge or obligation by seeing Mr. Arthur. Your only obligation is to yourself — to free your mind of worries about hair loss, dandruff, itching or other scalp disorders, by learning how to take care of your hair. If your trouble is beyond the scope of Park Lane treatment, we will frankly tell you so. But less than five per cent of the people we examine are "hopeless."

Who Can Be Helped?

We cannot help men who are slick-bald after years of gradual hair loss. But where your scalp still grows hair, we can at least improve what you have. The important thing is:— Don't wait until it's too late! Our biggest problem is to overcome the average man's initial skepticism. He's usually quite desperate by the time he nerves himself to see a Park Lane trichologist. He's "tried everything," so he starts consoling himself with one of the old superstitutions about hair: That men naturally lose their hair as they get along in years; that nothing can be done to prevent hair loss . . . and a lot of other notions that we know are not true today.

Free Scalp Examination

See Mr. Arthur in person. Learn how baldness can be avoided and hair growth encouraged. The new Park Lane method permits you to save and improve your hair in the privacy of your own home. For an examination and discussion of your hair problem, ask the desk clerk at the Red Lion Inn between 1:00 and 8:00 p.m. Monday and Tuesday for the suite number of Mr. Arthur.

Delinquent Boys Help Others Go Straight

By LAWRENCE BRICE

HAGERSVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Mike 15, took a handful of stones and smashed every window in the correctional institution's school where he lived.

It was just another link in the growing chain of delinquencies for Mike.

Nothing seemed to work for him. Inside training school he continued to run away. And once on the streets he was breaking the law. That is, until five months ago.

Mike went into a new rehabilitative program at Sprucedale School outside Hagersville, a town 28 miles southwestof Hamilton.

The program called Positive Peer Culture (PPC) is a pilot project among Ontario's training schools. Training schools and related services now are costing the province $34 million annually for the 800 juveniles in them.

For the first time, Mike wasn't able to run away. Not because of staff security, but because the other boys in his group took shifts all night staying up to watch Mike. They talked to him, won his confidence, and they showed that they cared what he did. Now Mike takes turns staying up for other new boys in the group.

Previous to PPC, Mike was completely unmanageable. At five years of age the police caught him wilfully damaging private property. At nine years, he set fire to two cars. At 11, Mike was sent by the courts to a training school. (His mother wept at the verdict).

But Mike did not stay put, for during the first year there, he ran away six times. When he graduated he went to a group home and finally at age 15 returned to his home.

By that time Mike's mother had died from a drug and alcohol problem that had afflicted her for years. His father, who had been before the courts for several minor offences, was employed as a stevedore in a major Ontario city, and he embraced the family of seven children to hold it together. Mike's older brother, who had been also in training school, now was employed.

Months later, found by police riding in a stolen car, Mike angrily returned to Sprucedale School. This spring he entered the fledgling PPC program.

Mike, good looking, shiny black hair to his shoulders, adjusted there quickly. "The other boys showed a lot of care for me," he remembers. "They don't want to see a guy go AWL (absent without leave) and screw himself up. I saw they cared the first night."

PPC contrasts with other training school programs, Mike notes. "If you have a problem or go AWL, instead of throwing the boy in detention, you talk about it in PPC," he said.

PPC is a 20 year-old creation of American Harry Vorrath and is used extensively across the U.S. with some high levels of success. According to Vorrath, PPC is "a total system for building positive youth subcultures." His idea is that youth are most strongly influenced by their peers, and a negative, delinquent boy is "turned around" by "mobilizing the peer group in a productive manner."

PPC does this by teaching the boys to care for one another. The boys discuss their own and others' problems openly in order to solve them.

Problems are identified as low self-image where a boy has little sense of self-worth, lacks consideration for himself and others, has problems with authorities, misleads others; is himself easily misled, steals, has alcohol and drug problems, is easily angered and puts on an act avoiding reality. Vorrath, in his PPC manual, terms a problem anything that "damages oneself or another person."

The 54 boys in the PPC program at Sprucedale (about two thirds of the school) meet for their 90-minute discussion five days a week. In groups of nine the boys first identify the problems they have had since the last meeting.

The success rate in some parts of the U.S. with PPC is somewhat phenomenal. The Minnesota department of corrections in 1973 reported a 50-per-cent return rate of delinquent boys to correctional institutions prior to starting the program. Three years later the return rate had dropped to 18.5 per cent.

INTRODUCING SUBARU AUTO CANADA LTD.

Subaru opens in West

Subaru Auto Canada Ltd., has been formed to introduce and market the Subaru automobile, manufactured by Fuji Heavy Industries of Japan.

Mr. Larry Barnes, an American, is Chairman of the new company. Mr. Barnes comes from Boise, Idaho, and is also Chairman of Subaru, Pacific Northwest. Other Directors are Mr. George Coleman, General Manager of Subaru Auto Canada, and Mr. Franz Pados and Mr. Garde Shaw, both of Calgary. There can be no question about the success or the acceptability of the Subaru line. In the United States it was fourth in sales amongst all imported cars in October, 1976, and its share of market is still climbing.

EXTENSIVE EXPERIENCE IN IMPORT FIELD

Mr. Coleman is in charge of Canadian operations. He has had extensive experience in the automotive industry. He was General Manager for the Import Division of one of the Big Three automotive manufacturers in Toronto and before joining Subaru was Vice-President in charge of Western Operations for one of the leading Italian imports.

PARTS AND SERVICE EMPHASIZED

An extensive Parts Department to serve the new company has been established in Richmond. A full range of Subaru parts and components will be maintained in stock at all times and to qualify for a Subaru dealership, dealers must maintain a parts inventory and be prepared to provide a high standard of service.

DEALER NETWORK ESTABLISHED

Subaru Auto Canada Ltd., is now building a dealer network throughout western Canada. Thus far fifteen dealers have been appointed — twelve in British Columbia and three in Alberta. As soon as these markets are consolidated and operating smoothly, the company will move, progressively, to Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Ontario and Quebec.

SUBARU MANUFACTURED BY FUJI

The manufacturer of the Subaru automobile is one of Japan's leading industrial corporations, Fuji Heavy Industries, manufacturer of aircraft, trains, engines, industrial equipment and buses, as well as automobiles. Fuji is Japan's largest manufacturer of buses.

The company employs 14,000 highly trained technicians in seven large plants. It is highly respected world wide for research, pioneering design and the durability of its products.

THE POLLUTION-FREE SEEC-T ENGINE

Fuji is particularly proud of its SEEC-T engine which powers the Subaru.

At 1600 cc it is the largest engine in its price category, and is extremely economical. In the United States for example, according to the demanding 1977 EPA test estimates, the manual transmission Subaru Sedans delivered 41 highway and 28 city miles per gallon (U.S.).

But not only is the SEEC-T engine economical, it burns clean because it doesn't need an expensive emission control device such as a catalytic converter or pollution pump. Road Test Magazine in the United States gave Subaru its 1976 Fresh Air Award because the SEEC-T, four cylinder, liquid cooled, horizontally opposed engine burns so clean. After picking the engine apart, piece by piece, Science and Mechanics Magazine referred to SEEC-T as "the engine of tomorrow and it's here today."

FRONT WHEEL DRIVE A MAJOR FEATURE

Subaru is also front wheel drive, a feature which has made these cars extremely popular wherever they are sold. The front wheel drive Subaru provides better traction and stability and improved handling characteristics.

SUBARU INTRODUCES FIVE MODELS

Subaru Auto Canada Ltd., will be introducing five models at the outset. The 2-door sedan with manual shift, the four door sedan with manual or automatic shift, the GF hardtop with five speed transmission, the DL station wagon, and the four-wheel drive station wagon.

THE FOUR WHEEL DRIVE WAGON

The remarkable Four Wheel Drive Wagon is one of the most popular models in the Subaru line. It is the lowest priced four wheel drive wagon available. While it has all the comfort and luxury of the deluxe station wagon, its design and engineering characteristics make it something special. For example, it changes from front wheel drive to four wheel drive by the flick of a lever at highway speeds. The Subaru Four Wheel Drive Wagon is the official car of the U.S. Ski Team.

A STAR IS BORN

— "Subaru" is the Japanese name for the Pleiades star group in the Taurus constellation. It is composed of six stars, Alcyone, Celaeno, Electra, Maia, Sterope and Taygete after the daughters of Atlas in Greek mythology. The six stars in the corporate symbol represent the six companies which merged to form Fuji Heavy Industries Ltd.

The name Subaru was chosen as the brand name and the six stars as the mark for this family of fine cars.

Japan Going Underground to Beat the Real Estate Spiral

New York Times

OSAKA — Japan is going undergound.

Faced with fume-filled streets, limited land space and skyrocketing real estate prices and earthquakes that could topple tall buildings, city officials, merchants and shoppers are building vast new subterranean cities under the streets and structures of the old ones.

Already more than 70 giant complexes honeycomb the depths of Japan's larger cities. This sprawling metropolis, Japan's second largest and its commercial hub, has five such facilities, drawing millions of shoppers, strollers and businessmen to their well-lit, climate-controlled, fountain-dotted streets that lead on, in some cases, for more than a mile.

"Japan is having an underground boom," said Seiichi Harimoto, head of his country's largest underground complex, which alone has a daytime population greater than that of Seattle and Denver combined.

Twenty hours a day here, the throngs mill through streets with names like Petit Champs Elysees. Here rain never falls. The restaurants, bars, shops, stalls, department stores and even hotels offer ample opportunities to eat, drink, sit, buy and even sleep.

And without natural daylight, time seems somehow suspended. Only from 1 a.m. to 5 a.m. are the streets closed to permit cleaning and removal of the day's 13 tons of trash. This is probably one of the world's few cities in which sewage is pumped up. But natural insulation by layers of earth holds down the heating and air-conditioning bills.

To be sure, the light is artificial. The running streams' waters flow by again every few minutes. The paddling swan family is mechanical.

The bird songs are recorded. And all stairs go up only. But the sights, sounds and smells are much more attractive to many than those along the drag, windy, vehicle-choked streets 40 feet overhead.

In Canada, underground shopping malls tend to be more like afterthoughts to large office complexes than centres of development themselves. But in Japan, these complexes have become the catalyst for other ambitious urban development efforts.

Major retailers and transportation companies here in Osaka, working with a co-operative city administration, are planning similar multisotrey arcades above ground, all linked to railway stations and bus terminals by air-conditioned glass passageways.

"And we touched it all off," said Harimoto, who heads the Umeda Underground Development Association. The name means plum field, which the area hasn't been since long before the arrival of two department stores, a bus terminal and stations serving four major railroad companies.

The buried-mall concept began sprouting in Japan about 15 years ago when Osaka city officials sought to separate pedestrians and motor vehicles. An underground crosswalk seemed natural. But costs were steep. Someone suggested allowing a few rent-paying stalls.

From that grew a $24.5 million project that covers 33,600 square yards. Monthly, 270 store owners pay from $12.07 to $18.97 per 1.2 square-yards to Umeda.

Forty-nine per cent of the company is owned by private investors. Majority interest is held by the city, which also receives increased and new taxes from the mall's property income and business assessments.

Similar but smaller versions have been tried elsewhere in Asia in a subway station in Seoul, South Korea, for instance. There are some small suburban shopping centres in Japan, and for years restaurants and shops in these crowded islands have used plots under elevated railway tracks or expressways.

But none can rival the scale of the subterranean developments opening every three or four months here, in Tokyo, Yokohama, Fukuoka and other cities. In northern Sapporo, the site of the 1972 Winter Olympics, pedestrians and shoppers by the thousands jam block after block of underground city streets, free from the ice and snow that bind surface Sapporo.

Here in Osaka, too, more than a million people file over the lighted signs in the floor or past the giant wall maps of the connecting Umeda and Hankyu Malls to buy pickles, cakes, toys, teas, meats, lizards and seaweeds, and pay for overseas trips. Hawkers banging tambourines urge passersby to try their restaurants. There's even an underground pornography shop.

San Diego's hotel bargains vanishing

ON THE GO with Jerry Hulse

SAN DIEGO — I've been out scouting the city in search of material for a new chapter for Hulse's Secret File on Little-Known Hotels and find it mildly disappointing.

They are all but nonexistent.

In two days I've discovered only one, and it does business next door in that village of coves and quaint shops, La Jolla.

It is Hotel La Valencia that overlooks the Paciffic Ocean 14 miles north of downtown San Diego. In a day of plastics and Formica-topped furniture it is an anachronism and a delight.

Rather than a hotel, it exudes the warmth of a comfortable Old World home in which every room is a surprise. Ticking away at the entrance is a grandfather clock and just outside the door, banks of fresh flowers brighten the patio.

Spanish in style, the hotel has played host to dozens of famous guests during more tha 50 years. Marion Davies described La Valencia as the place "where I find rest and comfort in its entirety" and John Gilbert spoke of it as a hotel "where one finds hospitality supreme."

Cliff perch

With 150-spick-and-span rooms, La Valencia is perched on a cliff at 1132 Prospect St., its red-tile floors gleaming spotless beneath wrought-iron chandeliers that beam their light overhead.

During winter it is a refuge for guests from blizzard-blown cities and villages throughout the United States, as well as Southern Californians who have adopted it as a second home.

Easterners arrive before Christmas and stay on until the end of April, after which the spring-summer crowds begin their annual invasion.

What sets it aside, besides its immaculate appearance, is the friendliness of the staff and the excellence of its restaurants: The Sky Room, the Whaling Bar and Grill and the Mediterranean Room and Tropical Patio.

The Sky Room is for lovers, its windows framing miles of ocean. Small and intimate, it plays to the heart, especially at night when La Jolla's lights shine along the coast.

Locals, on the other hand, prefer the Whaling Bar with its New Bedford harpoons and lanterns, which they look upon as their own private club. Attorneys, stock brokers and retired admirals meet for leisurely luncheons that continue until late afternoon. Hours go unnoticed in the dark-panelled room.

Cozy room

When days are warm, others dine beneath leafy trees outside in the patio, taking their fill of seafood, steaks and other fine offerings from the menu.

The hotel's sunken salon, which looks for all the world like someone's cozy living room, is a gathering place for guests who come to be entertained each evening, listening to soothing piano music of the sort that smacks of less hurried and hectic days.

La Valencia received its first guest in 1926. During the intervening years additional rooms have been added, as well as a heart-shaped swimming pool and a putting green.

Room rates start at $28 single and $33 double in the off-season and reach a high of $40 to $49, single or double, during summertime. In addition, suites with kitchenettes are available for $55 to $95 a day.

Convenience

For the convenience of those desiring to remain in San Diego, other choices range from the U.S. Grant and the Little America Westgate to less formal inns and hotels on man-made Harbor and Shelter Islands as well as Mission Bay.

Strolling through the lobby of the U.S. Grant, I was reminded of San Francisco's Fairmont Hotel with its marble pillars, red carpeting and antique chandeliers.

Until recent years the Grant had lost much of its former lustre. Then in the early '70s, after undergoing a thorough refurbishing, it commanded new respect.

Its rates are $17 single and $19 double, up.

Traditionally, the woolly old Grant Grill always has been a businessman's hangout during the lunch hour. Indeed, until women's libbers marched angrily through the hotel, protesting discrimination, it operated as a "men's-only-dining establishment between noon and three o'clock.

Showplace

Well, the ladies won their battle. They joined the men. They also got inside Grant's Tomb, which is another restaurant just off the lobby where photos of nudes hang from the walls and the sandwich menu offers such selections as the General's Choice, the Confederate, The Federal, The Campaigner and the Cannonball as well as The General's Sippin' Whisky at $1 a shot.

For years the U.S. Grant was San Diego's showplace. Finally it took second place beside the smart and sophisticated Little America Westgate Plaza, which the late travel writer Richard Joseph described as "one of the world's three great hotels."

Built at a cost of $100,000 a room, it is tastefully furnished with antiques from castles and chateaux, Aubusson and Beauvais tapestries. Kerman rugs from Iran, French, Oriental and Italian porcelain, Louis XV mirrors and hand-cut Baccarat crystal mirrors.

And should you stop by on a Monday, lunch in the Fontainbleau Room will include a rose for your lady and free champagne all around.

A night in such spiffy surroundings costs the guest $34 to $44 single and $39 to $49 double.

So much for the big, showy hotels.

With more than 25,000 hotel and motel rooms in San Diego, the real bargains remain to be named.

Coming to mind quickly is the Dana Inn on Mission Bay, which few would argue is one of San Diego's outstanding buys. Only a five-minute stroll from Sea World, Dana Inn's rooms are priced from $16 single to $18 to $22 double, plus the six per cent sales tax.

Close by at Pacific Beach the Surfer Motor Lodge makes waves with 52 rooms starting at $20 single and $26 double, plus tax. Although a trifle plastic inside, it rises directly on the beach, offering breathtaking views of the rolling breakers.

A personal favorite is Half Moon Inn on Shelter Island, where tapa cloth graces the walls and the gardens recall old Hawaii. As a matter of fact, the resort would fit nicely on either Maui or Kauai.

Such atmosphere is up for bid at $26 a day single and $34 double, and should you be there on a Sunday the brunch costs only $4.50, which includes all the mai tais a guest could possibly consume.

Only a few hibiscus blooms away, Shelter Island Inn does up another Hawaiian package at $19 single and $23 double. Here rooms face either the marina or San Diego's dreamy harbor.

Among San Diego's cheapies are Fabulous Inn ($17 single, $20 double) and King's Inn (17 single, $22 double), both of which do business in San Diego's Hotel Circle, which is roughly five miles north of Civic Centre.

Could staying home be any cheaper?

Before we recommend an airline, we like to fly it first. To see if they live up to their advertising promises. If the service is first class . . . even in economy. If the meals are tasty. And how things are at various international airports.

We think it's important to have this firsthand experience. And since we're the largest travel agency in town, we do a lot of travelling.

Because we enjoy it,

And because of you.

Thailand's restful resort–Pattaya

Parasailing one of many sports offered at Pattaya

By PHILIP SOUSA

PATTAYA, Thailand — More often than not, first-time visitors to this corner of the world pack too many places on their itineraries. The result is regrettable at best, exhausing and nerve-racking at worst.

Within days, palaces, people, pagodas, markets, shops and restaurants, become a blurred melange of confusing sights, sounds and smells punctured by usually traumatic dashes to and from airports and tense encounters with hotel clerks and rooms. One answer is to find a good spot in which to park yourself for a few days to catch your breath.

Pattaya, 90 miles southeast of Bangkok via the excellent Sukhumvit Highway, fits the bill and then some.

Its palm-fringed shores touched by the waters of the Gulf of Thailand — very calm waters made so by a string of dreamy and unspoiled little offshore islands made-to-order for picnicking and beachcombing — Pattaya was a quiet fishing village a mere decade ago.

Much of its previous life remains, but this country's premier seaside resort is today able and more than willing to please visitors whatever their age and pocketbook.

Scheduled air-conditioned buses make the trip from and to Bangkok several times daily, or you can make it over by rental car with or without chauffeur.

In a way, this place will remind you of the capital, for here you find superb luxury hotels, intriguing eating shops, elegant nightclubs and funky disotheques where "hostesses" seemingly outnumber patrons, stores selling everything from silk to stones, and neat Thai homes. Many Thai home owners rent rooms to thrifty visitors. Too, there are traffic jams of a sort along the main drag, a shop-lined artery that runs for a few blocks along the water's edge.

But there's a significant difference, compared to Bangkok.

Everything is on a much smaller scale; even prices are often lower than in the capital. And the pace, except perhaps in the late-night discos, is definitely slower.

Nature has lavished a good many blessings on Pattaya. There are long stretches of clean sandy beach, lush trees and countless flowers, the aforementioned offshore coral islands, a vast sea teeming with life, plus tradewinds that go a long way to relieve this country's usually warm and humid climate.

Man's contributions, at least so far, have been positive.

The road from Bangkok is one example. A very modern highway, it not only makes it possible to reach the resort in a little over two hours, but it also gives you the opportunity to at least glimpse life in rural Thailand.

Then there are the hotels, a good many of which are at par with the best to be found anywhere in the world.

Some of the package tours now available to North American travellers include a couple or more days here.

But what, you may ask, can one do if a tour otherwise to your choice gives you the standard two-day stopover in Bangkok but skips Pattaya? You can, at extra expense, arrange with your travel agent so that, while other members of your tour dash to the next stop you drop by here for a soothing rest. Rejuvenated, you rejoin your pals at another point in the itinerary.

The stars guide Singapore life

SINGAPORE (Reuter) — Whether they are used to rags or riches, millions of Asians pay each year for a glimpse of their future.

For many, a visit to the fortune-teller is a way of life. Some dread to start their day without discovering what the stars have in store.

It is common in non-communist Asia to find avid stargazers even among presidents, prime ministers and armed service chiefs as well as factory workers and farmers.

Weddings, vacation trips, moving into new homes, buying lottery tickets and family celebrations are all occasions to consult the fortune-teller.

It is believed that some heads of state consult furtune-tellers before making decisions on important legislation or other matters including the holding of elections.

All this has made fortune-telling a lucrative business with little hindrance from the law.

Singapore is the only non-Communist Asian country where fortune-telling is officially frowned upon.

It is an offence in the island republic for anyone to tell fortunes with the intention to deceive. It carries a maximum penalty of three months in jail or a fine of 500 Singapore dollars (about $200).

A number of fortune-tellers have been fined, but so far no one has been imprisoned.

One Singapore fortune-teller who was fined twice said he cannot give up his business.

"I consider my business an honest living. I do not deceive people. They come to me to read their fortunes and I pay income tax to the government."

Farm Fair

First held in Oxfordshire in 1839, the Royal Agricultural Show now takes place annually at the National Agricultural Centre, Stoneleigh, Warwickshire during the first week of July.

In 1976, 200,000 visitors attended from all over the world. France was the first overseas country to have a national pavillion in 1971. In the international area in 1977, North American, European and African pavilions are expected to display foodstuffs, machinery, veterinary products and many other national products and industries of each country.

Canadians wishing to attend the Show should write to the Royal Agricultural Society of England, Kenilworth, Warwickshire CV8 2LZ for tickets which will admit them free of charge to the showground.

Idaho still a hot potato for skiers

TRAVEL TIPS

By Stan Delaplane

SUN VALLEY, Idaho — Skiers call this "the country club of ski resorts." It's a little more middle class than it was in 1941 when Sonja Henie and Glenn Miller starred in Sun Valley Serenade. But they still tuck a blanket around you when you get in the chair lift.

And Ernest Hemingway wrote For Whom The Bell Tolls in Room 206 at the lodge.

Averell Harriman built the place in the mid-Thirties as a passenger builder for his Union Pacific Railroad. He thought the nearby town of Ketchum (pop. 2,700 — 10,000 in ski season) was not bright enough.

So he hired the legendary public relations adviser Steve Hannagan who named it Sun Valley.

Bill Janss owns Sun Valley now. Folks around here thought he needed his head examined when he put in $800,000 worth of artificial snowmaking equipment.

It paid off this year. Business is down one half, but restaurants and shops have been able to stay alive while most western ski resorts had an unparalleled disaster. No snow.

Whoooosh! That's what the lawn sprinkler snowmaker sounds like. The snow comes out in a fine mist. It's sprayed out of fire nozzles spotted on Mt. Baldy up to the 2,200-foot line. Under the boards it's like the real stuff. Light and fluffy.

"It's more durable," says Chuck Coiner who gives ski lessons.

He has some interesting teaching theories, drawn, it would seem, from Zen and transcendental meditation.

He's an Idaho potato farmer in the summer. A ski instructor in the winter. He got into it when he was a Stanford student in the sixties.

"Visualize yourself sweeping down the Warm Springs run in graceful 'S' turns. Smile! Whistle! Hum something. Pick a soothing word and keep saying it over and over to yourself."

"Like a mantra?"

"That's right. The idea is to relax. Let your body be soft and supple. Don't be tense. Just let it happen."

So we slid down into a spectacular "eggbeater."

OK, President Ford fell down, too.

Room at the Lodge will cost you $30 a day. Lift ticket, $11. Five days of group instruction, $45. My round-trip air ticket from San Francisco on Hughes Air West, $132.

Airlines fly into Twin Falls, two bus hours away.

What Sun Valley forgets to tell you is you can fly over in an eight-seater of Key Air. Tell your travel agent to book a place for you. It seems to be a local secret so he may have to look it up.

The "ski bums" on the shorts say: "Get somebody with a van. Or rent one with other people. Don't pay money for rooms.

"Drink juice in your van and eat hot cereal at the Lodge. Tip: Put the can of juice in your sleeping bag at night or it will freeze up on you."

"Take your showers in the dormitory accommodations. Nobody asks whether you have a room there.

"Everybody's welcome at night in the lodge and this is where you meet the foxy crowd. You can nurse one beer all night. Especially if you take a couple of cans of your own in your coat pocket."

Roman gold on display in London

LONDON — Priceless gold and silver treasures from the great Roman Empire go on display at the British Museum, London, in an exhibition opening in April.

"Wealth of the Roman World," one of the most important exhibitions since the successful Tutankhamun, will include loans from the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York, and the State Hermitage in Leningrad.

More than 800 exhibits, including coins, medals, cups, plate and jewelry, will be on show. The most exciting objects will include the famous Chalice of Antioch, believed by some scholars to be the cup used by Christ at the Last Supper: the silver chalice, dating back to the 4th century, was found by Arab laborers digging a well at Antioch.

Treasure discovered in a ploughed field at Water Newton in Huntingdonshire two years ago will be seen by the public for the first time. The Water Newton treasure is the earliest known hoard of Christian silver ever found. Treasure found in Cyprus is also being brought together for the first time. Objects include a great gold necklace, a solid gold marriage belt and a beautiful set of silver plates telling the story of David and Goliath.

Inoculation required

Travellers headed for Kenya must now have a valid certificate of smallpox vaccination, Dr. Peter Reynolds has announced.

Reynolds, medical health officer for the Central Vancouver Island Health Unit, said tow cases of smallpox have been reported in Kenya recently.

Routine inoculations against the disease, which was thought almost eradicated last year, have been discontinued in most countries because the risk of a reaction to the vaccine is higher than the risk of catching smallpox.

Mangoes, dancing horses abound in Guadalajara

By NEIL MORGAN

GUADALAJARA, Mexico — The romantic ballad that the white horse is dancing to is "La Bikina." It has become my favorite song after a few days around Guadalajara. But I have not seen a white horse dancing to it before. Especially not in the ballroom of the city's best hotel.

Has the tequila finally done me in?

The scene does not appear to astonish anyone else. The other guests watch attentively as they finish lunch, and say what a pretty horse it is. How nice of Hotel El Tapatio Princess to put on such a good show at lunch.

Of course it is almost four in the afternoon, but lunch is still going on, Mexican style.

There are two long tables sagging with chicken roasted in dried chili. Rounds of beef barbecued over charcoal. A turkey mole and red snapper from Veracruz, mountains of tacos and enchiladas and tostadas.

And other unrecognizable items. A hotel aide strides around with a mimeographed list of 35 items on the buffet table. Salsa Borracha translates as drunk sauce: Dark chili sauce with diced cheese, pulgue maguey (cactus sap) and green olives. It speeds up the tequila.

Margaritas

"Mas margaritas, senor?" asks the man with the pitcher. I have learned the value of a Latin shrug. I shrug and he pours. The horse dances another number.

Outside in the courtyard later I interview the horse.

His name is Don Juan, his rider tells me, and watches me to be sure I understand who Don Juan is. The rider is a handsome caballero named Pancho, and he is intent on covering Don Juan's silver saddle with a vinyl sheet before he walks him down the hill and home.

Don Juan is wet now from the rain, but his saddle is dry. Don Juan's ears are down because he does not care for the rain. And like so many performers, he is not so pretty close up.

Dancing

But Pancho and Don Juan make a good living dancing in ballrooms. It is the kind of thing that is taken for granted in Guadalajara and suburban Tlquepaque.

One finds Guadalajara in the Orozco murals of the Hospicio Cabanas — the huge ceiling symbols of air, fire, water, and earth — but also in the smells of barbecuing beef and the clomp of dancing horses.

This city is the seat of Mexico's traditions of boisterous mariachi and machismo. There is music everywhere, and in a land where horses are loved, it is natural to find a way to bring music and horses and love together.

For the visitor in Guadalajara, Mexico's second city, the mood is set by music and by the colonial-era elegance found in stately old buildings and plazas and among homes in old tree-lined avenues.

Bing Crosby

Bing Crosby has a more modern house on the 11th hole of the San Isidro Golf Club, one of his favorite hideaways. Flamboyant trees put out their flame-colored blossoms along the runways. The trees are banked in flowers.

Caddies pull snacks off fruit trees as they stroll down the fairways.

At fruit stands all around the city are those marvellous ripe mangoes impaled on sticks and slashed open to the kernels. You bury your face in them and slurp; it is the only way to eat mangoes outside of a bathtub.

In the Sunday market at the colonial suburb of Tlaquepaque other tropical fruits are heaped in mounds of reds and greens. A child perches on his haunches on a stool beside his father, downing a bowl of soup. At another stand a pancake maker draws an admiring huddle as he flips his cakes with that extra flourish of Guadalajara machismo. Rebozos and skirts hang in garlands of color from the limbs of an old laurel tree outside the church.

Shops open

The shops open slowly as the church empties. Sidewalks tables around the square begin to fill.

A tour bus stops outside one of the colonial houses, now a repository for antiques and newer antiques (Antigua de Mexic), including a grand old horse-drawn coach that graces the inner courtyard.

Besides the road south to Lake Chapala, which the author D. H. Lawrence indelibly linked to Guadalajara, families picnic in the shade of trees with whitewashed trunks. Others hang a side of beef in the shade and set up roadside food stands.

Horses are everywhere, here in the countryside.

Bath baths still bubble

The city of Bath's famed Roman baths, with hot mineral springs bubbling out at 120 degree Fahrenheit as they did nearly 2,000 years ago, are still open to the public.

And visitors can still drink the waters in the ancient spa's elegant Pump Room, which adjoins the baths. The recent closure of Bath's hot springs treatment centre has in no way affected the availability of the Romal relics. The Romans settled in Bath, naming it Aquae Sulis, in about 54 A.D., constructed an elaborate system of baths, and used them for 400 years.

Wraparound exotica on Japanese holiday

SLASHES PRICES ON SOME EUROPE CHARTER FLIGHTS
384-7108
FOUR SEASONS TRAVEL
3-19 212-620 VIEW ST.

IBUSUKI, Kyushu — The Japanese people, despite Western thinking, are not major world travellers. It's true that one is apt to meet great groups of them in London, Frankfurt, Tel Aviv or Vancouver. They may be there, all right but if you take time to enquire you'd likely find that they're on a trip that only lasts a week or 10 days.

For that's about all that the Japanese take for an annual vacation.

Their short-time leisure is taken in the home country and those who don't head for the mountains select this western-most island and its 150 or so spas. It's fine vacation country with excellent accommodations.

One of the biggest and best of these resort hotels can be found on the Pacific shore at Ibusuki (pop. 32,000). It's called the Ibusuki Kanko Hotel, a nine-storey palace of just more than 500 rooms, most of them with Western-style furnishings and it was completed in 1975.

It's possible to have yourself quite a night at this hotel. And you do it in a very relaxed style as the custom here, as in most other resort hotels, is to don a yukata (wraparound undergarment), kimono, sash and slippers for wearing around all the public areas. (One stipulation is that please don't take them with you at checkout. They'll sell you the set, at a reasonable price, too, if you insist on having one.)

Incidentally, one could travel all over Japan with very little in the way of baggage as almost all hotels supply disposable razors and toothbrushes along with the yukata and slippers.

So there you are, all dressed up and somewhere to go. Had trouble with the obi (or sash)? The management will send the maid along to see that you're properly attired.

You can choose the more formal dining room but much more interesting would be to try the Jungle Theatre and dining hall where you may be joined by groups that will total 4,000 at a sitting. Food, generally sukiyaki, is cooked by you at your table on a gas ring and the waitresses are fully occupied bringing large bottles of beer or flasks of heated sake.

The floor show consists of a group of Polynesian dancers tonight (not certain, but there was the feeling those same bare tummies were once seen in Eatons) and, if you're not shy, you could be up there dancing with them as part of the floorshow. Sake can have that kind of an effect on one.

Had enough? The baths seem called for at this point. As you check in, you're given another yukata which you change to before you pass into the main bathing area which is obscured by steam and swarms of jungle vines and palm fronds. Yes, that was a naked body of undertermined gender. There's another. What are all these little kids doing in here?

Press on. Descend a long flight of stone steps, ouching your way down as your tender soles trod on the grit that others have left on their return journeys.

You enter a large barn of a place and are given a quick glimpse of what Dahte had in mind. There's about half an acre of black, coarse sand, the surface of which is only broken by two amiable gents with spades in their hands — and dozens of human heads lying there wrapped in towels. The lighting is dim and condensation drips from the metal roof supports.

Don't back out now for it's evident that much merriment awaits you. You're beckoned down by one of the spademen who quickly scoops out your very own little grave. How neat the rows of smiling heads.

He motions you to lie down and the tiny towel that you've brought is wrapped around your hair. The yukata is wrapped closely around you and you're quickly covered in the hot grit.

IBUSUKI Kanko hotel, a place to relax in Japanese fashion.

It's a very warm spot to recline. In fact, after only about 10 minutes you have a strong urge to sit up and get all that weight off you.

"This is the pits," said a jolly lady from the Kansas City Star. (Well, anyway, it seemed hilarious at the time.)

The volcanic sand is very hot. It's supposed to be good for arthritis and other body ailments. All that keeps you horizontal is a growing apprehension about having to bare all, or nearly all, as you leave, shucking the yukata as you slide into the rinse-off pool at one end.

Now you have to appear cool as you walk the entire length of the sand bath up on a walkway about five feet above eye level. Your only "protection" is that overgrown face cloth that appears to have shrunk.

The solution is at hand. Just observe the Japanese. The women disappear to a private shower and baths (if they prefer) and the men mutter the Japanese equivalent of "aw to hell with it" and stroll nonchalantly out. Some even clutch the towel to them — which of course is what you had in mind all the time.

Back up those gritty stairs where more than 50 warm pools of various sizes and shapes await you. Isn't that cute, look one is shaped like a Valentine. As mentioned there are private pools for women, but none of the more daring Japanese ladies were discouraged from trying the other pools filled with men and swarms of kiddies.

One tale that travellers tell is that many foreign visitors have soaked overlong in the jungle bath, waiting to catch glimpses of a lengendary group of nubile high school girls, who are always due to arrive at any minute. So far as is known, nobody has ever set eyes on this group. However, you never know.

Mixed public bathing is a rarity in Japan in these modern times. Gen. MacArthur and his occupation forces brought in such restrictions, to the dismay of many, and Ibusuki is one of the few remaining holdouts—at least on the tourist path.

If you're ever here, try it. As they say, You'll like it. And it may even be good for you.

Gee whiz, Kamikaze ghosts

KAGOSHIMA, Kyushu — Gee whiz. There are still a few places in this tourist-overrun world where one might hear that exclamation. This is one of them, here in Japan.

For most westerners, businessmen in the main part, a trip to Japan in the past few years has been centred around Tokyo, Mt. Fuji, Nikko, Kyoto and Nagoya, with side trips to see the pearl divers and the Inland Sea. Shrines, objets d'art, those curious bowing deer at Nasa and you fly home exhausted less than a week later.

An alternative plan that is now being pushed in a serious way by the Japanese host is to send the tourist about 700 miles west from Tokyo on a Bullet Train to the island of Kyushu.

There, having escaped the heavy industry of Fukuoka, the options widen out. Within a day or two the traveller might find himself lying covered up to his neck in hot, volcanic sand, contemplating 90-pound radishes, green tea, honeymooners, an active real-live volcano, the ghosts of Kamikaze pilots and the merits of mixed bathing. The carnival that is Tokyo seems remote indeed.

Here in Kyushu is where West met East. The first Jesuits were here in the 16th century and even Japan began its long spell of isolationism in 1635, some foreign trade was maintained through Nagasaki.

A statue and park, dedicated to St. Francis de Xavier, has a prominent place in the major southern city of Kagoshima. However, all eyes invariably wander across the bay, about five miles, to see what old Sakurajima is up to.

And Sakurajima seldom disappoints. About four times a day the volcano belches up a big gray plume of steam and ashes and the entire landscape adds another layer of fly-ash.

The last time the spectacular mountain belched a really big one was in 1914. So much lava poured from the crater that the island on which the mountain lay became part of the main island of Kyushu. And then somebody planted a radish.

Whatever it is in the grimy dust that settled over the landscape, it can certainly grow radishes. Every February they're harvested, big white vegetables that in truth have been measured to a size of two feet across and which have weighed 90 pounds and more.

The entire area is given to radish and green tea fields. Not all the radishes are of the huge variety, however and are more like long turnips. They are sliced thin and dried, with their ultimate destiny a major role in Japanese cooking. A favorite use is to be ground up and mixed into a tempura sauce.

The tea? Well, they do more than drink it. One can eat a Japanese candy and find that it tastes just like tea — and for good reason.

There is considerable rivalry and debate about which region grows the best kind of tea but most Japanese agree that the Kyushu product ranks up there with the finest.

There are about 150 hotspring spas in Kyushu and this freak of nature has been exploited to varying degrees with resort hotels. As a result, the area, particularly down near the southern tip, at Ibusuki, has developed as a sort of honeymoon capital.

Major hotel chains cater to newlyweds. There are package honeymoons, which include the services of a private driver and taxi who obediently takes snapshots of the young couple admiring the various views. Also included is a small ceremony in which the couple plant a tree on a hillside and, hopefully, return each year to see the fruits of their endeavors.

This kind of activity annually brings about eight million visitors to the Kagoshima prefecture, according to Keigi Oyoshi, director of fishery, commerce and industry for the area. They're not all honeymooners, of course as this, too, is a favorite target of Japan's millions of golfers.

But this throng is virtually all of the domestic variety, as only about 10,000 of the total could be called foreigners. Kagoshima and Miyazaki, the neighboring city both have upgraded their airports and the first-named now handles international flights.

The two prefectures see themselves as jumping-off places for offshore holiday islands such as Okinawa, and as pausing places for westerners travelling to and from Taiwan, Hong Kong and beyond.

This part of Japan was heavily bombed during the Second World War. Major targets were the training fields that launched the desperate Kamikaze squadrons that created such havoc in the Allied fleets.

An unsubstantiated story is that the Japanese now train their taxi drivers down here. They appear to drive with self-destruction in the back of their minds.

Bennett Vowed Cuts—Newsman

CBC newsman Rick Hunt said Friday he stands behind his news broadcast Thursday that Premier Bill Bennett said there could be lower sales taxes and lower ferry rates in B.C. by 1979 if the economy improves.

Hunt's comment came after he learned Bennett told the legislature he did not make the promises and singled out CBC radio as having misquoted him.

Hunt said he thought the premier's statements to a Socred fund-raising dinner were important and so he took notes and reported them in his news broadcast. He said some other reporters at the dinner weren't taking notes at the time.

Bennett told the legislature Thursday he did not make the statements attributed to him.

"What I did say was that if we are successful in reducing unemployment and building the economy, the government could consider tax cuts," Bennett said in the house.

"And I said that the first considered would be the sales tax," Bennett added.

Hunt says he stands behind his news broadcast which runs in part:

"In answering those questions, the premier revealed that there will likely be a provincial election in 1979 and that by that time the people of B.C. may be paying lower sales tax, less for their ferry rides and that small businesses will be booming.

"He says this depends on B.C. getting its economic house in order."

The Vancouver Sun reporter who was also at the dinner wrote for Thursday's edition: "Premier Bill Bennett hinted Wednesday at an eventual end to sales tax in B.C.

"He mentioned the long-term possibility of scraping the 'onerous' tax . . ."

DEAF STUDIES GROUP FORMED

The education ministry has established an advisory committee on education for the deaf, Education Minister Pat McGeer said Friday. The committee will help in evaluating programs for deaf children, work with post-secondary institutions on providing opportunitites for the deaf and develop programs for pre-school children.

Tapin Forced To Fold

VANCOUVER (CP) — The directors of Tapin Copper Mines Ltd. say they have been forced to place their company in bankruptcy because of a wave of lawsuits resulting from a 1974 core salting scandal.

The company's trouble began in December, 1974, with charges that some core samples from the company's Bonza property in Oregon had been salted, or adulterated with other samples to give a false impression of their value.

Tapin president Roy Stack said Monday the company had set its annual meeting for the end of April, completed about two-thirds of a new financing and was going to consolidate its stock and change the company name "to get going again" before the directors opted for bankruptcy.

Trading in Tapin was suspended on the Vancouver Stock Exchange curb list last week. The stock last sold for 10 cents a share.

Former Tapin president Jim Black said a lawsuit he launched against the company may have forced the bankruptcy. He had demanded settlement in 10 days or he was going to seek a trial date.

Stack said the company's problems could be traced to "guys like Black."

"We tried to settle with him but he wouldn't. He wanted 100 cents on the dollar. Nobody's trying to help, they're all trying to bring you down."

Fraser Land Use Restricted

Mandatory environmental impact studies will be required for any proposed development or use of submerged lands on the Fraser River estuary, Environment Minister Jim Neilsen said Friday. Proposed developments between Point Grey and the Peace Arch Park in White Rock will have to be approved by Neilsen before any subdicision or building takes place on the land.

The Charter Battle for Britain. We'll go one better.

If you're going to Britain, 1977 is a very good year

Because there's a battle for your business going on among charter flight operators that can only benefit you.

The competition has cut some airfares to London by $30. British Airways Holidays is matching that. On four key departures during the peak holiday season, we've taken $30 off our airfare too—a saving of $60 per couple.

But. We've gone one better.

We've taken the $30 off two of our September departures to make them $30 cheaper than anyone else. A little bonus if you want to travel later in the year.

Why? It's simple. This is our first year serving you non-stop from Vancouver to London and we want to give you as good value and service as anyone else. Better value, if you use our special land packages, but you'll have to book early.

Check the departure list for the flight most convenient for you. We leave every Friday for Heathrow and return every Sunday through September 23.

Book your Jubilee Special seat now. And don't forget to ask the agent for our big savings on hotels and car rental, available exclusively to you as a British Airways Holidays passenger.

Satisfaction, Pay From IWY Goal

CAMBRIDGE, Ont. (CP) — Two years ago, during International Women's Year, housewife Vivian Jowett set a goal for herself.

She was determined to have a paying job as her personal project although she had been doing volunteer work, organized art shows, was an avid gardener, taught communications part-time and was the mother of four children ages 13, 16, 20 and 22.

But she had become disillusioned with volunteer work.

The same year her husband became dangerously ill with a lung infection and spent six months near death in a Toronto hospital.

He is fully recovered now but during that time his wife reasoned that a paying job might become a practical necessity for her.

Mrs. Jowett now is a probation officer in Cambridge.

Her work includes going to court and looking after a caseload of about 115 people. Three or four of them are parolees and the rest probationers.

Working out of the basement probation office, much of her time is spent preparing pre-sentence reports often requested by the judge, lawyer or the Crown attorney after a conviction.

The report gives the judge an idea of the best form of sentenced. The probation officer is asked to prepare the report from interviews with parents, teachers and employers and to present a composite picture which is balanced and dispassionate.

Probation officers may make recommendations and often they do. They might suggest that a young offender attend group therapy at a local mental health clinic.

Besides her work, Mrs. Jowett is studying for civil service examinations she will write in May.

STRANGE bedfellows are the kitten and dog which seem to enjoy each other's company on a Fraser Valley farm at Aldergrove.

NFB TRIO NOMINATED

Three National Film Board of Canada films have been nominated for Academy Awards. They are Volcano, an inquiry into the life and death of Malcolm Lowry, best documentary; The Street, based on a short story by Mordecai Richler, best animation; and Blackwood, which examines the techniques and images of noted Canadian contemporary etcher David Blackwood, nominated for best documentary short subject.

There will be a free showing of the three films, Tuesday at the Student Union Building theatre on University of Victoria campus. The showing will begin at 8 p.m. and lasts two hours and 15 minutes.

Parents' Program

NEW YORK (AP) — A program designed for the parents of Jewish teen-agers, the first of its kind in the U.S., has been launched by the Commission on Jewish Education of the United Synagogues of America. The program, Parent Education for Parents of Jewish adolescents, aims to help parents of teenagers cope with their special concerns within a framework of Judiac religious values.

Western Brass Concert Sunday

A concert of brass ensemble music will be presented by the Western Brass Society, Sunday at 8 p.m. at St. John's Church, Quadra. The concert will be conducted by Glen Fast and will feature a variety of instrumentalists including Kathryn Ely, harp, and Edward Norman, organ.

The Western Brass Quintet forms the nucleus of the society which was organized to perpetuate larger brass ensembles employing a standard orchestral brass section and timpani. Both the quintet and the society have had busy schedules of school concerts, performing for thousands of local students.

There will be no admission charge for Sunday's concert but a collection will be taken.

By RICHARD HOMAN
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Kamal Jumblatti, wealthy feudal boss of much of Lebanon's mountain country and leader of the nation's socialists, was as much a baffling enigma as he was a central political figure in the three-decades since Lebanon achieved independence.

the publicv, political life of modern Beirut and the 300-year-old family castle in the mountains 50 miles away where he ruled the mystery-shrouded Druze sect like a small-town political boss.

When Lebanon's 19-month-long civil war, in which he had been a leading combatant, ended last year, Jumblatt told friends that, although he was not yet 60, he was ready to retire from public life and go to India, where he had often immersed himself for meditation and rest after difficult periods. But he had been unable to leave what he considered an unfinished job in Lebanon.

JUMBLATT
. . . jumble of paradoxes

The stooped, aristocratic power broker was a jumble or paradoxes.

He was a multimullionaire landlord with some of Lebanon's largest holdings — and he was his country's foremost socialist. He was a warlord who emulated Mahatma Gandhi — student of Hindu and Buddhist beliefs who insisted that there were times when violence was a duty.

He opposed communism and tried to keep his socialism apart from it — and he was a 1972 winner of the Lenin Peace Prize. To his Druze traditions and upbringing he added a solid Roman Catholic education — and used the resulting blend of ideas to press for the secularization of Lebanon.

As a Druze, Jumblatt could not hold any of the country's three top offices, but he made and broke national leaders, sometimes making and breaking the very same man when his mood or the situation changed.

Jumblatt knew violence and had survived several earlier attacks. His father, a hereditary Druze chieftain, was assassinated when Jumblatt was a child and his only sister was slain by gunmen who broke into her Beirut apartment last May.

To understand Jumblatt, his friends always said, one had to travel high into the Lebanese mountains to his ancestral home at Moukhtara and watch him hold court there most Sundays. Old Druze men in white turbans and half-foot-long mustaches would file in to receive counsel and make requests.

The Druze, who number about 200,000 are a seemingly

A key practice of the Druze religion is dissimulation! Druze are permitted and encouraged to profess publicly the policies of the society in which they find themselves. This outward flexibility and inner secrecy account for the tiny, distinctive sect's survival through a thousand years in such a turbulent region.

Jumblatt, with socialist leanings as a youth, inherited the vast hodings of his father, the feudal governor of the Chouf region of the mountains southeast of Beirut.

After studying in Beirut and Paris, he entered the cabinet for the first time in 1948 when, at 29, he was made minister of economy and agriculture.

Jumblatt and his supporters backed the election of Bishara Khoury, Lebanon's first president, and eight years later led the peaceful overthrow of Khoury.

Later Camille Chamoun became president with Jumblatt's help but in 1958, Jumblatt was a key figure in the civil war that replaced Chamoun with Fuad Chehab, whom Jumblatt ardently supported from then on.

When U.S. troops intervened in the 1958 civil war at Chamoun's request, Jumblatt, whose tough Druze warriors numbered no more than a few thousand, loudly threatened to carry the war to the American forces. When a political compromise was reached, he quietly sent his men back to the mountains.

The Progressive Socialist party that Jumblatt founded shortly after the Second World War professed a blend of nationalist and anti-Western themes and pursued a moderate socialist program in a country renowned for its free-wheeling enterprise.

From this base, Jumblatt was in and out of the cabinet, serving as minister of education, of public works and, twice, of interior.

In the recently ended civil war, Jumblatt's Socialists and Lebanon's Moslem leftists formed a convenient common front with the Palestinians against the largely Christian rightists, who had maintained their entrenched control of Lebanon despite a population shift that had given Moslems a majority.

When other Moslem leaders showed a willingness to end the war, Jumblatt, poet, mystic and Lenin Peace Prize winner, pressed on, hoping to wrench major concessions from the Christians. Only when Syria sent its forces to help the Lebanese right did Jumblatt give in.

Then, the unlikely warlord, whose suit seemed perennially rumpled and tie forever askew, who slumped as he walked and spoke in a weak, croaky voice, went back to his Yoga, his poetry and his study of plants and waited for new opportunities to use his political influence.

At the Number 1 Place.

LONDON (AP) — Mrs. Regina Fischer, mother of former American world chess champion Bobby Fischer, was convicted this week of obstructing the sidewalk outside a British government office. She was released on one year's probation. Mrs. Fischer was arrested Feb. 20 as she lay on a cot in front of the home office to protest government deportation orders against two American journalists.

Death to Bull, Cry Portugese

By MARVINE HOWE
New York Times

VILA FRANCA DE XIRA, Portugal — The revolution that has changed Portugal has taken a bloody turn with a popular movement whose rallying cry demands death to the bull.

Four bullfighters who have become local heroes because they slew the bulls in a recent contest here are awaiting trial for their defiance of the ancient Portuguese ban against dispatching their opponents.

Practically everybody in Vila Franca de Xira, a town of about 16,000 inhabitants north of Lisbon, is a bullfighting fan and all say that the death ban must be lifted. On the old yellow bullring outside of town scrawled in red paint are the words in Portuguese, "Vote Death."

"This is the cathedral of Portuguese bullfighting, the town where the best bullfighters were born and the centre of the best cattle breeding ranches — but to see a real bullfight, we must go to Spain," Carlos Costa, who runs a dry-cleaning store here, said indignantly.

The Portuguese bullfight, or tourada, started out as an aristocratic sport as early as the 12th century, when noblemen on horseback would challenge bulls as training for combat and a demonstration of courage. The ban on killing bulls was imposed in 1799 after a popular nobleman was gored.

For years, Portuguese bullfighters protested the curbs, but to no avail. The April 1974 revolution against the dictatorship almost ended bullfights because the revolutionaries felt bullfighting was a "fascist sport" because of its aristocratic origins.

But little by litle, bullfights were rehabilitated when the revolutionaries realized that they could be an important attraction in bringing back tourists, a principle source of foreign exchange for pre-revolution Portugal.

But the bullfighters and fans were not satisfied. On Oct. 31 at the Palha Blanco bullrihg, there was a benefit show in memory of a native son, matador Jose Falcao, who had been killed by a bull on Aug. 11, 1974, in the ring at Barcelona, Spain.

The fans wanted vengeance for the death of Falcao. Matador Jose Julio performed a number of brilliant cape movements, and the public urged him on. When he plunged his sword deep into the bull's neck, instead of the usual simulated blow, there was general delirium. The next three matadors did the same. At the close of the fight, the fans hoisted the four bullfighters on their shoulders and marched around the bullring and out into the street.

3-Man Group to Settle Basics for Land Claims

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

A three-man committee was struck Friday to establish the basic principles to be applied in land claim negotiations between B.C. Indians and both levels of government.

The committee was named following the first-ever joint meeting between the representatives of 23 bands and provincial and federal authorities.

Chief Philip Joe, spokesman for the Indian bands, said he is pleased with the development and looks on it as a positive step towards settlement of the 60-year-old land claims dispute.

The Indians are seeking the return of more than 33,000 acres throughout the province, including lands at the north end of Lions Gate bridge, and property in downtown Penticton.

Joe said he hopes an agreement on the issue can be reached by this summer or soon after.

The committee, to meet for the first time April 20, is made up of Joe, Bob Goudie, from the federal office of native claims, and Bob Exell, Indian programs co-ordinator for the department of labor.

Federal Indian Affairs Minister Warren Allmand refused to put a date on possible conclusion of negotiations, but did say "we want to get on with this soon, we seriously want to settle these claims."

Allmand said the Indians had suggested 12 principles for negotiation at Friday's meeting, but while "some of them don't give us any difficulty," others would be subject to debate at the April 20 meeting..

He said the meeting, expected to be held in the Vancouver area, might last for two days.

Labor Minister Allan Williams, whose office is responsible for B.C. Indian affairs, said once the three-man committee has agreed on the principles to govern negotiations, "the basic principles will then be used when we approach the individual bands."

Williams said the settlements will be with individual bands, one by one, rather than an over-all settlement.

He added that differences of opinion between the federal and provincial levels of government over division of responsibility, won't interfere with negotiations.

Federal and provincial authorities are at work ironing out existing difficulties in that area, he said.

Asked what attitude the province is taking into negotiation sessions with the Indians, Williams said: "We feel it (the land) was legally taken away, but with injustice."

"All we now want is to right the wrong that was done," added Allmand.

Withers Replaces Falls

OTTAWA (CP) — Maj-Gen. Ramsay Withers, 46, commander of Canadian forces in Europe, will be promoted to lieutenant-general and be made vice-chief of defence staff, it was announced Friday.

Gen. Withers of Toronto will take over from Vice-Admiral Robert H. Falls who is being promoted to chief of defence staff.

Gen. Withers has had rapid promotion in the services since graduating from forces colleges at Victoria and Kingston and obtaining a science degree at Queen's University in 1954.

He is a veteran of the Korean War.

He will be replaced by Brig. Gen. Charles H. Belzile, 43, of Trois Pistoles, Que., now assistant chief of staff of NATO's central army group in West Germany who will be promoted to major-general.

Buckle-Up Legislation Getting Wide Support

Proposed seatbelt legislation will get widespread support a legislative poll indicates.

Premier Bill Bennett has said there will be a free vote on the legislation, which Transport Minister Jack Davis says could be in effect by mid-summer.

Dennis Cocke (NDP—New Westminster), party whip, said his party favors the bill in principle, and all NDP members will vote for it. He said, however, there are certain amendments the party will propose, but would not elaborate.

Under the proposed legislation, violaters would face fines of up to $500 or up to three months in jail.

Conservative leader Scott Wallace said he will vote for the bill, but Liberal leader Gordon Gibson said he will not announce his position until the bill is considered.

Although there has been talk that not all of the cabinet ministers favor the legislation, two Social Credit members said the bill now has the support of the caucus.

"There are really only two MLAs who will vote against it, maybe three," one of the Scoail Credit members said.

"The people in my constituency are against it and I'm against it," said Len Bawtree (SC—Shuswap).

Cyril Shelford (SC—Skeena), Pat Jordan (SC—North Okanagan) and George Kerster (SC—Coquitlam) said they favor the legislation, but want opinion from their ridings before they commit themselves.

Jack Kempf (SC—Omineca), who originally spoke against the legislation and plans to oppose it, said that because his constituency favors it, he will vote for the bill.

Other Social Credit members who said they would support the legislation are: Frank Calder (Atlin), George Mussallem (Dewdney), Walter Davidson (Delta), Lyle Kahl (Esquimalt), Ray Loewen (Burnaby-Edmonds), Stephen Rogers (Vancouver South), and Gerry Strongman (Vancouver South.

Refund Buyer Curbs Passed

The Consumer Protection Act received third reading in the B.C. legislature Friday with all government and opposition MLAs voting in favor.

The bill will become law when proclaimed by the lieutenant governor, probably sometime next week.

One of the major provisions of the act, and the main reason it received such speedy passage through the house, is its attempt to control income tax refund buyers.

The bill limits to 15 per cent of the return the amount the buyer can keep for himself. The remaining 85 per cent must be turned over to the person selling the return.

All three opposition party spokesmen — NDP MLA Karen Sanford, Liberal leader Gordon Gibson and Tory leader Scott Wallace — said they welcomed the controls on the "reprehensible practices" of the tax buyers.

The bill also provides consumer protection in the areas of door-to-door sales, prepaid contracts for health spas and ble" mortagage transactions ble" mortgage transactibns and credit card regulation.

Consumer Services Minister Rafe Mair in response to a request from Sanford, said his staff was looking into the possibility of legislation to stop the sale of customer lists to junk mail firms.

Sanford asked if there is any way to control a firm such as Eaton's which recently sold the names of its customers of the now-defunct catalogue sales division to junk mail firms.

Mair said he is investigating statutes under both the Trade Practices Act and the Privacy Act.

Crystal's Faults Reviewed

Victoria city council is trying to decide what to do about structural problems which have "become apparent over the course of time" at the Crystal Pool, Mayor Mike Young said Friday.

The mayor's guarded comments followed an in-camera meeting of the city's legal committee on Thursday.

He refused to say whether the city is contemplating legal action against the pool's contractor, H. E. Fowler and Sons Ltd.

"We are looking at the implications of problems we have had with construction," Young said.

"I don't wish to comment beyond that and I have been asked not to until our investigations have been concluded."

For the time being the matter has been left in the hands of the city's legal department, he said.

Young was also reluctant to say what the structural problems are, although he said they are not of "major magnitude" in relation to the cost of rectifying them.

"It's not a question of the building falling down," he added.

The $1.8 million Crystal Pool was opened in November, 1971.

City Tourist Promoter a Busy Man

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

They say you go to a busy man when you want something done but in electing Ken King president of the Visitors Information Centre this week tourist promoters went to extremes.

King is general manager of two hotels, Harbor Towers and the Red Lion, and is busy in tourist promotion work, including arranging for accommodation for 1,600 delegates who will be attending a Rotary convention here in mid-April.

He is active with United Commercial Travellers where he is a past grand counsellor, but is stepping down this year from the board of the Downtown Business Association where he is a past president.

He was a founding member of the Visitors Information Centre, which runs the Causeway tourist bureau, and he was vice president last year.

"Things are pretty busy for me at the moment but I wouldn't miss this for anything," he says of his election as VIC president.

"Tourism has always been my first love. I believe in Victoria and I know we really have a product to sell."

For example, the Rotary convention is drawing 1,600 delegates to Victoria while the same meeting drew only 550 to Seattle last year.

"This is a great natural tourist city."

First of all, he wants to end the war with Transport Minister Jack Davis over the ferry rate increase.

"We are going to continue to push for lower rates but we are going to try to do it with the help of Mrs. (Grace) McCarthy. She is doing a terrific job as minister in charge of the department of travel and we are going to ask her to plead the cause of Victoria in the cabinet. All our requests to cabinet will go through her.

King said he is convinced

KING

Mrs. McCarthy will encourage the cabinet to help the Victoria tourist industry.

Secondly, he will ask Oak Bay, Saanich and Esquimalt to contribute a total of approximately $40,000 to the VIC campaign to promote Victoria as a tourist centre.

The VIC has already received a grant of $28,000 from the City of Victoria from a tourist fund established at the suggestion of Ald. Frank Carson.

King will begin discussions with aldermen from other area councils next week to explain why the money is needed and how it will be spent.

"We are going to tell Oak Bay, Saanich and Esquimalt that we are going to do a job and we would like their support. There will be no pressure on them. We will just outline our plans and let them make their own decision.

The VIC is committed to spending $140,000 in the next few months promoting Victoria in Washington State, Oregon and British Columbia. The Visitors Information Centre is using $60,000 of its own funds plus $28,000 from Victoria. In addition, it is seeking matching grants from the department of travel and is asking area municipalities for support.

A third priority will be to establish a liaison committee with the Victoria Celebrations Society and the Victoria Chamber of Commerce tourist and convention committee.

"Each organization must know what the other two groups are doing at all times."

In the past, the three groups have often been working at overlapping projects and duplicating each other's effort.

One immediate result will be VIC's withdrawal from all promotional activities regarding a convention centre for Victoria.

"We believe that the convention centre is something we should leave to the chamber of commerce which has been working on that project for many years."

King said he personally supports the proposal being considered by CP Hotels to create a convention facility by more than doubling the size of the Crystal Ballroom at The Empress.

"That is the logical solution. But if it doesn't happen I would hope that the chamber will have a contingency proposal as an alternative. We are staying out of this because I believe we should direct our attention to the tourist program."

King was born in Halifax and came to Victoria at the age of 13 when his father was transferred by the army here in 1938. Ken King joined the Royal Canadian Air Force five years later and was in the services until he became assistant manager of the Hotel Douglas in 1957. He later became manager, a position he held until he joined Park Pacific as manager of the Harbor Towers four years ago.

King, 51, is married and has two children.

Doing the Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

The hair style YOU should have! . . .

As you've probably noticed, we've been away for the past few weeks . . . basking in the California sunshine . . . Now, the last thing we want to do when on holiday is spend time in a hairdressing salon . . . so before leaving we had a cut and permanent at the Charming Lady . . . and kept our fingers crossed! . . . Would you believe that from then on we had only to wash our hair under the shower and push it back in place? . . . It was just wonderful! . . . As we've mentioned before, our hair is very thin and fine . . . but those talented people at the Lady certainly knew what to do about it! . . . Why don't YOU make an appointment with George, Tibor, Marty or Donna at the Charming Lady . . . or Gerry at the Witch's Hut . . . and get a new, easy-to-manage hair style, with a permanent that acts like it really should instead of going kinky and unmanageable at the first touch of moisture? . . . Marty tells us that styles are changing very subtly . . . the look is a little softer and more stylish . . . to match the stylishness of the new spring clothes . . . Tibor confirmed this . . . He's just back from taking EST training in Seattle . . Says it's absolutely great! . . . But to get back to our subject . . . we promise you you'll like everything about the Lady and the Hut . . . Good relaxing atmosphere, and staffs who are real, no-nonsense pros . . . who know their job and care about you and your hair . . . Small wonder their customers stay with them for years . . . come from all over the Island . . . and even Vancouver! . . . Charming Lady, 1712 Douglas St., 385-8133 and Witch's Hut, 728 View St., 388-7368.

Nice visiting Wilson's this week after such a long absence! . . . Nice, too, to find they've a good selection of one of the "hottest" items of sportswear today . . . the tailored blazer! . . . We admired a pure wool doubleknit 2-button blazer from Hort Mandel of Berlin . . . Red, white or navy . . . with little metal ornaments on the pockets . . . priced at $105 . . . From Denmark there's a double-breasted Trevira gabardine in a little longer style which would be particularly good on a taller woman. This is red or navy, and tagged at $120 . . . A beautifully soft flannel blazer by Aquascutum is man-tailored, fitted . . . with three flap pockets . . . This handsome blazer available in grey, camel, chocolate brown or navy . . . $195 . . . You'll undoubtedly want a smart skirt or pants to wear with your new blazer . . . so be sure to see the new Trevira twill slightly A line skirts with separate belts . . . They're by Petri of Portugal . . . come in white, red and navy, and cost but $40 . . . Same price for the slacks in the same material and colors . . . Very trim fitting with a little younger cut . . . The fabric is heavy enough to hang well . . . and in the case of the white ones, you don't see through like you do most white pants! . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177 and 1210 Newport Ave., 592-2821.

In California we naturally saw sandals by the hundreds in all the shoe stores . . . but nothing to surpass the beautiful Amalfi sandals . . . last of the Amalfi spring and summer shipment . . . which arrived at Munday's just last week . . . They now have the complete line of these much-coveted shoes and sandals, so we'd like to suggest you don't wait too long in buying yours . . . while all sizes are still plentiful! . . . All new patterns this season, there's "Rico", a high-heeled white stripping sandal with padded sock . . . Incidentally, all the new sandals have this padded insole for extra comfort . . . "Varabu" has a crossover vamp, same heel height, and comes in red or navy calf and black patent . . . all three with white piping . . . A very well-fitting sandal with a little lower heel and ankle strap is named "Gigino" . . . White calf or black patent . . . A smart city sandal called "Erione" . . . with mid-stacked heel and stitched detailing, comes in navy and camel . . . "Carverna" fits like a dream, with broad bands across the forefront of shoe and wishbone strap . . . Sizes are 4 to 11 in four widths . . . White, putty, navy, green and red . . . "Tepa" is a very popular linen and leather sandal with low heel and T-strap styling . . . Red, navy or camel leather trimming the natural panama . . . For a very low heel, see "Cobol" with its narrow rope trim on a crepe sole. White, navy, raffia and a pretty shade of brown . . . Sizes up to 11, in three widths . . . All these priced from $40 to $45 at . . . Munday's, 1203 Douglas St., 383-2211.

Even while Mrs. Higgin at the Handloom tried to tell us she hadn't a great deal of new stuff in . . . we spotted some gorgeous things which were certainly not there on our last visit! . . . Like the magnificent pieces by Salish Indian Doug La Fortune . . . tall cedar totem pole with a serpent at the top . . . exquisitely carved and polished to a satin-like sheen . . . And a smaller totem figure with abalone inlays . . . A handsome object d'art with a $450 price tag! . . . Also a painted ceremonial rattle shaped like a dragonfly . . . and a painted war mask . . . Noted in passing some beautiful sweaters hand knit with Cottage Craft yarns . . . Hasti-note cards with cotton batik fronts which the recipient can frame . . . No two of these alike . . . An artisan in Sooke is responsible for the leaf pins which are real leaves covered with bronze . . . Ivy leaves from the Empress Hotel, Garry oak leaves, salal, maple, alder and strawberry leaves . . . some glowing with the leaf's natural colors . . . We saw some work by a new potter too . . . She's Barbara Evans, a student of Carol Graham . . . Her covered steamer is really outstanding . . . and her covered casserole has the most beautiful shape and glaze, as well as a satisfying "grip" . . . Lids of both these pots fit extra tight . . . Handloom, 625 Trounce Alley, 384-1011 and Empress Hotel, 384-1518.

For travel now and summer later . . .

Dresses bearing the Lacoste label seem to have a cachet all their own . . . One just has to see that alligator on the left front to know beyond doubt that these are well-made, drip-dry, easy-to-wear dresses which will hold their good looks through innumerable launderings . . . and travel to perfection! . . . in sleeveless, short-sleeved and cap-sleeved styles, stripes and plain colors . . . sunny yellow . . . blue . . . green, and hot pink . . . These are summery dresses you should think of acquiring right now because you know what they say about the early birds! . . . Other good dresses for summer and travel are Jonfel cotton and polyester blends which never need the touch of an iron . . . Charmante's have these in delightfully simple styles which can be dressed either up or down . . . Peppermint pink, blue, soft yellow and versatile natural color . . . in sleeveless and short sleeved styles . . . zip front with tie belt, open neck, roomy pockets . . . Two-piece dresses are much in evidence . . . all colors in prints, plains, swingy skirts and long or short sleeves . . . There's also a good selection of one-piece dresses . . . We noticed especially a washable tricot knit in a sleeveless dress with jacket . . . top of dress and jacket in a crochet design . . . yellow, white and mint . . . Could be a nice "mother-of-bride" dress for an informal wedding! . . . Charmante's, Hillside Shopping Centre. 595-1555.

A new approach to floor coverings . . .

It's just possible that a lot of you who think of Standard furniture as the store where all that beautiful furniture is to be found . . . tend to forget that Standard also has a very fine carpet and flooring department . . . and you certainly don't need US to tell you how greatly the right floor coverings can enhance your home! . . . Standard handle a really large range of floor coverings . . . in a big range of styles, colors and prices . . . There are broadlooms, both plain and textured . . . in qualities and weights to suit everyone's needs . . . A new range of colorations to give your home a fresh look this spring! . . . And just wait till you see the hard coverings of vinyl and such! . . . A whole new approach to patterns and colors! They've nothing in common with the old type "linoleums"! . . . New lines are now in . . . and if you've any thought of replacing any floor coverings in your home, do go and have a look around . . . That's what we did this week . . . Discovered that some of the new vinyls never need waxing . . . Oh happy day! . . . Saw a lot of interesting area rugs to accent a room or hallway . . . Standard will gladly send someone to your home to show you samples . . . give you an estimate . . . without obligation of course . . . And if you hesitate to install wall-to-wall because you live in an apartment, hear this: Certain broadlooms can be put down with double-faced tape so they can be taken up if you decide to move! . . . Standard Furniture Co., 737 Yates St., 382-5111.

Going to Britain this summer? . . . If you have some extra time to spare . . . say a week, or maybe two . . . why not take a cruise from Southampton to North Cape and Scandinavia . . . or Mediterranean and Atlantic Islands? . . . Paulin's have just received some new brochures on P & O cruises to these interesting spots . . . aboard our old friends the Oriana and Canberra! . . . Now this would be something really different to do . . . One takes in Lisbon, Las Palmas, Madeira Horta and Ponta Delgada . . . A longer cruise adds Malaga, Teneriffe and Lisbon to this list . . . Other cruises go to Dubrovnik, Gibraltar, Athens, Istanbul, Malta . . . Copenhagen, Rotterdam, North Cape . . . Really, there's such a variety of cruises throughout the summer that you should have little difficulty in finding one to suit your fancy! . . . All variety of accommodation on the two ships, so call Paulin's and they'll gladly mail you out a brochure . . . Wardair, too, has put together a program of trips where you fly London to Rome and pick up a cruise to the Mediterranean . . . We're not even mentioning fares in this small space, but Paulin's will be happy to give you all the information, and make your bookings . . . either from the U.K. or right from Victoria . . . Paulin Travel, 532 Broughton St., 382-9168.

Balancing Your Diet Is Her Goal

elizabeth forbes

Jane Noble is a dispenser of educated knowledge regarding the need for balanced diets and proper foods for good health.

As community nutrition consultant with the provincial ministry of health, she bases that knowledge on the fact that "health is a state of complete physical, mental and social well-being and not merely the absence of disease or infirmity."

With co-workers Pat Wolczuk and Jan Ayer, and a small staff of able assistants, she works in her office (presently in Nootka Court) to prepare sound nutrition information that is passed to the public through television, radio, newspapers and printed and audio-visual material.

"We have our senior chef program on televison," she told me. "On radio we arrange interviews with community nutritionists and we offer a nutrition 'buyline' column to the print media."

Pamphlets and posters are prepared "in a way we hope will attract people of all ages"; smart shopper saves are put together for slide-tapes series that are available to various outlets.

Movies are dreamed up (yes, and actually made in that Nootka Court office) around the importance of buying better food for better health."

Ms. Noble and her two colleagues also travel throughout the province to help various health units organize and maintain nutrition education programs.

At present there are 18 of these units in British Columbia but only six have their own nutritionists — Boundary, Central Fraser Valley, Cariboo, South Okanagan, South Central and at Simon Fraser University.

"With the possibility of one more before the end of our new fiscal year," Jane Noble says.

There is none in the north or the east so "problems and help with programs up there, of necessity, must be handled at present by mail or telephone."

Again, Ms. Noble says "hopefully" with increased interest and awareness of people, "we may have a nutritionist there before long."

In their travels, the three consultants meet with public health nurses to discuss the needs and to share new ideas and new materials.

It's extremely important that public health nurses have this up-to-date information on nutrition as well as on health rules, Ms. Noble believes.

She and her colleagues also talk to teachers throughout the province about nutrition needs in the schools.

Here again, there is a strong belief that vending machines now offering coke and candy to school-age children "could just as easily vend apples, milk, ice cream bars and even small cubes of cheese and crackers . . . in fact, many kinds of nutritious things."

All that is needed, this knowledgable nutrition consultant says, is "a strong enough push."

The three consultants meet from time to time, with home economics teachers and with physicians "to exchange and co-ordinate information."

They take part, as guest lecturers, in the adult education programs of health related community college courses and in classes on nutrition and infant feeding.

Through workshops and training projects they provide nutrition services as a component of on-going health unit programs, for pre-school teachers, community care facility staffs and even for homemakers.

"In pre-school work we counsel and advise on child care, infant feeding and nutrition and how to help overweight children," Jane Noble told me.

"With community facilities staffs we emphasize the importance of menu planning, inspection as part of the health unit team, and the need for pre-natal classes and counselling for pregnant women.

"Through home care programs we give advise and help to homemakers in need of general nutrition informlation. We make home visits to patients on therapeutic diets and we even give help, when requested, to meals-on-wheels programs and to weight-reducing groups."

At present she and her staff are busy co-ordinating and collating facts from the latest federal government report on the nation's food consumption habits.

It shows that while British Columbians get a good start in life as infants, their eating habits have slipped badly by the time they start elementary school.

Also that most adolescents and adults in this province eat far too much fat and sugar, while young women are not drinking enough milk.

"This supports our belief that there is need for increased education programs for school-age children," Ms. Noble says.

Spring and fall are "busiest on the road" seasons for the trio.

They travel mostly by air "because it is quick and also because it is sometimes the only way," and they fly in all sorts of weather and in all sorts of planes.

Jane Noble has only been with the provincial ministry of health for a little over a year-and-a-half.

Prior to that she was assistant professor with the school of home economics at University of British Columbia, where she also took her B.H.E. and M.Sc. degrees.

Now, of course, her main interest is in working to improve the life style of people, from infants to senior citizens, through the promotion of sound nutrition information.

"No one food has magic qualities," she points out. "No one food is perfect.

"Therefore, our work is to get the message across . . . to teach, find ways to communicate and educate the general public to the need for balanced diets that include the right foods for mental, physical and social health."

Four 'Degrees' of Burns

By LESTER L. COLEMAN, M.D.

With all the recent interest in the treatment of burns, I'd like to know something about the different "degrees" of burns that we hear about. — Mrs. J.N., Wash.

Dear Mrs. N.:

"First degree" burns are those which involve the outer layers of the skin. These are the painful, superficial burns that happen so frequently in the kitchen. Almost everyone now knows that the immediate application of ice water to these burns can relieve the pain and even be responsible for more rapid healing. Later, a mild, soothing ointment, with or without antibiotics, may also ease the pain and promote healing. First degree burns usually need no professional care.

A "second degree" burn involves the deeper layers of the skin. Blisters may form. Serum may ooze out. And there is usually more intense pain. For such burns the doctor's guidance is most important. Blisters should not be opened. The burned area should not be covered with ointments, for these make it more difficult for the subsequent treatment of the burn by the doctor, or in an emergency room. It is better to cover the area with sterile gauze or a clean handkerchief.

"Third degree" burns involve all the layers of the skin and the underlying muscle tissues. There is only a technical difference between "third" and "fourth" degree burns. These burns must be treated by doctors or by para-professionals and emergency hospital personnel.

Remarkable strides have been made in the treatment of extensive burns. The enormous loss of fluid and the physical shock caused by burns can threaten the lives of the victims. "Burn Centres" are being established all over the country. Transportation of burn victims to these centres by helicopter now makes it possible to save the lives of many who might otherwise not survive. The most remarkable and ingenious techniques are used in burn centres to offer relief of pain, to prevent infection and to promote rapid healing.

I had a cyst removed from my left ovary. Two years later I had a cyst removed from the left side of my face. Am I "cyst-prone" on the left side of my body? — Miss J.M.O., Penn.

Dear Miss O.:

It's pure coincidence that the two cysts occurred on the left side of your body. There is no medical validity to this idea and your anxiety is unnecessary.

Another misconception is that some people consider themselves to be "cystic." There is no medical substantiation for this, either.

Court Action

NORTH COWICHAN — Island Shake and Shingle Ltd. will ask the B.C. Supreme Court to quash a North Cowichan bylaw which stopped construction of a new shingle mill and log haul-out on Cowichan Bay.

Notice was filed this week by Bert Rodenbush and Norman Rooke, company principals.

The petition to quash the bylaw, passed Feb. 16, will be heard March 30 or April 1 in Duncan by a supreme court justice.

She Has A Fine Feathered Friend

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's letter carriers soon get to know the dogs on their daily routes. But one of the most unusual "pals" a carrier could ever have is Elmer the crow who waits each day for Gloria Meere to deliver mail to the Van Ingen's home in Pineglen near Ottawa.

"The first morning when I was on the route I saw Elmer in the tree" said Gloria. "He was kind of hanging around.

"I could tell he wanted to come down so I started to talk to him. Eventually he flew down but I could tell he was sort of nervous and I didn't have anything for him."

Gloria said that "from then on I would carry pieces of cheese for him and soon he would land on my arm and we would talk.

"I'm sort of nutty about animals. That's one reason why I wanted to be a letter-carrier."

Gloria said that dogs are "kind of sticky." Dogs are more like people. There are some good natured and bad natured ones. I was bitten by an Afghan hound on another route."

She said that Elmer used to peck a little "but it never hurt."

Sinker's Diet Is Fine

By DR. FRANK MILER

DEAR DR. MILLER: Twenty years ago, I purchased two little turtles at the pet shop. One died in three months. The other is still living and has grown quite large. I've tried him on many different foods, but all he has ever eaten is lettuce, and lots of it. I recently read somewhere (maybe your column?) that lettuce was not a complete food for turtles, that they would die from malnutrition if they didn't get a more balanced diet. What about Sinker? Should he be getting something else? I haven't worried up to now because he looks so good. He spends his time in a big laundry tub swimming about, perched on a rock, or sitting on the bottom. He seems happy as a clam, happier in fact. What do you think he needs that he's not getting — C.G.

DEAR C.G.: As long as Sinker doesn't read the same article you did, he probably won't need anything. It's probably true that his diet is inadequate, scientifically speaking. On the other hand, any nutritional deficiency that takes more than 20 years to develop can't be too severe, certainly not as far as Sinker is concerned. If Sinker were under considerably more stress, whether in the form of less favorable environmental conditions, or if you were attempting to raise little Sinkers, then the inadequacy of his present diet would show up. Under the present circumstances, however, Sinker's obviously been able to live it up on lettuce alone, and very satisfactorily, so I wouldn't advise rocking the boat. In fact at this point, if you tried adding calcium, other minerals or vitamins, you might simply upset the delicate nutritional balance he's been able to maintain and actually cause more harm than good.

DEAR DR. MILLER: At what age should our kitten, Cleo, be spayed? Will spaying change her behavior in any way? — V.S.

DEAR V.S.: The recommended age for spaying cats generally runs between six and eight months. I personally recommend to my clients that the female go through her first heat period and then be spayed. This means most are eight to ten months of age before I operate. Spaying prior to the first heat period does solve the problem of a possible slip-up and pregnancy so, if the cat cannot be properly confined, surgery at the earlier age is probably advisable. As far as spaying changing her behavior, yes, it definitely will. Her behavior as unspayed will be that of a periodically passionate and probably pregnant pussycat. Obviously, this behavior does not occur after spaying. You needn't be concerned that there would be any other noticeable changes in her personality.

Happy New Year!

Probably no one who's shivered through January 1st celebrations bundled up in parkas hasn't secretly wishes that New Year would happen in the Spring.

Well, it may come as a surprise, but there is a calendar followed by a growing number of people that celebrates its New Year at a much more reasonable time of the year: March 21st, the first day of Spring!

The Baha'i Calendar was designed in the last century to mark the beginning of a new spiritual age in the life of mankind. It has 19 months of 19 days — nine of its own holidays — and on this March 21st is 134 years old

Fat Content Alters Quality

OTTAWA (CP) — Fat content in ground beef can make a difference to the quality of a dish, say home economists at the food advisory division of Agriculture Canada.

They advise buying the kind that provides the right amount of fat for the dish you are making. Under government regulations regular ground beef should contain no more than 30 per cent fat, medium no more than 23 per cent and lean ground beef no more than 17 per cent.

"With this in mind," say food advisory spokesmen, "buy regular ground beef for hamburgers or patties since they require enough fat for self-basting and to make the patties juicy and not too firm in texture."

They suggest medium or lean ground beef for casseroles or meat loaf when a firmer product is desired or when excess fat is not easily drained.

Ground beef may be refrigerated up to two days or frozen up to three months.

"When thawing, it is best to do so in the refrigerator, they say. "Cook soon after it is thawed or refreeze it once it is completely cooked. Casseroles and cooked dishes with ground beef keep in the freezer for a maximum of three months."

SURREY (CP) — Two 15-year-old youths who escaped from a group home here were in custody Friday following a series of shotgun holdups in an apartment block. Police received five complaints before the pair was apprehended.

Bouncy Time at Museum of Modern Art

By RITA REIF

NEW YORK (NYT) — Dean James Stewart Polshek of Columbia University's School of Architecture had just been catapulted from Ludwig Mies van der Rohe's bouncy chaise lounge in full view of hundreds of champagne-sipping furniture testers.

"It's grossly proportioned," he said.

The testing was the second part of an extraordinary two-part preview held the other evening at the Museum of Modern Art and at Knoll International. In the audience of top professionals that the Knoll attracted, Polshek was not alone in lacing his enthusiastic, even reverent comments ("Most of Mies is marvelous"), with criticism.

"Of course, the Barcelona is the most uncomfortable chair, said Philip Johnson, the architect, who helped to make the X-frame, shimmering steel chair a status symbol to affluent Americans. "But it's also the most beautiful." Then he flung himself on Mies' dimpled leather divan, as he says he does to relax most weekends. And, as he sprang to his feet, Johnson touched the couch's frame with obvious distaste, observing that it was "a hideous color."

Johnson never tried the controversial chaise (He didn't have to, he had owned one when it was new in 1931 and banished it to a closet decades ago when the rubber bands supporting the back broke.) But everyone else did, and virtually all who slid in, fell out. Even Betsy Glaeser, wife of the man who heads the museum's Mies collection, confessed "I didn't like it" after rising awkwardly from the chair with the sweeping metal frame.

In sharp contrast to the lively demonstration at Knoll, during which about 650 people poked, pushed, lifted, wriggled in, sat on, sprawled on, rocked in and gaped at the designs, the scene earlier at the Museum of Modern Art was as crisply controlled as a Sunday church service.

"Watch them mill around the altar," quipped Andrew MacNair with a wave at dozens of strollers moving about the platformed display in the hushed hall. It is there that Mies' designs and drawings of the 1920s and 1930s went on view and will remain through May 3.

The tony curtain-raiser preview offered for MacNair, who heads the evening program at the Institute for Architecture and Urban Studies, and most present, their first glimpse of this long-awaited show. Designed by Ludwig Glaeser, director of the Museum's Archives, the display of

Mies' designs is spread on a carpeted stage bisected by chrome-framed blue glass divider to separate, more or less, the museum's new acquisitions and reproductions from the older, more familiar designs, including the 1929 Barcelona chair.

"They have a stigma of elitism," Tim Merrill Prentice asserted, adding that what worries him most about the Mies show and furniture is that it seems to say "good designs cost lots of money." The lanky and bearded architect and sculptor is of another opinion and favors, instead, he said, "those modern interpretations of the ladder-back that come from North Carolina and cost less than $25 each."

The cost bothered many more than Prentice. Even Gordon Bunshaft, who said, emphatically, that he has never wavered in his enthusiasm for Mies' furniture ("It's serious design and, like good architecture, should not be subject to changing fashion preferences . . ."), complained "If only they weren't so expensive, I'd buy many."

Paul Rudolph rejected any discussion of the cost or comfort of Mies' chairs. All he wanted to talk about were the extraordinary detailed drawings revealed here for the first time that showed how Mies tried virtually every alternative in sketching chair backs, bases, arms and joints. "They are absolutely splendid." As for whether he'll buy the new designs to add to the Mies ice cream parlor chairs and furniture he already owns, the architect said:

"I personally want to do away with all furniture."

But most of the gathering, especially those architects and designers who played with the copies that they will help to popularize (or reject), at Knoll, seemed ready to buy the biggest chair of all — the recliner design Mies never saw executed in his lifetime and which is to cost about $1,100 when it becomes available in fall. (Other designs in this collection will range from about $325 to $1600.)

"It's no good for one — but for two it's dandy," Michael Wasserman, a furniture designer of the Pace Collection, said, beaming, at Dale Krevens, his blonde companion who was perched on the recliner. Throughout the evening it was never empty for more than a second or two, just as the Barcelona was virtually never occupied.

indoor gardens

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

Dear Readers: We've received so many letters requesting specific information on individual plants that we're going through the plants, one at a time, sharing all pertinent information. You will want to clip these columns as we'll be introducing you to some new potential plant friends as well as reintroducing you to old favorites.

HINDU ROPE PLANT. Not very long ago plant lovers were collecting the "safe" plants, such as ferns and palms. Now, the more unusual and strange the plant, the more desirable. Not that Hoya Carnosa Compacta (its real name) is THAT freaky, but it is unusual, to say the least!

Its leaves are twisted, almost gnarled. Ours looks like a green and pink necklace. We've had it for years and while it's very much alive, it grows very slowly. Every so often little pink flowers appear (as a special treat). They even smell good!

The Hindu rope plant doesn't come from India or Hindustan; originally they're from Asia and the Philippines. They live in your home in bright light, in tight pots and need water when dryish. A friend has a Hoya 15 years old, in a six-inch pot that has grown wild over a trellis on the shaded patio.

Hoya may take a while in adjusting to its new home and it may well be a year or so before flowers appear, so have patience. Fertilize lightly once a month in winter, every two weeks in summer because for Hoyas there is no real season to bloom; they could appear anytime.

At one time these plants were considered rare or unusual; today they can be found almost anywhere fine plants are sold.

KNIT AND CHAT

Second Time for Afghans

By MAY E. MacLEAN

This week, as requested by many readers, I am repeating the instructions I gave a year ago or so for knotted afghan squares. If you have any need of these, I do urge you to clip them now and put in a safe place. I get numerous requests to repeat various instructions after a week or so, as newspapers get thrown out before readers have had a chance to cut them out.

The original squares were worked in three shades on one color, light, medium and dark, but if you so wish you can disregard any color scheme, and use up all oddments of wool, providing of course they are all the same weight of wool, and by that I mean the same thickness.

You will need a pair of knitting needles suitable for the wool or yarn being used. Double knitting or knitted worsted could be knit on a No. 7 or No. 8 needle. These are the knitted "granny-square" instructions.

Using the dark shade, cast on four stitches. Instruction in the brackets are to be repeated the number of times stated immediately after the second bracket.

Second and every alternate row: — Knit.

Fifth row: — Knit one (wool forward, knit two, wool forward, knit one) repeat to end. Twenty-one stitches now on needle.

Seventh row: Knit one (wool forward, knit four, wool forward, knit one) repeat to end. Twenty-nine stitches now on needle.

Break off dark shade and join on light shade for eight row.

Ninth row: — Knit one (wool forward, knit six, wool forward, knit one), repeat to end. Thirty-seven stitches now on needle.

Continue to increase in this manner, changing to the medium shade on the fourteenth row, and when the seventeenth row has been completed, there should be 69 stitches on the needle. Cast off loosely and join the seam.

You'll find these instructions very easy to memorize and useful in using up oddments of wool for the making of afghans, etc. If you want to have a group project to raise funds by a raffle, I suggest you buy new wool, then get each member to make a certain number of the swuares. Before you know if, there will be enough to join together for the afghan. By using new tain number of the squares. should be nearly the same size.

This week's pattern is a very simple yet very beautiful baby shawl knitted with a three-ply fingering wool or sayelle. The lacey border is knitted separately, then sewn on afterwards.

If you are expecting a new addition to your family circle, this handsome shawl would make an ideal gift. Start now so that you have it knitted in plenty of time. The finished shawl will measure approximately 50 inches square and you don't have to be an expert knitter to try this one.

To order Leaflet No. 0172 send 75 cents in coin, plus a stamped, self-addressed return envetope, a long one if possible. If you do not have an envelope of stamp, please enclose an extra quarter to cover the cost of handling and postage and print your name and address. Send to May E. MacLean, Knit and Chat, Box B, 486 Montford Drive, Dollard des Ormeaux, Que. H9G 1M6.

Please be sure to state pattern numbers correctly and to enclose your stamped return envelope for faster service. Allow about two weeks for normal delivery. All patterns, including back numbers, are now 75 cents each.

Free for the Asking

Nearly all students who are currently using drugs do so without the knowledge of their parents. The lowest incidence of drug abuse is reported by students who must be home at a set hour both on weekends and weekdays.

The is some of the important information gleaned from the 12-page brochure "Coping With Drugs — The Psychological Factors of Teenage Drug Misuse".

The authors of this publication stress that adolescence is only one stage in the development towards becoming a full-fledged adult. Most adolescents feel somewhat inadequate and question their own worth. Drugs offer them acceptance by their peers, escape from reality, avoidance of responsibility and an expression of hostility against the moral values of their parents.

The brochure offers much valuable advice for every parent!

Write for it to: Council on Drug Abuse, 56 Esplanade Street East, Suite 303, Toronto, Ontario M5E 1A7.

Please allow at least 2-3 weeks for delivery.

KABALARIAN PHILOSOPHY
WHAT IS A NAME ANALYSIS?
There is an infallible law through which abstract qualities become material quantities, and through which science has learned to measure these quantities to release all the secrets of nature. That law is mathematics. Through name analysis, the same principle is used to measure human mind. To the average person, it seems almost incredible that a name could have anything to do with one's nature, one's experience in life, and one's health; yet to those who understand this principle, it is equally incredible that science has not discovered the influence of language upon the lives of those who use it.
The name analysis through the principle of mathematics gives a detailed analysis of your life, and reveals why the conditions of your life are as they are. It is a twenty to twenty-five page resume which reveals your characteristics, habits, desires, abilities, the state of your health, the type of associations to whom you are attracted and the environment into which you are drawn as well as your degree of success or failure in life. Also included is an explanation of the cyclic conditions in your attairs for a month and an overall forecast of the conditions of the present year. The accuracy will amaze you. Please note that this is not a handwriting analysis.
Plan to attend a PUBLIC LECTURE which includes the above subject. Brief analysis will be given in private to members of the audience upon their request.
Sunday, March 20, 2 P.M.
Held at the Sportsman Motor Inn

Teach Your Child To Stay Alone

DEAR ABBY: About advising that an 8-year-old child should not be left alone for three hours after school: At 8, my daughter not only stayed alone, she started dinner. At 10 she could prepare any meal as well as I could. At 12 she is learning to make her own clothes. Society today is plagued with irresponsible youths who are coddled until they are 16, after which someone tries to teach them "responsibility." The result: Many healthy young adults on welfare.

Of course, there is a risk in leaving a child alone. But then again, when we send our children to school, they can be picked up, kidnapped or even murdered in broad daylight. But we don't quit sending them, do we?

If this 8-year-old has been properly taught, and if Mom calls regularly to check on her, she will be safe and responsible. And when the time comes where she has to handle a situation and Mamma is not there, she will be prepared.

Change your mind, Abby.
A RESPONSIBLE MOM.

DEAR MOM: I applaud your efforts to teach your child responsibility, and wish all parents would follow your fine example, but unfortunately you are the exception —not the rule. Most 8-year-olds without supervision are not as "safe" as your lucky youngster.

DEAR ABBY: My dad takes a bath at least three times a week — but not alone. He takes MY TV into the bathroom with him. I've tried reasoning with him, but it doesn't work. (I'd like to cuss him out, but since I'm only 13 years old, that wouldn't be a good idea.)

Dear old Dad is not a dumb man, but he just won't quit taking my TV. And my mom says she won't get involved. Can you think of an approach that would help?
—STEAMED DAUGHTER.

DEAR STEAMED: Ask Pop to pop for a mini-TV and a suggestion on how you can earn it—for him! (P.S. And respectfully tell him not to touch the TV while he's in the tub, or he could get the shock of his life.)

Thompson Visits

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. Andrew Thompson, commissioner of the inquiry into the proposed Kitimat pipeline project, said Friday he plans to visit the area this weekend to meet area residents. Thompson will visit Terrace, Kitimat and Prince Rupert.

PHARMACY IN A NEW AGE
A salt-free diet for most people means various changes in shopping and cooking habits. Cooking without adding salt and ignoring the shaker would not normally cut out enough salt.
Foods that are high in salt are the ones to eliminate from the diet as quickly as possible. The most obviously high of these include the following: canned soups, vegetables, anchovies, oysters, olives, potato chips, pretzels, packaged nuts, ham, bacon, smoked meat, frankfurters, bologna, sausage, tomato juice, buttermilk, cheddar, cornbread, pickles, French and Italian dressings.
The pharmacist's advice should also be sought regarding antacids, nasal sprays, etc.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Bail was denied Friday in Victoria provincial court to one of two men charged with conspiracy to commit armed robbery and two counts of weapons possession.

Judge William Ostler rejected the bid by defence lawyer David Wilson on behalf of 28-year-old Ossie William Barnes, of 118-252 Gorge Road East.

Barnes and 20-year-old Patrick Norman Witter, of 326-252 Gorge Road East, are charged with conspiracy, possession of a weapon for a purpose dangerous to the public peace and possession of an unregistered, restricted weapon after being arrested Tuesday morning in the Shelbourne shopping plaza outside Coppen's Jewellery.

Wilson elected trial by judge without jury on behalf of Barnes before the show-cause hearing for bail.

Witter, represented by Robert Buffam, was remanded in custody until Monday for election and possible fixing of a preliminary hearing date. No bail application was made on Witter's behalf.

Ostler ordered a pre-sentence report for March 30 for 18-year-old Gavin Robert Prior, who changed his pleas to guilty on charges of possession of stolen property and impaired driving.

Prior was arrested Jan. 26 by Oak Bay police after a short pursuit from the Oak Bay Recreation Centre of what turned out to be a stolen car.

Mulligan, who withdrew a charge of auto theft, told the court Prior was sentenced to nine months definite and six months indefinite Feb. 5, 1976, on two counts of breaking and entering.

An 18-year-old Esquimalt youth who showed four juveniles how to "hot-wire" a car Jan. 3 was handed a suspended sentence, placed on eight months probation and ordered to perform 200 hours of community service work.

Jarvis Evans, of 827 Lampson, pleaded guilty to theft of a station wagon from a Colwood parking lot and was given the sentence by Ostler, who asked, "Don't you have anything better to do than to teach juveniles how to hot-wire a car?"

Edwin Turone, 21, of 1252 Denman, who received a one-month sentence Monday from Ostler for theft of two leather coats and obtaining lodgings by fraud from the Douglas Hotel, was handed an additional three months after pleading guilty to possession of stolen eight-track tapes valued over $200.

Court was told the tapes were stolen March 3 in Esquimalt and Turone attempted to pawn them for $40.

The judge recommended that the last sentence be served in a forestry camp.

Ostler reserved his decision until Tuesday on an application to change a plea from guilty to not guilty.

The application was made by lawyer Robert Higinbotham on behalf of 30-year-old James Michael Perey, of 942 Cloverdale.

Perey pleaded guilty March 2 to breaking into the premises of W. Campbell Construction, at 580 Ardesier, the day before and was remanded in custody until next week for sentencing.

Higinbotham said he was appointed after Perey realized he did not intend to plead guilty. Higinbotham said that his client did not fully understand the phrase "with intent to commit an indictable offence" in the breaking and entering charge.

Mulligan objected to the application because he felt Perey understood the charge and, according to the tape transcript of the proceedings, did not hesitate in his election or plea.

Mulligan said an unnecessary delay would be caused if the application was granted.

Ostler rejected Higinbotham's claim that Perey might have been in a "dazed" condition during the proceedings, stating that he would not have accepted any plea from Perey if he (Ostler) thought there was anything wrong with Perey.

Drinking-drivers fined Friday were: Leonard Albert Rooney, 27, of 207 Baillie Rd., $600; Joseph Balla, 44, of 1770 Denman, $500; Stephen Fortin, 25, of 1008 Tillicum, $500; Garth Thomas Armstrong, 18, of 3790 Casey Drive, $400; and Marilyn Wright, 41, of 1875 Feltham, $400.

Two men who pleaded guilty to two charges apiece involving trafficking in marijuana were sentenced in Victoria county court Friday to six months in jail.

Judge M. L. T. Drake said he had "very little alternative" but to impose the jail terms on Blair Gordon Birch, 28, of 889 Cloverdale, and Jack Leon Case, 35, of 914 Inverness.

Birch pleaded guilty Feb. 17 to trafficking in marijuana March 22, 1976, in Saanich. One baggie for $20 was involved.

Case admitted trafficking in marijuana, also in Saanich, March 22. That involved one kilo sold to undercover agents for $400.

Both men pleaded guilty to a joint charge of marijuana trafficking in Saanich March 11. That involved two ounces for $40.

Birch has a criminal record involving convictions for impaired driving, assault causing bodily harm and possession of marijuana. Case had no record.

Loggers Told To Bundle Booms

HARRISON HOT SPRINGS (CP) — British Columbia's coastal forest industry has to get busy bundling logs or the government will legislate an end to log debris with rules that might be restrictive and costly, the B.C. Towboat Industry Conference was told Friday.

Sig Techy, general manager of logging group services for B.C. Forest Products Ltd., said the industry has to stop loose sorting and storing of logs in coastal waters and towing logs in flat rafts.

He advocated bundling logs on land and barge transportation of the bundles.

"There have been tremendous improvements with equipment technology and we already have the expertise with dry land sorting, bundle booming and bundle barging," he said.

"We cannot convert all of our opeations overnight, but the pace at which we are moving can rightly be questioned."

He said close utilization standards have been in effect for more than a decade and these require companies to produce more logs which are not buoyant in salt water. our operations overnight, but However, many companies persist in loose handling of this tlype of wood in water, accepting sizeable losses.

'The elimination of detrimental procedures is overdue and this must be done voluntarily if we want to avoid being legislated into impractical and costly alternatives that could be even more financially burdensome ot the forest industry than the coastal logging guidelines imposed in recent years," said Techy.

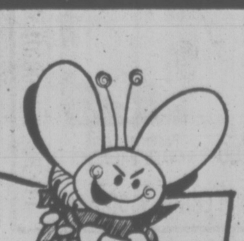
protective custody for your precious fur


Moths aren't the only things that will damage the supple splendour of your fur!
Storage in the home environment just can not ensure the right humidity and temperature levels to protect the suppleness of the pelt.
A plastic storage bag is the worst culprit for causing long term damage ... excess moisture damages the pile, excess heat will dry and crack the pelt backing — either can lead to pile loss and eventual bald spots.
Your fur, secure in our vaults, will be safe from theft and vandalism too!
• Fur storage in our temperature and humidity controlled vaults
• It can be cleaned or repaired while in our care
• We fill pick it up and return it to you via bonded carriers

Anglican women plan gathering at St. John's

A group of helping organizations will take part in the annual meeting of the Anglican Church Women of the Vancouver Island diocese of British Columbia at St. John's Anglican Church Tuesday and Wednesday.

Among those participating will be Ecumenical Women's Outreach, Indian Arts and Crafts, Bible Society, John Howard Society, Life Line and Mothers' Union.

Adventist offering to help missions

Three major projects in Europe and Africa will receive financial help from an offering at the Victoria Seventh-day Adventist Church next Saturday, according to Mrs. Kathleen Piper, press secretary.

Adventists collect an offering for world mission four times a year.

This quarter aid will go to the Northern Europe-West Africa division of mission, one of 10 such geographical units in the church, Mrs. Piper said.

Healer to speak

A faith healer from Palm Springs, Calif., will speak at the dinner meeting of the Full Gospel Businessmen's Fellowship International at 6:30 p.m. Monday, March 28, in the Empress Hotel.

The healer is Rev. Joe Poppell who began this part of his ministry following an experience several years ago.

Poppell was alone in a house where he had been praying and fasting for a long time, "when the Lord came into the room."

"I felt my spirit was about to leave my body. I became afraid and began to try to hold my body and spirit together," he said following the incident.

"The Lord began to speak to me and said, 'If you believe, I will open blind eyes, the dumb will be able to speak and the lame will walk.' "

Sometime later, he began to pray for people to be healed.

"And even for miracles," he added. "And as I continued to fast and pray I became convinced more and more that God wanted me in the healing ministry."

"Jesus Christ is the great physician," Poppell said, "and all things are possible for those that love him and believe."

Presbytery rally set

The Presbytery of Vancouver Island of the Presbyterian Church has planned a rally from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. next Saturday at the Village Green Inn in Duncan. The program will consist of group sessions and role playing. Subjects to be explored are family living, crime and punishment and organized gambling.

Women Aglow

The regular luncheon meeting of Sidney Women Aglow will be held at 11:45 a.m. Wednesday in the Travelodge on Beacon Avenue. The program will consist of testimonials and sharing. Reservations may be made at 656-3639.

Address on origins of British Israel

Mrs. Dorothy Abraham will tell about the origins of the British Israel movement at a meeting in the Dominion Hotel at 3 p.m. Sunday.

Mrs. Abraham has studied British Israel for 55 years and has examined much that has been written against it.

"I am convinced that it has the answer to the world's problems of today," she said this week, "and gives one a vision of a new day dawning."

FULL GOSPEL BUSINESSMEN'S FELLOWSHIP DINNER
6:30 P.M., MONDAY, MARCH 28, IN THE EMPRESS HOTEL

Rev. Poppell is well-known among Full Gospel Businessmen for his healing ministry. Some years ago he was alone in a house, praying and fasting when the Lord came into the room and said "If you believe, I will open blind eyes, the dumb will be able to speak and the lame will walk." Since then, many people including cancer patients have been miraculously healed by God through the prayers of this man of faith.

You can't do everything. But you can do something! That something—to sponsor a needy child—is precious in the heart of Jesus Christ.

Your help gives a needy child love and care, schooling, food, clothes and medical attention. You receive a photograph, personal profile and letters.

For a quarter century, World Vision Childcare has been diligently striving to care for needy children around the world. Today, World Vision cares for more than 125,000 children in 43 countries— all in the spirit and love of Jesus.

Passover Seder planned April 2, 3

A Passover Seder, conducted by Rabbi Leo Abrami of Congregation Emanuel, will be held at 6 p.m. April 2 and 3 at the Empress Hotel.

Passover is the Biblical holiday which commemorates the Exodus from Egypt and is known in Jewish tradition as the Festival of Freedom.

The word seder is Hebrew for order. It refers to the order in which the Passover ritual is conducted.

Abrami said this week that the public is welcome at the celebration. The all-inclusive price for the Seder dinner is $10.50 per person.

Reservations should be made at once. Cheques may be sent to Passover, 4394 Shelbourne, Victoria. Further information is available at 477-2395.

Unity plans seminar in city next week

A special three-day intensive Unity seminar will be held in the Georgian Lounge of the Empress Hotel from 7 to 9 p.m. Sunday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Leading the study will be Rev. Scott Sherman of Crystal Lake, Ill., outreach director of the Association of Unity churches.

Subjects for discussion are Unity: Dynamic Laws of Fulfillment, Unity Viewpoint on Meditation, and Love, the Action Verb.

The program was arranged for Victoria because hundreds of persons from the area requested Unity services through their letters to Silent Unity, visits to Unity Village or conversations with ministers already here, according to Sherman.

Prossnitz to play

Pianist Walter Prossnitz will be presented in recital at St. John's Anglican Church, 1611 Quadra, at 8 p.m. Wednesday.

His program will include the Chromatic Fantasy and Fugue by Bach, The Wanderer Fantasy by Schubert, and the Strauss Sonata, Op. 5. He will also perform Murray Adaskin's piano sonata of 1950.

Prossnitz teaches at the Victoria Conservatory of Music and Pearson College of the Pacific. He has performed extensively in British Columbia, Eastern Canada and the U.K., and on American and Canadian television.

Mormons to hear gospel

Mormon Elder Franklin Richards will speak at a 10 a.m. Sunday meeting, open to the public, in the Victoria chapel of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 2990 Quadra.

Richards, who is president of the First Council of Seventy of his church, is in town for a conference today and Sunday.

He will present the theme of worldwide missionary efforts and the responsibility of Mormons to share the gospel with every neighbor.

Richards, a former Utah lawyer and national commissioner of the U.S. Federal Housing Administration in Washington, D.C., is engaged in the mortgage banking business. He is also managing director of the elchizedek Priesthood department of his church.

Observance Sunday for Baha'i New Year

RELIGION
Editor: Don Gain

This is the time of year chosen by the Bab, one of the principal figures in the Baha'i faith, for the celebration of the New Year.

It marks the first day of the first month in a new 19-month calendar designed by the Bab. Each month has 19 days.

The names of the months are based on the various attributes of God. On the first day of each month Baha'i communities gather to celebrate a feast which involves devotion, consultation on the affairs of the community, and fellowship.

The last month of the year, from March 2 to 21, is set aside for fasting and prayer in preparation for the forthcoming year. The fast is observed from sunrise to sunset each day.

Prior to the start of this last month, a four-day period called the Intercalary Days equalizes the calendar to 365 days and is observed as the gift-giving time of the Baha'i year.

It is the conviction of the Baha'is that the lives and teachings of both the Bab and Baha'u'llah, who came after him, have infused a fresh capacity into the life of mankind.

They see the achievements of mankind in the fields of teachnology, mass communications, transportation and science in the past 100 years as the physical manifestations of this new capacity.

With the coming of the Bab and Baha'u'llah, they believe, the religion of God has been renewed once more, this time to culminate in the zenith of its achievement with the unification of the entire human race in one common faith.

Greater Victoria Baha'is will mark their New Year with a celebration in the Empress Hotel Sunday night.

Cleaning Out a Notebook

audrey johnson

There comes a day in every columnist's year when a variety of pieces of information have accumulated in the notebook and keep tugging at your sleeve — use me, use me!

So to clear the decks for busy days to come (including the Music Festival, which is just about a month away), let's see what we've got.

A lot of the notes are concerned with professional theatre activity — lightning glimpses of what is happening as this season winds down and the next begins to take shape. Progress is alowly but definitely being made in some areas.

Kaleidoscope Theatre, for example, has had a good year and will definitely be performing and instructing at the National Arts Centre in Ottawa in May. Artistic director Elizabeth Gorrie says the plan is to perform The Snow Goose, her original adaptation of the poignant Paul Gallico story, and to give a series of workshops on masks and mask-making.

They hope to be in Toronto the week before their two-day stay at the Arts centre and set up some public performances in the big city, including their successful school hows, The Minotaur and Have You Met All the People in Your Backyard.

Kaleidoscope's highly imaginative style of theatre received an airing at the B.C. Drama Teachers' conference earlier this year and as a result garnered the Ottawa invitation and three months of bookings on the road which the company is fulfilling at the present time.

Liz Gorrie says Kaleidoscope's work is all directed at stretching the child's imagination — "keeping the sense of wonder alive." Heaven knows it's necessary when so much of the entertainment and ideas that children are exposed to now are machine-produced cliches and inventions that seem designed to eliminate creativity.

Bastion Theatre, with one more show on this season's list plus their co-sponsorship with Vancouver's David Lui of Michael Redgrave's visit to Victoria in April, is planning extended runs for next season. This means reducing the number of plays from six to five, but will offer a much better seat choice to the general public outside Bastion subscribers.

"We've had fantastic co-operation from John Dyck (Playhouse manager) in arranging the extended run," says Ed Stephenson, "and from Allan Purdy also, who changed his Actors' Association dates for next fall to accommodate us."

Stephenson and Bastion general manage Ron Pollock are so pleased with the school tours that plans are in the making for hiring a writer-director for next season to prepare an elementary and a senior school production. The work involves the assembling of preparatory kits to go out to the subscribing schools prior ot the company's visit. "Budget permitting, we hope to do three experimental plays next season in addition to our mainstage production," says Ed. "Lack of funds will be the only reason we would reduce that part of the program."

Another lack — rehearsal space — is going to be a problem. "We'll be out of the old courthouse — the Maritime Museum building — so it's essential that we find something else," Pollock points out.

At that point the three of us were thinking about a couple of buildings closely adjacent to the McPherson that would be ideal and practical as rehearsal and workshop quarters — auxiliary accommodation desperately needed — to be used by all groups producing regularly in the McPherson.

Former Victoria Symphony conductor Otto-Werner Mueller, speaking of magic, is being regarded as something of a wizard in Edmonton where he made an unscheduled guest appearance last weekend.

The Edmonton Symphony Orchestra, with a series of three concerts in the works from Friday through Sunday, including the world premiere of Symphony No. 2 by Malcolm Forsyth, South African-born ESO's principal trombone, were left without a conductor when Pierre Hetu was stricken with a heart attack early in the week.

Commenting on the performance, Keith Ashwell in the Edmonton Journal said "... his conducting was doubly triumphant: on his own behalf he directed the orchesta explicitly and produced finely defined music and, with little preparation, brought off for Malcolm Forsyth an exciting premiere of his second symphony."

Words Don't Help

WOODSTOCK, Ont. (CP) — Adults can't just tell a child something and expect feedback, says Ada Schermann, assistant professor of early childhood at the Institute of Child Study, University of Toronto. She says putting words into a child's mouth doesn't improve their understanding, which develops through the child's personal involvement and experiences.

'Counter Tenor' Coming

Internationally famous counter-tenor James Bowman will come to Victoria next month to sing the alto arias in the Amity Singers' presentation of the Bach St. John Passion.

Bowman has performed regularly with the English Opera Group at Covent Garden, Sadler's Wells, the Aldeburgh Festival and Glyndebourne Festival Opera, and is featured on numerous recordings.

The counter tenor is a rare male voice whose extreme range is approximately two octaves and a fourth. The quality is that of an essentially masculine voice and at its best, as in the case of Bowman, is clear, flexible and incisive. The great repertoire of music from Blow to Handel and Bach takes on a new significance when it is sung by (such) voices for which it was written rather than by mezzo soprano and contralto, says an entry in Grove's Dictionary of Music.

Public Announcement

Ottawa, March 10, 1977

The Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission announces the publication of a draft amendment to the CRTC Rules of Procedure. The purpose of this amendment is to streamline the public hearing process by allowing all parties more time in which to study applications.

The proposed changes are outlined in the appended and are as follows:

1. Applications will be made public and scheduled for a public hearing at least 45 days (instead of 35) before the hearing.
2. Four announcements (instead of two) will be made by the licensee outlining his application.
3. Only one copy of any intervention will be required by the Commission.
4. Interventions will have to be filed at least 20 days (instead of 15) before the commencement of the public hearing.
5. Documents will be deemed to have been served on the 4th day (instead of the 3rd) following the day on which it was mailed if sent by registered mail.

The Commission invites all interested persons to submit to the undersigned at 100 Metcalfe Street, Ottawa, Ontario K1A 0N2, not later than April 15, 1977, representations with respect to the proposed amendment.

'CASSANDRA' and 'CASANOVA'

A Silly Ride, an Ego Trip

Two Movies Reviewed By NORA HUTCHISON

Lately, going to the movies has almost become a chore, and I'm beginning to begrudge the time wasted in dark theatres in pursuit of that elusive combination of entertainment and art that makes movie-going worth my time. This year, there seem to have been few movies that have caught the full attention of anyone in the audience; as they troop out you can read the dissatisfaction in their faces. Filmmakers are putting everything on the surface; nothing is held in reserve for closer inspection — it's all rapid-action flash, and as obvious as a commercial. There's no time left for reflection, for pulling together the nuances of plot. Are the filmmakers becoming so unsure of themselves and their product that they're afraid to leave space to accommodate our responses?

The Cassandra Crossing is a perfect example of the kind of slick, out-of-a-can kind of movie-making that causes me despair when I consider the possible fate of movies. Directed, written and scripted by George Pan Cosmatos, and produced by Carlo Ponti, the filmmakers have tried to combine elements of some of the most currently salable horrors — sci-fi plots about deadly bacteria escaping their maximum security test tubes, concentration camp recollections, heroin-running across international borders and disaster smash-ups. The plot concerns a U.S. Army Intelligence detail trying to contain a trainful of passengers, over 1,000, we're told, who have been exposed to a carrier of bubonic plague.

The cast of characters includes the usual mix you'd find in any train opus — a brilliant neurosurgeon, his twice-divorced authoress wife, a group of ski bums, the wife of a German ammunitions manufacturer and her young man companion, a CIA agent, a kindly old Jew who has survived the camps, nuns, kids, harried mothers, and pushy Americans on sabbatical.

I wouldn't have gone near the movie if it hadn't been for the lure of the cast: Sophia Loren, the authoress; Martin Sheen, the gigolo; Richard Harris, the doctor; Ava Gardner, the manufacturer's wife; Lee Strasberg, the old man; Burt Lancaster, the Army Intelligence man; and Ingrid Thulin as a Swedish doctor who tried to persuade the U.S. Army from sending the trainload of potentially infected people to their death — but I was foolish to have expected that their presence would have made a difference to the movie's make-up.

Harris, Loren, Gardner and Lancaster all look worn-out, and only Strasberg seems to be comfortable with his age and his role. Ingrid Thulin, one of Bergman's finest actresses, however, is the greatest disappointment. She has aged unremarkably, and now has the countenance of a disconsolate haus-frau. Her role is flat but her characterization is even flatter. Like Liv Ullmann, she seems to need Bergman to bring out the best in her.

Although I hadn't expected The Cassandra Crossing to be much more than a glossy disaster epic that might prove to be mildly diverting, I had expected Fellini's Casanova to be entertaining on a grand scale. For three years, word has been circulating about the film and its lavish production costing upwards of $12 million. A history of Casanova seems such an obvious choice for a Fellini film — the most famous libertine was at various times in his life a soldier, a gamester, a churchman, an engineer, a magician and a spy. He was, as well, a scholar who managed to live best by his wits, his skill with the dice, and his way with women. In his old age, he took up a post as librarian to Count Waldstein in a secluded castle in Bohemia, and it was there that he wrote his memoirs on which Fellini's sketches are based.

Casanova's history lends itself to a satiric mode, and since Fellini has a genuine talent for satire the film could have been a mocking, stylish epic of sexual mechanics and engineering, but instead Fellini appears to have spent all his time and energy on the creation of baroque imagery that reminds us uncomfortably of Ken Russell's excesses of taste.

Unfortunately for those of us primed for a Fellini adventure, the movie never really gets started. We come in on Casanova in his early 30's, at the height of his reputation as a libertine, and three hours later, after numerous amourous episodes, we bow out on Casanova as an old man, dancing on a frozen Venetian canal with his great love, a mechanical doll. In between, we've mostly been bored. There's really not a great deal that anyone can do with scenes of sexual athletics once the camera and the performers have gone a few rounds.

Donald Sutherland, who is a loose, casual sort of actor, playing a character who delighted in artifice, who played so many roles he lost his sense of self, but he manages reasonably well to convey a feeling for the egotistical dandy whose swollen head more often than not trips up his feet.

It's hard to know whether Fellini's heart was really in this picture, or whether he believed that as a potential money maker it could provide him with the freedom and the funds to do something more contained. Casanova appears to have gone beyond Fellini's means of control. Three hours of watching one extraordinary ego attempt to make art from the story of another extraordinary ego is too much for anyone to comfortably endure.

The clash of personalities — Fellini's and Casanova's — rings through this production. Fellini has grown too selfish to be interested in anyone else — he is his own best material. "I have invented my own life. I have invented it specifically for the screen. I know the unreality of it all: its limitations, the feeling of exhaltation and extravagance which it brings, the dangerous romantic risks, but outside the cinema, I know no other way in which I can feel at ease, and in tune with my own self." It's becoming so that reading about Fellini in the character of a filmmaker is more fun than going to his movies.

SUTHERLAND AS CASANOVA . . . baroque imagery.

Verdi's Requiem At UVic Gymn

By AUDREY JOHNSON

What will the University of Victoria's annual Taylor Scholarship concert of 1978 produce in the way of a musical work, one wonders. Brahms' Academic Festival Overture? Or some Wagnerian outpouring of triumph?

Or better still a Canadian composer's hymn to the rewards of patience and persistence in the clutches of perversity?

Whatever, that concert, barring extreme adversity, should be performed in the 1,000-seat concert hall of the new university centre now in the process of construction.

In the meantime it's over to the old gymnasium on UVic campus next week for a performance by the UVic orchestra and chorus of Verdi's Requiem. The event takes place Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. and will be conducted by James Walker.

Joining in the performance of this superbly eloquent work will be soloists Alexandra Browning, soprano; Audrey Glass, mezzo; Larry Potts, tenor, and Garth Gislason, bass.

Browning and Glass are both native Vancouverites. The former made her professional debut in 1966 with Britten's English Opera Group. She has appeared at the Aldeburgh and Edinburgh Festivals and has toured Europe.

She returned to Canada in 1975 and became first artist-in-residence at UBC. She has performed frequently in Vancouver with BBC and CBC.

Ms. Glass has been part of the Vancouver Opera Association's training program and a resident artist with the company for two years. She has performed numerous roles on tour and presented many recitals.

Potts has sung the Requiem role with the Mid-Columbia Symphony of Richland, Wash.

A well-known Victoria singer, Gislason has performed extensively in Canada and England and most recently was seen in the major role of the Count in the Van Isle Opera Society's Marriage of Figaro.

Tickets for the Requiem are available at the music department office in the MacLaurin Building or from chorus members. Proceeds go to the Taylor music scholarship fund.

BROWNING . . . soloist

Montoya Here April 1

Regarded by many people the world over as the living symbol of Flamenco music, Carlos Montoya comes to Victoria for a single concert April 1.

Before Montoya, the Flamenco guitar was used only to accompany dancers and singers. He has performed with such great names as La Argentina, Vicente Escudero, Carmen Amaya and many others.

However, it was Montoya who believed that Flamenco guitar was worthy of a full concert recital and he was thus the first Flamenco guitarist to display his artistry in a solo concert. He is now known as the most recorded Flamenco artist in musical history.

Recital at Art Gallery

A joint recital by cellist Molly Wilbur and piantist Kristine Beny, will take place Sunday at 3 p.m. at the Greater Victoria Art Gallery, 1040 Moss. Ms Wilbur is a member of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra and studies with Linda Hougland-Daniels.

She obtained her Bachelor of Music degree from the University of Wisconsin, studied in Switzerland on scholarship, and has played in the Shenandoah Valley Music Festival with the American Symphony League Orchestra.

Ms. Beny is a music graduate of the University of Victoria and has appeared many times on local concert platforms. She has studied with Robin Wood and is on the Conservatory of Music faculty.

Gallery doors open at 2 p.m. There is no charge for the concert.

Prossnitz Gives Concert

Outstanding young Victoria pianist, Walter Prossnitz, will be presented in recital Wednesday at St. John's Church, Quadra, at 8 p.m. His concert platform debut was made at the age of 12 and since then he has performed extensively in British Columbia as well as in Eastern Canada and the United States.

His appearances have also included work with CBC and Canadian and American television. He has played with the Victoria Symphony and he also teaches at Victoria Conservatory and Pearson College of the Pacific. Future plans include spending some time studying in Europe.

Prossnitz' program on Wednesday will include the Chromatic Fantasy and Fugue by Bach, the Wanderer Fantasy by Schubert, Sonata Op. 5

AT THE GALLERIES

Halfyard Wonderland is the intriguing title of an exhibition coming soon to Karibu's Upper Gallery at 565 Johnson. The show is of drawings, batiks and prints by Port Alberni artist Aileen Devereaux

Her work has been inspired by the charming fantasy world of folk dolls originated by the late John Halfyard. A selection of these dolls will be on view at the same time.

Born in Prince Rupert, Devereux has been a long-time resident of Port Alberni and, though largely self-taught, was winner of a scholarship premitting a summer of artistic development at Vancouver College of Art. She is the winner of numerous awards and prizes in jury showings.

She porvided a home for the nearly blind and deaf creator of the dolls, which are recreations of his Jersey Island childhood impressions. The dolls have been exhibited in Toronto and Vancouver but this exhibition will be their first showing in Victoria.

Previewing of the exhibition will occur Friday from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. and the gallery will also be open on Sunday, March 27 from 2 to 4 p.m.

The third Vancouver Island Juried Photography Show will open at the Secession Gallery in Open Space, Monday at 8 p.m. The exhibition consists of 35 photographs by 23 photographers selected from a total of 114 entries from 60 Vancouver Island persons.

Selection was made by Victoria artist Jack Kidder and Vancouver photography teacher Jim Breukelman. Both color and black and white prints are included with emphasis on the latter. Subjects range form pastoral to experimental work. The exhibition will continue through April 9 at the temporary gallery, 1960 Government.

Invitiations are going out to artists from the Vancouver Art Gallery which, in September, will devote its entire exhibition space to a show of recent work by B.C. artists. The scope of the exhibition is wide, ranging through drawing, painting, sculpture, graphic arts, photography and video tapes.

Artists who have not already been contacted are asked to submit slides and/or photographs of work completed no earlier than January of 1976.

Material must be submitted by June 15 and addressed to B.C. Artists' Exhibition, care of Celia Pickles, Curatorial Secretary, The Vancouver Art Gallery, 1145 West Georgia, Vancouver V6E 3H2.

Gothic Thriller at UVic

One of the great antique treasures of the English theatre is a Gothic-style play entitled The Revenger's Tragedy, written about 1607 by, it is believed, Cyril Tourneur. It is the subject of a University of Victoria threatre department production which will open Thursday at the Phoenix Theatre.

It is in our terms a thriller, full of carnal, bloody and unnatural acts, casual slaughters and mayhem. As in all thrillers, there is a sense of contrast and parallel between the disordered world of the play and the larger world of the audience. In a setting fraught with intrigue and vice the characters of The Revenger's Tragedy act out their conflicts.

Director of the play is Dr. Alan Hughes, who has been a faculty member of the UVic theatre department for the last three years. A Doctor of Theatre History from the University of Birmingham, he taught for five years at Macquarrie University in Sydney, Australia.

Writer, playwright and one-time owner-manager of the Straw Hat Players of Port Carling, Ont., Dr. Hughes has a rich background of theatre to bring to the task of directing this exciting 17th century revenge drama.

Box office opened Friday and the production will run nightly from Thursday, except Sunday, through April 2 with curtain at 8 p.m. For further information and reservations call the Phoenix box office, 477-4821.

Tips on Saving Home Grown Seed

GARDENING
jack beastall

The subject of saving home grown seed has been dealt with several times in this column, usually in the fall when most questions are received.

Since the selection of seed-bearing plants starts at germination time and continues through the season until the seed is ripe, it seems advisable to discuss this phase of gardening in late winter, thus enabling the gardener to plan the steps ahead of time.

The only reasons for saving home grown seed today is for the personal satisfaction of accomplishment and the chance of improving a variety that already pleases and does well in the particular environment of the garden in which it is grown.

Fifty years ago a gardener was wise to save seed of a good vegetable variety, but the strict standards set for all commercially produced seed today assures the highest quality at all times.

Nevertheless, it is an enlightening experience to work on a variety for a few years and by selection to obtain a distinct improvement in the plant's habit of growth or production.

Peas and beans are the two vegetables from which most gardeners attempt to save seed, probably because the crop is produced a few months after sowing, whereas other vegetables, carrots for instance, produce a root one year which is lifted and stored, and must be replanted the next year to obtain seed.

The practice followed by most gardeners is to pick all the peas or beans needed for immediate meals and processing and leave the few pods that develop late in the season to dry on the vines.

Since these late pods are produced on plants already weakened by heavy crop production and growing in a soil depleted of plant nutrients, we actually save the poorest seeds the plants are able to produce.

It is the seed produced from the first perfect flowers on young vigorous plants early in the season that must be saved if we are to maintain the present qualities or obtain a desirable improvement.

A term associated with seed production is "to rogue", which is the pulling-up and discarding of all plants which do not come up to the required standards for good seed production.

In the home garden we do not pull-up and discard our vegetable plants, but we "rogue" by selecting plants with the qualities we are seeking and marking these for seed production only.

The following is the basic procedure with peas and beans in the home garden. For convenience we shall refer only to peas, although beans are handled in the same way.

To start we assume you have purchased a packet of early pea seed of a variety you have grown previously and found exceptionally good.

You now require a supply of small stakes about 15 ins. long, some plastic [illegible] in assorted colors, a[illegible] notebook in which t[illegible] a record of what has b[illegible]e.

Sow the purchased [illegible]d in the usual way. To obtain good seed for stock we need the strongest seedlings that emerge. These are usually the first to break through the soil.

The six strongest looking seedlings to appear are marked by placing a stake nearby and attaching a colored plastic, say red. The date of emergence and the marker color are recorded in the notebook.

We then wait for the first flowers and mark those plants with a blue ribbon, recording it in the notebook.

The staked plants are checked at least once a week during the waiting period, noting the progress of growth, size of leaves and general well-being.

It is likely, especially when new to gardening, to change the mind frequently in regard to the plants selected, but after a few year's experience you will select with uncanny accuracy.

Never hesitate to remove a stake from a plant that does does not come up to the standard you have set for a good selection, nor to mark another plant that appears to be making better progress.

Up to this point we have selected for early emergence and early flowering. The next thing we want is full sized pods for the variety being grown.

Different varieties of peas and beans make different length pods, and the number of seeds contained depends on the pod length.

Early peas may produce five peas to a pod while maincrop varieties vary from seven to ten.

If we come across a five-seeded variety producing seven-seeded pods we have an improvement worth perpetuating if possible.

As the pods fill out we add another colored ribbon to the stakes of the plants having the best pods, or we place a colored marker against a good podded plant that has no other stake.

At this point it is time to decide how many seeds we need for next year. If we decide on 50 we can select a marked plant with 12 five-seeded pods, or eight pods with eight seeds in each.

Our first choice will be a plant having every ribbon color on the stake; second choice will be a plant which had one or two exceptional characteristics worth trying to develop.

As soon as we decide on the quality of seed to be saved and the plants that are to bear that seed, we remove the stakes from all other plants in the row.

The growing tips are removed from the seed-bearing plants to prevent any further growth and to direct all the energy into producing top quality seed. If any more flowers should appear above the top pods they are removed. No pods are taken from these plants for eating.

The seed-bearing plants will mature long before the balance of the row has finished producing, and they are allowed to wither with the seed pods attached.

If we are ambitious we can select for more than one attribute. One plant may be selected for earliness, another for the number of seeds in a pod, another for superior strength and vigorous growth, or for excessive dwarfness.

The harvested seed is kept separate and numbered according to the notebook record. Each group is sown by itself the following year and reselected in the same way. In three to five years it is possible to have an improved strain all your own.

If you are successful you will not only agree that it has been a lot of fun, you will also discover that your powers of observation have also improved. Success or not, you gain rather than lose.

Work For Week

If soil suitable, lift and divide perennial asters, phlox and delphiniums if these are more than two-year size. Replant outer sections with roots, into freshly composted soil.

Look for and buy new alpine plants for rock garden. Always sold either in or newly removed from small pots; many will have buds and flowers.

If weather and soil is suited for the job, rhododendrons and other broad leaves flowering shrubs should be planted. Camellias and rhodos should be at same depth as in nursery or in container — never deeper or there will be no flowers next year.

In vegetable plot, sow Laxtons Progress peas with a few spinach and early lettuce seeds between rows to be used before peas need the full space.

Also, sow broad beans if not already done, parsnips, a few parsley and swiss chard.

336,461 Bureaucrats Outside B.C.

OTTAWA (CP) — There were 336,461 employees working for provincial and territorial governments — excluding B.C. — in December, Statistics Canada says.

The total was a decrease of 3.7 per cent from September.

Gross payroll for the employees in the fourth quarter of 1976 was $1.194 billion, up 8.6 per cent from the previous three-month period, the agency said. The increase was due to an additional pay period during the quarter for employees paid every two weeks, as well as retroactive wage increases.

HELENSKI AGREEMENT IGNORED BY SOVIETS
We have received information from the family of Georgi Vins that he is very sick. The director of the camp in which he is detained said "We do not run a santorium." As a result he is not given proper medical treatment and is not allowed to receive either vitamins or medicine. The family asks people everywhere to ask the Red Cross or any other humanitarian organization to intervene on behalf of Georgi Vins. Further, to protest to Soviet authorities the bad treatment he receives and demand that he at least be allowed to receive onions and garlic needed to help him eat the bad prison food.

Please protest the inhuman treatment, as forbidden under the "Helsinki Agreement," of all Christians and dissidents in Communist prisons and mail your letter with an onion and a garlic to: Embassy U.S.S.R., 285 Charlotte Street, Ottawa, Ontario, K1N 8L5.

Please do not think that this will not help. It will have a tremendous impact if thousands of individuals over Canada do this simple act, which will not take any more than 15 minutes of your time. Also please inform your friends. We ask you to tell us as well by completing and mailing the coupon on the bottom of this form to: Voice of the Martyrs, P. O. Box 38, St. Thomas, Ontario, N5P 3T5.

—YES, I mailed my letter of protest together with an onion and a garlic per your request.

Whirlwinds Rip Calgary's 'Concrete Canyon' Centre

CALGARY (CP) — High-rise towers have turned downtown Calgary into a "concrete canyon" buffeted by strong gusts and whirlwinds that could prove dangerous to pedestrians.

Joseph de Krasinski, an aerodynamics expert, says there is little that can be done now to improve the situation.

"If you built a town from scratch you could think about wind orientation," said Dr. de Krasinski, a University of Calgary mechanical engineer who has studied wind and structures for six years.

"We have a cement jungle already, so one more building really won't make a difference."

Engineers had spent large amounts of time and money reinforcing buildings to withstand heavy winds found at high levels but "it's only recently they've started to worry about whether pedestrians below would be killed."

A single high-rise doesn't cause too many wind problems for passers-by, but if two tall buildings are set side by side, the ground level atmosphere can be unpleasant, de Krasinski said.

"It's the interplay between the buildings that is bad."

When wind hits a tall building, he said, it will create a high-pressure area to about three-quarters of its height.

If the wind is strong enough, the high-pressure mass, which is different than the air inside the building, can force windows and building trim loose, and even lift them off.

Since air moves to fill available space, part of the wind that hits the face of a high-rise moves over the roof while the rest blows straight down.

The current pedestrians get is wind blowing away from the building.

When two tall buildings are close together wind can bounce from one structure to another, increasing velocity and creating whirlwinds, gusts and calm spaces that whip pedestrians with accumulated dust and garbage, de Krasinski said.

He said the more complex the concourse below the building, the more turbulent the wind will become.

Overhead walkways have been another major drawback to sidewalk travellers' comfort.

Over-the-street corridors trap downward-moving air from surrounding buildings and keep the high-velocity currents down at the pedestrian's level, he said.

Structural adaptations, like rounding off corners of highrises, can alleviate the problem, but won't "cure" downtown wind tunnels.

Wind studies in building planning stages would show where problems would exist and indicate the best places for entrances and pedestrian concourses.

While de Krasinski says the studies "should be routine" in planning downtown developments, only a few builders have requested them so far.

The university's mechanical engineering division has facilities for studying wind patterns and fluctuations and for determining where snowdrifts are likely to accumulate around a planned structure.

Strange Bunker Mates

AHLBORG, West Germany (CP) — The woods surrounding this picture-postcard village on the edge of the Black Forest are a long way from the forests of Ontario, British Columbia or the Maritimes.

But 19 Portuguese soldiers, guests of the 4th Canadian Mechanized Brigade Group (CMBG), found it even farther from the sunshine of their homeland of Angola.

The 19—two officers and 17 non-commissioned officers—were here to observe 33 Canadian soldiers undergoing combat leadership training.

When they return to Portugal, the soldiers—some of them veterans of service in Africa—will form the basis of a cadre to set up a mobile tank force similar to the 4th CMBG.

To observe, they had to take part. This meant living outdoors with no tents, sleeping on the ground in sleeping bags in temperatures which fell to 10 degrees below breezing.

"It's too cold," said Lieut. Jose Sequeira of Lisbon. His garrison cap—resembling a flopping Sherlock Holmes headgear—was crammed inside the hood of a full-length parka borrowed from the Canadians.

Cpl. Ghislain Francoeur of Edmundston, N.B., explained how, on the previous day, he had had to send the Portuguese commander, a captain, back to camp in Lahr in a Jeep.

"He was burning up with fever and chills," the medical corporal said.

Cpl. Al Copp of Vancouver said there was a language barrier between the Canadians and the Portuguese, only two of whom spoke English.

"We tried to tell them that, when they wash in the morning, to strip to the waist and then, after they dry off, to put on their clothes. They didn't believe us. They piled on everything they had and then washed. No wonder they got cold. They thought we were nuts."

Cpl. Bob Evans of Port Colborne, Ont., also tried to give the shivering Portuguese a coldweather tip by showing them how to roll up their sleeping bag liners and use them as scarves.

39 PERSONALS

YOUR MONEY OR YOUR LIFE. Please read Thursday, March 17th, Vancouver Sun Page 53 about Team Policing. The article says that Vancouver Police Superintendent — Tom Herdman, who is in charge of Team Policing, said that the Department's main concern is to get the policeman back into the community where he can be identified as a good guy worthy of respect. Lets hope city council members while discussing the Police Budget for 1977 behind closed doors will allow sufficient funds to increase the Victoria Police Force. The city of Victoria can then once again have at least two policemen walking the streets of Victoria everyday and this will make it a safer place for citizens that live and work in the Victoria city area. I am prepared to start a petition to the Victoria City Council asking for ten extra policemen. Your City's Watchdog, C. Joe Richards, 383-6259.

CHARACTER HOME

Located close to downtown, parks, sea and shopping. This spacious home is ideal for family living and entertaining with all the modern appointments combined with the warmth and tradition of the early 1900s. Panelled den, spacious entrance hall, living room, entertainment size dining room, modern kitchen, serving pantry, sun porch and bathroom on the main floor. Upstairs — three bedrooms all with walk-in closets, a private balcony for whatever turns you on, and a bathroom that wows! Downstairs— an in-law suite with private entrance for you know who. The small well cared for lot with separate garage won't make you a slave of the soil. All this in 3,500 sq. ft. including 5 appliances, 4 refuse cans and drapes on 26 windows. The price was $110,000 but we're getting hungry and the trim needs painting so try us at $105,000.
P.S. It also makes a good bachelor's pad. Call Jim or Jim at 388-6208 and 388-7311 days or 382-1129 evenings.

EXTRA LOT

This lovely home, built in 1943, has 2,000 sq. ft. of luxury living space on two floors. Located in the preferred Cadboro Bay area close to the sea and all amenities. The large seaview lot was conditionally approved for subdividing so as to create an extra lot in 1970. Although no action was taken at that time, we feel — based on the letter of tentative approval — that there is a possibility of subdividing. ML. ### WERE 40 NOW 15 NEW HOMES FROM $63,440

A quiet, close to town subdivision — 3 cul-de-sacs to choose from — no-through streets. Not the typical feeling — some level lots, others with lake views or look over surrounding area. Some nestled into trees just like living in the country, yet 5 minutes from town. These homes are priced to sell and going quickly. Consider some of these extra features:
—rockwork faced entries, concrete drives —carpeted entry lobbies to most —daylite basements — easy to develop that extra 4th bdrm, party-room or second full bath
—many have 2 finished rock-faced fireplaces
—fancy wallpapers, extra finishing
—walk to busline, shops, all schools.

Prices from $63,440 up to $69,750 and two unique 1½-storey homes nearing completion at $78,900. Low down payments possible to qualified purchasers. Vendor may carry a second mortgage. Interest rates 10 to 10¾%.

SHAWNIGAN LAKE

1—Home heating costs worrying you? Come and see his delightfully wooded 2-acre lot with enough timber to heat the 1439 sq. ft. ranch style home with its beautiful stone heatilator fireplace. Super insulation, attractive Redwood finish in the 23'x16' living room and also in dining area. There are three bedrooms (one ensuite), wall-to-wall carpet, imported Italian tile in entrance hall, bathroom and utility room. All windows and sliding doors thermopane. Custom built cabinets and new fridge, stove, washer and dryer. All this for only $79,900.

MILL BAY

2 — Beautiful view over Saanich Inlet from this very well built, full basement home. All electric heat with extra insulation in ceiling and walls plus styrofoam under the aluminum siding. Double glazing and Franklin fireplace in basement ensure comfort despite any power failure. This is an ideal starter or retirement home and extra bedrooms, bathrooms or kitchen could be completed in basement. Within easy commuting distance of Victoria and yet close to good boating, fishing, or recreation areas. A detached lock-up garage plus a tastefully landscaped lot and all this adds up to a great buy at $60,000. Oh yes! The owners will also sell the furniture and carpets, etc., so that for a negotiated price you could move straight in.

3—Two other excellent seaview homes in Mill Bay — one 2 bedroom and one 3-bedroom — come and see this great selection.

4—Small 2-bedroom home with large workshop area on 1 acre — good well — this property has lots of potential — only $37,500.

METCHOSIN

6— Approx. 18 miles from downtown Victoria you could have your dream home — over 2,000 sq. ft. of comfortable living area in the 2-storey, 3 or 4-bedroom, oil fired hot water heated house. The large feature Living room has a heatilator fireplace, post and beam construction and is 18'5"x24'3" with a distant view of the sea and the Victoria coastline. There is also a 15'6"x12'9" dining room plus a large open kitchen. A 3-car garage with a 30'x20' full height room above, which can be used as a recreation room; plus an attractive flagstone patio and landscaping set in 3.8 acres of trees and paddock all helps to add up to seclusion and relaxation after a busy day in the city. A truly executive style home with its warm brick and cedar siding exterior. Exceptional value at $119,500.

308-A CARDS OF THANKS

MRS. W. K. R. BATTY WISHES to express sincere thanks to Dr. A. V. Piper and Dr. Chant, the nurses and other staff of the Coronary Unit, Royal Jubilee Hospital, for their care and concern of my beloved husband, The Rev. W K. R. Batty during his illnesses. My heartfelt thanks and gratitude to our Minister, The Rtv. W. Z. Van Druten of Oak Bay United Church and many dear friends for loving kindnesses and help to me during a most distressing time.

MRS. VIOLET BRYANT AND family wish to express their sincere thanks to their many friends and neighbors for the kind expressions of sympathy extended to them on the passing of Jimmy Bryant. Special thanks to Rev. Phil Ross and McCall Bros. Funeral Directors.

Mae Gordon and family wish to express their sincere thanks to their many friends for their kind expressions of sympathy extended to them on the passing of Charles Gordon.
Special thanks to Dr. Donald R. Horton and staff for their unlimited time and understanding.

We this to thank all those who expressed sympathy and extended their kindness to us during the recent loss of our loving son Bill.
—Ernie and Irene Wilson.

309 IN MEMORIAM

KEELER — In loving memory of our mother and grandmother, Iyla Keeler, who passed away March 20th, 1976.
Nothing can ever take away
The love a heart holds dear.
Fond memories linger every day,
Remembrance keeps her near.
—Lovingly remembered by Elma, Rita, Lois and Coleen and families.

LEE — In loving memory of our dear daughter, sister and granddaughter, Barbara, who passed away March 20, 1972.
Your smiling face and cheerful ways
Are the memories we hold dear,
Remembering all the happy days
Will forever keep you near.
—Loved always and sadly missed by Dad, Mom, Norman, Janet, Grandma Margaret Lee and Grandy Noble.

309 IN MEMORIAM

TREMEER (nee FORSTER) and LODGE — In loving memory of Dianne who passed away March 21, 1975 and her beloved son Rod Lodge, Nov. 7, 1976.
Nothing but memories as we journey on
Thinking of the past and our loved ones gone,
None knows the depth of our deep regret
But we remember — when others forget.
—Loved and greatly missed by Mom, Johnnie, Glenn, Cindy and family.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEAR'S CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS

NOTICE OF A PUBLIC HEARING

ON AMENDMENTS TO THE ZONING BY-LAW AND TO THE UPLANDS REGULATIONS BY-LAW

NOTICE is hereby given that all persons who deem their interest in property affected by the following proposed By-laws will be afforded an opportunity to be heard before the Municipal Council on the matters contained therein, at a Public Hearing to be held in the Council Chamber, Municipal Hall, Oak Bay, B.C., on Monday, March 28, 1977, commencing at 7:30 p.m.:

(a) By-law No. 3191 "Second Zoning By-law Amendment By-law, 1977"
Amends the "Zoning By-law, 1974," being By-law No. 3066, by prohibiting under "General Regulations," the occupancy of any lot or of the foreshore by dwelling units for sleeping or dwelling purposes that are designed to be mobile.

(b) By-law No. 3199 "Third Zoning By-law Amendment By-law, 1977"
Amends the "Zoning By-law, 1974," being By-law No. 3066, by amending the definitions for "Balcony," "Building area," and "Height," "Multiple dwelling," "Setback"; a general prohibiting clause regarding the uses within any Zone or Development Area; the height of a building in a Single Family Residence Zone; the Regulations for Church-and-Kindergarten Zones A and C; the limiting of one dwelling unit to any building other than a two-family dwelling, apartment building, or combination of apartment building and commercial building; and the exclusion of any building for use as a boarding house.

(c) By-law No. 3194 "Uplands Regulations By-law, 1977"
This proposed By-law provides for the following:
1. Repeals the "Uplands Regulations By-law, 1967" and three amending by-laws, which are now consolidated into one by-law;
2. Increases the minimum cost of a dwelling house which may be built in the Uplands from $20,000 to $40,000;
3. Revises subdivision regulations;
4. Revises regulations for apartment buildings;
5. Revises definition of "Height";
6. Revises regulations for Pergolas, rose arbors and screening for patios;
7. Includes regulations for parking of recreation vehicles, and parking regulations for the Yacht Club Zone;
8. Regulations for swimming pool fencing included;
9. Amends Penalty Clause in accordance with Summary Convictions Act.

Copies of the proposed By-laws may be inspected at the Municipal Hall, Oak Bay, B.C., between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m., on any day in which the said Municipal Hall is open for business.

JEAN L. MACQUEEN

THE CORPORATION OF THE CITY OF VICTORIA

NOTICE OF HEARINGS

"ZONING BY-LAW, 1956, AMENDMENT BY-LAWS (Nos. 467, 475, 503), 1976 and ZONING BY-LAW, 1956, AMENDMENT BY-LAW (No. 516), 1977."

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT all persons deeming their interest in property affected by the above-mentioned Zoning By-law Amendments (Nos. 467, 475, 503 and 516) will be afforded an opportunity to be heard on the matters contained therein before the City Council at a Public Hearing to be held in the Council Chamber, City Hall, on Thursday, March 24th, 1977, at 2:00 p.m.

ZONING BY-LAW, 1956, AMENDMENT BY-LAW (No. 467), 1976
provides for the amendment of the zoning by-law by confining the exemption from the height limitations in the zoning by-law to power transmission and communication towers only instead of exempting all towers, as at present.

ZONING BY-LAW, 1956, AMENDMENT BY-LAW (No. 475), 1976
provides for the elimination of transient accommodation as a permissible use in the M-1 Limited Light Industrial District and M-2 Light Industrial District.

ZONING BY-LAW, 1956, AMENDMENT BY-LAW (NO. 503), 1976
provides for the creation of a new zoning category to be known as the R-3C Zone, Central Area Residential District, permitting the use of land for multiple dwellings, churches, offices, retail stores, restaurants, coffee shops, bakeries, launderettes, theatres, auditoriums and places of recreation subject to detailed regulations set forth in the draft by-law, and for amendment to Part 17 of the Zoning By-law in respect of the provision of off-street parking spaces.

ZONING BY-LAW, 1956, AMENDMENT BY-LAW (NO. 516), 1977
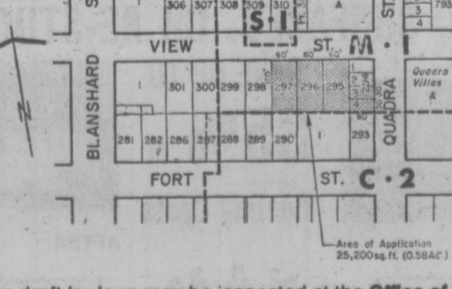
provides for the rezoning of lands near the southwest corner of Quadra and View Streets from M-1 Limited Light Industrial District to R-3C Central Area Residential District as depicted in the sketch plan hereunder.



Copies of the draft by-laws may be inspected at the Office of the Director of Community Development, City Hall, between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m., any day the City Hall is open for business, prior to the hearing.

French Weapons for Zaire

KINSHASA, Zaire (WP) — The French government agreed Friday to send Zaire emergency military supplies, expected to be mainly small arms and ammunition, to help defeat the 11-day-old invasion in the mineral-rich, southern area formerly known as Katanga.

The announcement came in response to an appeal from the Zaire government and is expected to arrive within the next few days.

The French promise of aid follows agreement from the U.S. and Belgian governments to fly in military supplies. Belgium reportedly is sending 30 planeloads of equipment and small arms to the former Belgian Congo.

The second planeload of U.S. military aid — plane parts, medicine, food rations and other support equipment — is scheduled to arrive in the capital, Kinshasa, early next week. It will complete the U.S. aid package, which Secretary of State Cyrus Vance said Wednesday would be "less than $2 million."

Most of the goods are to be flown to the southeastern corner of this large central African country, where about 1,500 Katangan rebels of the Congo National Liberation Front have captured four towns since the first surprise attack on March 8. The area, once called Katanga, is now Shaba Province.

The front's next target appears to be Kolwezi, in the center of Shaba's rich mineral belt. Loss of the mining city would be a major blow to Zaire's already troubled economy and could pose a serious political threat to the government of President Mobutu Sese Seko.

Eleven Americans were evacuated from the strategic city Friday after reports that the Katangans were just 50 miles away. Forty-one Americans are still working on construction and mining projects in the area, where U.S. companies have investments totalling almost $1 billion.

Air transportation throughout Zaire, a country about the size of the United States east of the Mississippi, almost ground to a halt today when the army commandeered aviation fuel for transportation of troops and supplies to Shaba. Several international flights were forced to cancel stopovers in Kinshasa because of the fuel shortage.

HFC Wins Assignment Approval

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Court of Appeal has upheld an early ruling that Household Finance Corporation did not engage in deceptive practices when it accepted assignment of retail sales contracts without notifying consumers.

Mr. Justice J. D. Taggart, in dismissing the appeal of the director of trade practices, ruled that the Trade Practices Act does not require disclosure of financing arrangements between a merchant and his bank or with the defendant.

In a written judgment, Mr. Justice Taggart supported the March, 1976, decision of Mr. Justice H. E. Hutcheon made in B.C. Supreme Court.

Mr. Justice Hutcheon noted in his judgment that while elaborate steps were taken to keep the knowledge of contract reassignment from the customer, there had been no complaints by consumers and no evidence that any consumer suffered in any way by the practice.

The trade practices director had applied for a Supreme Court declaration that HFC engaged in deceptive practices in 1971 and 1972 when it accepted retail contracts from a group of B.C. stores without notifying customers.

CANADA
PROVINCE OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

ELIZABETH the SECOND, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom, Canada and Her Other Realms and Territories, Queen, Head of the Commonwealth, Defender of the Faith:

To all to whom these presents shall come — GREETING, (WHEREAS pursuant to the provisions of section 766 of the Municipal Act, the Capital Regional District was incorporated by Letters Patent issued the 1st day of February, 1966:

H. A. CURTIS, Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing

AND WHEREAS supplementary Letters Patent were issued on the 28th day of December, 1967, empowering inter alia, the Capital Regional District to acquire, design, construct, operate, maintain, renew and administer trunk sewers and sewage disposal facilities in substantial accordance with the "Sanitary Sewerage Study of the Greater Victoria Area" dated June, 1966, prepared by Associated Engineering Services Ltd.;

AND WHEREAS the Regional Board has requested that the said supplementary Letters Patent, as amended, be further amended by striking out the words and figures "Twenty-one Million Two Hundred Thirty-five Thousand Dollars ($21,235,000.00)" in paragraph 16 of Division VII—Trunk Sewers and Sewage Disposal, and substituting the words and figures "Forty-eight Million, Two Hundred and Thirty-five Thousand Dollars ($48,235,000.)".

NOW KNOW YE THAT by these presents, We do order and proclaim that on, from, and after the date hereof, paragraph 16 of Division VII — Trunk Sewers and Sewage Disposal, in supplementary Letters Patent dated the 28th day of December, 1967, as amended, of the Capital Regional District, be deemed to be further amended by striking out the words and figures "Twenty-one Million Two Hundred Thirty-five Thousand Dollars ($21,235,000)" and substituting the words and figures "Forty-eight Million Two Hundred Thirty-five Thousand Dollars ($48,235,000)" so that the paragraph reads as follows:

"16. The aggregate debt, other than temporary current borrowings which may be incurred by the Regional Board for the purposes of this Division shall not exceed Forty-eight Million Two Hundred Thirty-five Thousand Dollars ($48,235,000)."

AND THAT the Letters Patent and supplementary Letters Patent, as amended, of the regional district be deemed to be further amended accordingly.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto affixed.

WITNESS, Colonel, the Honourable Walter S. Owen, Q.C., LL.D., Lieutenant-Governor of Our said Province of British Columbia, in Our City of Victoria, in Our said Province, this 3rd day of March in the year of Our Lord one thousand nine hundred and seventy-seven and in the twenty-sixth year of Our Reign.

By Command.

Grace McCarthy
Provincial Secretary and Minister of Travel Industry.

VEGETABLE BILL UPS U.S. PRICES

WASHINGTON (WP) — Led by a record 20.9 per cent climb in fresh vegetable prices, U.S. consumer prices rose 1 per cent in February, the fastest one-month increase since September 1974, when double-digit inflation gripped the economy, the government said Friday.

Over-all, food prices soared two per cent last month, with nearly all the increase due to the extremely cold weather, which damaged crops and hindered transportation.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said the big price rise — the February increase represents a compounded annual rate of 12.7 per cent — does not present "a long range problem" and is not the start of a trend toward worse inflation.

Consumer prices rose 0.8 per cent in January because of an acceleration in food prices and the cost of services. In 1976, consumer prices rose only 4.8 per cent. For the last three months they have been rising at a 9.1 per cent clip.

Even after food and fuel prices — which also continued to rise — are factored out, consumer prices still rose 0.6 per cent in February, "compared with 0.4 per cent in January and an average monthly increase of 0.5 per cent in 1976," the labor department said.

Julius Shiskin, commissioner of labor statistics, said it is too early to tell whether the acceleration of non-food prices is also weather-related or if it is "the beginning of a new, higher rate of increase" for consumer prices. The consumer price rise was foreshadowed by a 2.2 per cent jump in the wholesale farm prices in February.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR

Astrological Forecast for Sunday, March 20

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Diversify — highlight versatility. Communicate, spread influence — express views in artistic, humorous manner. Gemini, Sagittarius could be involved. Money and legalities dominate. Ask questions. Realize that one close to you wants to change, to move, to spend, to save, to dream, to bring goals into realistic focus. Cope with what is — cycle is high and you'll win!

TAURUS (April20-May 20): you mean, mean what you you mena, mean what you say. Do some "tearing down" for ultimate purpose of rebuilding on solid structure. Check behind the scenes. Finish assigment, task which has been shunted aside — too often!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Hopes, wishes are subject to revision. Get ideas on paper. Bring objectives into proper perspective. No one can stop you — except you. Know it and be confident — welcome change, travel, variety, communications, expression of feelings, concepts. Refuse to be intimidated — by any person.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Adjust to necessary changes within framework of "home life." Taurus, Libra figure prominently. Accent on contacts with superiors, ability to make room for yourself at top Obstacles are challenges, not hindrances. Know it and respond accordingly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Perceive subtle clues, trends. Perfect techniques. Streamline methods, procedures. What seems "obvious" could be a decoy. Know it, protect interests. Long-range prospects must be considered. You'll understand! Pisces, Virgo figure prominently.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Stress responsibility, willingness to invest in your own talents, ideas. Capricorn, Cancer individuals figure prominently. Tax matters, future investments, financial considerations involving partner or mate — these command spotlight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Finish rather than begin — complete task which has been somewhat of a burden. Another Libra — and an Aries — could be involved. You tend now to attract people with their problems. Emphasis on what is legal, how best to achieve goal without ruffling feathers of the law.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): New start, added chance for more independence, creativity — these are spotlighted. Leo, Aquarius persons figure in picture. You do best now by getting behind the scenes, uncovering layers of superficiality.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be wary of impulse dictating to logic. Take one step at a time. Attempting to skip essential would be an error. Teach and learn — review lessons. Young person could be making unreasonable demands.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Status quo subject to quick change. Study Sagittarius message for valid hint. Emphasis on home base, completion of transaction, a substitute for one you had been accustomed to dealing with — adjustment becomes a necessity. Values shift — be alert, versatile. Follow through on unorthodox, friendly counsel.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Check directions, instructions. Take nothing for granted, espeically where relatives are concerned. You may have to review, revise, even to tear down for purpose of rebuilding on solid base. Scorpio, Taurus individuals are likely to be involved.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Finances, savings programs, basic expenditures are featured. Gemini, Virgo individuals play key roles. Accent on payments, ability to collect what is due, protection of valuables, especially while in transit.

IF MARCH 20 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are sensitive, moody, at times arrogant, a wonderful chef in that you appreciate food, the security of warm relationships. You are a humanist. Cancer, Capricorn persons play important roles in your life. You succeed through new starts, contacts, added independence this year — July should be your most significant month of 1977.

Astrological Forecast for Monday, March 21

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Lunar cycle is high — you find that communications improve, what was out-of-reach becomes available. Position is strong — know it and be confident. A dream could prove prophetic. Heed "inner voice." Timing, basic judgments are on target. You receive aid from one who is "psychic."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Light touch, indirect approach should be advocated. Be ready for change, variety, special communications. Gemini, Virgo persons are in picture. What you seek is temporarily obscured. You will have to review sources and check behind scenes. Hospital visit provides enlightenment.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Friendship could become a romance. You find that individual you "like" is a special person. Married or single creative juices are anticivated. You imprint sytle, give of yourself. Taurus, Libra figure in important ways.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Many persons see you in different ways. Key is to be true to yourself. Avoid trap of self-deception — do what must be done and be realistic. Accent on career civic duty, recognition for job you did in exceptional manner, One who whispers "secret" is seeking attention, affection.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): you get involved — nothing occurs in lukewarm manner. If playing games, get out — feelings, emotions are at stake and stakes are considerable. Means if you are "stringing someone along," think twice. Accent on communication, long-distance, planning ahead. Display of affection is a highlight.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Study Leo message — dig for information. Reject rumor, reports based on speculation. What appears to legal obstacle could be a smoke screen. Know it and do some investigating on your own. One who taught you in past could make reappearance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A relative could get you back on course — sense of direction has been distorted. Now, renew confidence, set sights on goal, strive for a more creative approach — welcome chance for fresh contacts. Leo, Aquarius figure prominently.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Check accounts — count your change. Be realistic about appraisals, children, speculative ventures. Affair of heart could be high on agenda. However, do give logic equal time. You will have to face yourself in the morning. Cancer, Sagittarius, Aquarius persons are part of scenario.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You're abel to appeal to people on various levels. Key is to promise only what can be delivered. Be flexible, versatile without spreading yourself too thin. Another Sagittarian — and a Gemini — figure prominently. Bring forth creative capabilities. Love is very much in picture!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): Rumors, gossip come your way. Be selective — refuse to become part of any foolish group bent on character assassination. Insist on factual material. Stand tall for principles. Scorpio will become an ally.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Some wishes come true in most unusual manner — involving money. Written material aids cause — know it and analyze various factors. Individual studious and refined, confides problem and provides information. Be open-minded, alert and receptive.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Surprise comes in form of gift. Your "love life" changes from friction to harmony — one you respond to emotionally and mentally returns favor and makes you feel secure. Home, surroundings, family reunion — these figure prominently. Taurus, Libra individuals are part of scenario.

IF MARCH 21st IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have sense of humor and concern about weight, physical appearance. You are attractive — you live to travel, you are expressive, restless and artistic. You are also original, creative, in love with love and drawn to Gemini, Sagittarius persons. May should be an outstanding month for you in 1977, a year which will feature an expansion of your universe and greater personal happiness.

THE HASTINGS CHESS CONGRESS
By Harry Golombek

Oleg Romanishin suffered only one defeat at Hastings this year — and that on his 25th birthday. Oleg didn't seem to mind losing all that much. He merely smiled a little lopsidedly and said that the game was dreadfully played on his part. Clearly he must be an exception to the rule laid down by that eminent wit Dr. Tartakower, who once stated that never in his life had he beaten a wholly well person.

Take one look at the score and you will see why Romanishin did not mind losing one game. Romanishin (USSR) 11½; Kagan (Israel) 9½; Tarjan (USA) 9; Adorjan (Hungary) and Smyslov (USSR) 8; Miles (England) 7½; Damjanovic (Yugoslavia), Farago (Hungary), Vukcevic (USA), and Zwaig (Norway), 6½; Kaplan (USA) and Whiteley (England) 5½; Kraidman (Israel) and Rumens (England) 5; Webb (England) 4½.

Romanishin seems to have developed that genuine fine edge of play that characterizes the true Grandmaster. Kagan had a fine tournament and achieved the Grandmaster norm (9). Tarjan played every game in aggressive style and will do even better next time. Of the other two American competitors, Vukcevic is an amateur in the true sense of the word and a most talented player. So, too, is Kaplan, even though he was out of form this time.

One more word about an American player: The young and talented Jonathan Tisdall won the Challengers and so qualified for next year's Premier. It will be interesting to see how he does in that event.

Herewith a most forceful game by Tarjan in Round 13 against the Hungarian Grandmaster, Ivan Farago.

(b) White's plan of strategy is wrong; he must break open the centre as soon as possible and for this purpose 10.P-Q5 was indicated.

(c) White's play lacks vigour throughout; this was the time to play 15.P-K4!

(d) A desperate retreat that indicates total collapse of White's strategy.

(f) Or 33.QxQ, PxQ; 34.K-B2, RxP; 35.B-Q2, P-N8-Qch and Black gains a piece.

Prescriptions Musn't Be Mixed

NEW HYDE PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Aspirin, nose or eye drops, laxatives—even a martini before dinner—any of these can play havoc with the prescription your doctor gives you, warns Long Island Jewish-Hillside Medical Centre's director of pharmacy services, Paul Kurzman.

Being an educated consumer is a matter of life and health when it comes to using medication, says Kurzman who urges the patient to tell his physician about any internal or external medications being used. Even ointments or eye drops can sometimes be incompatible with a prescription.

He suggests keeping these general guidelines in mind to check with the physician or pharmacist before filling a new prescription:

—Cold remedies, analgesics such as Aspirin and many over-the-counnter drugs may have adverse effects in combination with other medications.

School Helps Indian Drop-Outs

PORT ALBERNI, B.C. (CP) — An alternative school with an emphasis on practicality has been set up for Indian students here after several years in the planning.

If it proves itself, it might eventually cover the full curriculum at all levels up to Grade 10.

George Watt, manager for the local Sheshaht band and a central figure in creation of the school in September, 1976, said the school has started at both ends and is working toward the middle.

There is a pre-school and kindergarten group and a class made up principally of 15-and-16-yearolds. The main objectives are to cure the dropout problem and ensure courses are relevant to the students' lives.

"Indian children don't get far in the regular school system," said Watt. "Let's face it, we have a dropout rate of about 90 per cent by Grade 11 for, we think, two reasons.

"One we refer to as the failure syndrome, the fact that many of them just can't master many of the courses and as a result get very down on the system.

"The other is the fact that many of them can see no relevance in the course material to the way they live and what they plan to do."

Watt said many students were attracted to the school, located on reserve property just outside this Vancouver Island community, because it offers an alternative to the education system they once were in.

"We're being called a dropout school but that isn't the case," he said.

The mathematics course offered by the school is in practical math—how to compute interest rates, the principles of consumer banking, the management of small business.

A course in communications includes practical English instruction, along with studies having an emphasis on Indian literature and reading and writing Indian language. Television and newspapers are used extensively in the English side of the program.

There also is a complete physical education program for all the students with a fully equipped gymnasium at their disposal. Again the emphasis is on practicality.

"Our wilderness camp that we ran for young native Indians on the reservation island of Clehoa in Barkely Sound last summer was a real success and we've started building permanent structures on the island for future camps," said Watt.

"The students here will be going to the island next spring for a course in wilderness survival and we are teaching wilderness crafts now as part of the physical education program."

The school is sponsored and supported by the Hah-O-Payuk Society, an inter-band association with native and non native membership.

There are four teachers—two for the senior group and two for the young children—and all are either Indian or have experience in working with native Indian children, plus teaching credentials.

The school is located on the Maht Maas complex that was formerly maintained by the Indian affairs department as a resident school for native Indian children from remote locations on the island.

Various Howard Hughes Faces Compete in Hollywood

By JOEL KOTKIN
Washington Post

HOLLYWOOD—1977 promises to be the year of Howard Hughes in Hollywood.

At least four Hughes movies — aimed at capitalizing on the obvious box office appeal of the multimillionaire (scaled down recently from billionaire by an estate inventory filed in Las Vegas) from his early dashing image to his eccentric decline and death — should be out by Christmas. Still others are being talked about.

In a town where some still have first-hand memories of Hughes and were his legend is still admired by many, the predictable jealousies are already in evidence.

Actor - producer Warren Beatty is currently preparing a script of Hughes' life for for Warner Brothers' Quick Cheapies," Beatty says, could devalue artistic efforts protraying the Hughes legend. "I think this is a serious subject. No matter what, I'm going to make a serious movie."

One target of Beatty's ire is producer Roger Gimbell, whose movie "Howard, the Amazing Mr. Hughes" is scheduled for CBS television early this spring. Gimbell simply shrugs off Beatty, who earlier rejected a million dollar offer to play the lead in the CBC film.

"Ours is definitely a very serious important effort," Gimbell insisted last month at his Studio City headquarters. "This movie will give you a real understanding of Hughes. It will be sympathetic to him. You have to feel some sympathy for a man who eats canned soup with two billion in his pocket."

Even the report that Hughes, usually referred to as a billionaire, was worth only $168 million hasn't dampened Gimbells' enthusiasm.

Gimbell is convinced that the lower-than-expected appraisal is one more example of Hughes' business genius. "It's typical of the whole Hughes story," Gimbell said. "I think it makes it an even more incredible story. How perfect that even in death he's kept his money away from the government. It's typical of his operation."

"Howard, the Amazing Mr. Hughes" is the product of a year of research based largely on the reminiscences of long-time Hughes aide Noah Dietrich. Portraying Hughes from Houston childhood to the final, bitter days, the movie seeks to give an insight into the life of the eccentric tycoon.

Gimbell's approach to Hughes is steeped in psychology. Even the heroic acts of Hughes life — from record-shattering plane flights to directing his own movies — are seen as parts in a pattern leading inevitably to his psychological breakdown in Las Vegas.

"When you look at Howard Hughes, what do you find?" Gimbell asks rhetorically. "You find a basic paranoid schizophrenic."

Assigned the task of unveiling this long-term phychological dismemberment is actor Tommy Lee Jones. A 30-year-old veteran of the New York stage. Jones plays Hughes from his start in the oil business at age 18 to his fading days in Las Vegas. Like Hughes a native of Texas, Jones is the first serious actor to plunge directly into the character of Howard Hughes.

"He's a ghost to me," drawls Jones, a powerfully built former Harvard football player. "I've come to feel very affectionate and sympathetic toward Howard, which I really didn't expect. For the last few months, I've done nothing but try to understand Howard's problems."

However sympathetic Jones' portrayal, there are many who don't look forward to the presentation of "Howard, The Amazing Mr. Hughes" or any other Hughes picture.

Among them is Arelo Sederberg, the official spokesman for Summa Corp., Hughes' vast Las Vegas-based conglomerate. Sederberg says all the Hughes movies tread on dangerous legal ground because the rights to the Hughes legend belong to Rosemount Corp., Hughes' company controlled by New York lawyer Chester Davis.

"Theoretically, if anyone capitalizes on the name of Howard Hughes, Rosemount could go to court and stop it," Sederberg says.

"Any organization that used that name violated an agreement between Hughes and Rosemount." So far, however, no legal claims have been filed against anyone doing a Hughes film. Davis's New York law firm refuses to discuss the issue.

Yet even the threat of legal action is unnerving some Hollywood producers. Roger Gimbell bitterly complains about "harrassment" of his production, which he says grew out of threatening legal notes sent to CBS network executives by Rosemount. Another prospective Hughs filmmaker, independent producer Edgar Scherick, says he was forced to abandon his plans because Rosemount's threatening noises drove up his insurance bills "We backed out because the Hughes people caused so much trouble," Scherick says.

But what really seems to upset the men at Summa are the lingering scenes in "Howard, The Amazing Mr. Hughes" which show the billionaire at the end — emaciated and deserted. Sederberg, normally talkative and open, is clearly discomforted about the public discussion of Hughes pathetic demise. Gimbell and the other producers, Sederberg charges, "are only getting into innuendo and speculation on the latter years."

Not only Summa spokesmen are disturbed by the image of Hughes as a crazy, living skeleton. Friends who remembr a young, vital Howard Hughes cling to their early pictures of the man. They fear the legend could be obscured by a pathetic last act.

"Howard Hughes was the most brilliant businessman I ever dealt with," recalls veteran Hollywood agent Herman Citron. As agent for actress Jane Russell, Citron met Hughes when the Tycoon was launching Russell's career with the movies "The Outlaw" and "French Line" in the early '50s. "I can't understand all this stuff about Howard being so crazy," Citron says.

Citron remembers Hughes as the complete financial genius who juggled aerospace, oil and land empires while running Hollywood's RKO studios. "He had an incredible memory," Citron says. "When I went to his office there never was a secretary. He didn't even take notes or have a scratch pad. Howard remembered everything himself, from all his businesses."

Even the most formidable Hollywood egos were impressed by Hughes. Director Howard Hawks, who worked with Hughes on three films in the '30s, considers him among the most brilliant men he ever worked with.

These men remember a different Howard Hughes — hell-raising Wunderkind who captivated almost everyone. Over nearly two decades around the entertainment industry, he was linked with many notable actresses including Katherine Hepburn and Jean Peters.

One of these relationships — with Jean Harlow — has already been committed to film and will be released late this spring. Entitled, "Hughes and Harlow: Angels in Hell," the movie is little more than a light, romantic farce.

Ploy Kills 31 In Cabinda

HAVANA (Reuter) — A group of 50 men posing as angolan government troops and led by three European mercenaries killed 31 civilians and kidnapped 35 this week in the Angolan enclave of Cabinda, the Cuban news agency Prensa Latina reported Friday. Survivors said the men summoned farmers in three hamlets near the Zaire border, to a joint meeting and opened fire on them with machine-guns and grenade launchers.

$300,000 FUTILE SEARCHES

EDMONTON (CP) — More than $300,000 was spent unnecessarily last year when Canadian Forces' aircraft flew 300 hours searching for pilots believed to have crashed, an armed forces official said Saturday.

"We sent up planes on 99 incidents before we found out we were wasting our time," said Capt. Don Fish.

"We often found pilots sitting having a beer after failing to follow correct procedure. We had no alternative but to commit men and aircraft to look for them."

In 23 instances, Fish said, pilots must have discovered their emergency locating transmitter was on and stopped it. Searches were called off and pilots were not traced.

Academy Award Count-Down

More than 1,000 entries have already been received in the Times-CJVI Academy Award contest with just over a week to go.

First letter drawn March 30 that has correctly predicted the winner of Oscars for best picture, best actor and best actress will win a trip for two to Hollywood. The Academy Awards will be announced March 28.

Official entry form for the contest is on page 31.

Entries received by March 25 will be eligible for an early bird draw in which 700 double passes to a theatre party will be awarded. The party will include an afternoon premiere of a motion picture at the Capitol plus the chance to win numerous door prizes. The event, starting at 2 p.m. Wednesday, March 30, will also be the occasion of the drawing for the grand prizes.

The grand prize includes airfare for two via CP Air to Los Angeles followed by a tour of Universal movie studio. In addition, the prize includes hotel accommodation and a side trip to Disneyland, courtesy of Budget Travel.

Five runners-up will win a dinner for two at The Empress plus a double pass to a Famous Players theatre.

In the Academy Award race the oddsmakers have named Network and Rocky as early co-favorites as movie of the year, although All the President's Men also has a lot of support.

The other two nominees, Bound for Glory and Taxi Driver, are rated as longshots.

In the race for best actor most of the interest has centred around whether the academy will honor Peter Finch posthumously for his role in Network. Another sentimental favorite is William Holden but he may act as a vote-splitter as he is also in Network. Sylvester Stallone, a newcomer who wrote and starred in Rocky, is regarded as a very strong contender to win it all. The other two nominees are Robert Deniro and Giancarlo Giannini.

Deniro's performance in Taxi Driver was good enough to win an Oscar but he doesn't have the kind of sentiment behind him that the other three major contenders have. Meanwhile, Giannini is definitely a longshot in this field.

The race for best actress is wide open. The nominees are Marie-Christine Barrault, Faye Dunaway, Talia Shire, Sissy Spacek and Liv Ullmann.

Campaigning on behalf of the nominees is continuing in Los Angeles and the odds can change during the next few days.

In addition, academy voters are notoriously unpredictable and sometimes cast their ballots out of personal whims or studio politics.

$200,000 Blaze Guts Paint Shop

A spokesman for the Victoria fire department said by the time firemen reached the scene shortly after 6 a.m. the roof of the two-storey building had collapsed and flames were shooting 50 to 60 feet in the air setting nearby power lines on fire.

Assistant fire chief Bill Jones said all three city fire halls responded and Saanich and Oak Bay fire departments were placed on emergency standby.

The crew of 19 firemen had the fire under control within half an hour and by 9 a.m. were in the process of mopping up.

Jones said a preliminary investigation indicates the probable cause was a malfunction in the shop's electrical panel. Arson has been ruled out.

Jones said four cars inside the building were destroyed.

B.C. Hydro crews were called in and cut off power in the area.

The building is owned by Fred Zeilinger.

HIJACK ENDS

BEIRUT (Reuter) — Two armed men who hijacked a Turkish airliner to Beirut surrentered tonight shortly after freeing the passengers.

The hijackers, identified as two young Turks, allowed the passengers—according to different reports, varying between 118 and 182—to leave the Boeing 727 at Beirut.

If Money Talks, Message Heard

If money talks, people in Greater Victoria have been saying this week they like what they read and hear about the Society for the Recreation of Handicapped Persons.

Cheques from $2 to $500 have been rolling into the Victoria Times office, a total of $2,053.50 by Friday.

The society is in fact eight young people assisted by about 80 volunteers who conduct 17 different programs for local handicapped people.

The idea is to give handicapped children, teens and adults in the Capital district a chance for a little fun, the same opportunities the rest of us take for granted.

About 200 handicapped people a month turn out for the society's activities. They know better than anyone else what it means.

"As a handicapped person for 40 years, but blessed with a wonderful husband and loving considerate friends, I want to express my appreciation to the young people who inaugurated this worthwhile project and enclose a donation for its continuance. Good luck," one note to the Times said.

Among programs conducted after school for children are physical education activities, fine arts (painting, music, crafts), drama and special events, which can mean anything from playing in a park to going swimming to stopping in for a milkshake.

Saturday programs bring mentally and physically handicapped children into activities they would join if they had no handicap.

For teems with handicaps, Friday night get-togethers might lead to a party, a movie or a visit to a mini-golf range. A cooking class is popular and there is a drama group.

Society staff and volunteers turn out on a one-to-one basis for a group of 20 profoundly retarded adults from Glendale Hospital every Tuesday and Thursday.

Activities vary but even having lunch at the society's storefront office, 2535 Government St., provides a rare and prized look at the world outside their hospital home for this group.

VANDER ZALM GIFT TO DOG

Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm was presented with a can of dog food Friday by University of Victoria students protesting treatment of British Columbia's needy and told them it would make a meal for his dog.

A letter accompanied the dog food said some people are forced to eat dog food as a regular part of their diet because of their meagre social assistance payments. It was signed by Joe Barrett, Alma Mater Society external vice-president and son of New Democrat Party leader Dave Barrett.

The society wanted an increase in social assistance to single persons and a cost-of-living allowance to all welfare recipients.

Vander Zalm said he would give the food to his dog because that is who it is intended for but he did give the students a message to take back to the university.

He told them if they would become active and good contributors to the economy through productivity, then the govtrnment would have the means to provide still more for the needy.

Vander Zalm said the students expressed strong dissatisfaction with the government's proposed abolition of death duties.

Make Love, Anglais

MONTREAL (CP) — English-speaking Quebecers can ensure the survival of their language by making love, Premier Rene Levesque said Friday night.

The premier said the province's English-speaking minority should take its own "revenge of the cradles" on the French-speaking majority by raising large families.

He said the future growth of English in Quebec under his government's language charter, to be presented before the end of this month, is "up to the power of your loins."

In a separate interview, Intergovernmental Affairs Minister Claude Morin declared the PQ government is committed to independence and does not believe that any form of constitutional reform can meet the province's demands within Confederation.

In an interview published today in Le Soleil, Morin said Quebec will continue to function for the time being as part of the federal system, and will try to show other provinces that PQ members are not a bunch of "monsters" or "barbarians."

But no decentralization of power under the current system can satisfy the province's needs, he said.

In fact, said Morin, decentralization on granting of special status to Quebec might do more harm than good for other provinces.

"To impose on other provinces, say Prince Edward Island, the status sought by Quebec — that would be rigid federalism in reverse, and it would be more unacceptable than the current regime."

Meanwhile, Quebec Environment Minister Marcel Leger said Friday he cannot understand why "a big thing" was made over his announcement that he was speaking for Quebec and not Canada during a United Nations conference in Argentina earlier this week.

Leger said he "was surprised at Prime Minister Trudeau's attitude."

On Thursday, Trudeau said Quebec will be barred from attending international conferences if provincial ministers renounce their ties with Canada.

Riots Sweep Karachi

KARACHI (Reuter) — At least 17 people were killed today in savage riots in Pakistan's largest city.

The government imposed a curfew on the city after eight hours of clashes and a major fire which destroyed a state-owned motor vehicle assembly plant.

Troops patrolled the main troublespots warning people through loudspeakers that they risked being shot if they ventured into the rubble-strewn streets.

Riots began Friday over the arrest of six opposition leaders in the protest movement against Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto.

The worst violence flared in the district of Pathan, where 13 people were shot and killed in a gun battle between political opponents.

Fires burned in various parts of the city as rioters set fire to at least 15 shops, five large buildings, three movie theatres and about 10 buses.

QUAKE HITS

MANILA (UPI) — A powerful earthquake hit the northern Philippines today, levelling buildings in one town and panicking people in swaying Manila high-rise buildings. At least one person died and nine others were injured.

2 Lawyers Differ Over 'Bribe' Interpretation

VANCOUVER (CP)—The interpretation of a Feb. 24 conversation between two lawyers surfaced as the key issue during a five-hour inquiry Friday into allegations of bribe offers and threats by a member of the Vancouver Crown counsel office.

The inquiry, ordered by Premier Bill Bennett under the Public Inquiries Act, revealed that both sides in the dispute agreed with what was said during the conversation.

But their interpretations were significantly different.

Thomas Fisher, a Crown prosecutor and treasurer of the Law Society of B.C., presided over the inquiry, which was to determine whether regional Crown counsel Alan Filmer "bribed or threatened, or inferred bribery or threats" when he spoke to Crown prosecutor Gil McKinnon.

The inquiry also heard testimony that:

—McKinnon had no respect for deputy attorney-general David Vickers;

—Filmer believed McKinnon was "Professionally impressive," but also highly volatile and sensitive;

—The Crown counsel system in the province is in a sorry state;

—Filmer told McKinnon that publicizing conditions in the Vancouver Crown counsel office could jeopardize McKinnon's chances for ad hoc prosecuting work.

Filmer told the inquiry that McKinnon resigned Feb. 23, and that the two discussed the move the following day.

He described McKinnon as a "highly volatile, very sensitive individual who tended at times to get upset."

He said when McKinnon told him he had no plans to join a private law firm, he (Filmer) offered him prosecuting work for the Vancouver Crown counsel office on an ad hoc basis at $35 an hour or about $34,000 a year.

Filmer also said he told McKinnon to be careful about how he publicized conditions in the Crown counsel office because he (McKinnon) could jeopardize his chances for ad hoc work.

Filmer's lawyer, R. M. Hutchinson of Nanaimo, said the Feb. 24 conversation was "a straightforward bargaining session."

Allan McEachern, commission counsel, said: "It would be a frightful thing if every government official . . . trying to work out some future contract is under threat of charge."

NEWS BRIEFS

Nurses Settling

VANCOUVER (CP) — A tentative contract settlement has been reached between negotiators for 2,600 public health and psychiatric nurses in British Columbia and the Government Employee Relations Bureau, averting a threatened strike, at least temporarily. Both sides in the dispute are recommending acceptance of the agreement, worked out with the aid of labor relations board registrar Ron Bone. Details are being withheld pending ratification.

Pay Hike for Aides

Deputy ministers in B.C. will be able to receive salaries as high as $50,000 a year under a new salary scale made public Friday. The scale allows deputies to be paid between $39,000 and $50,000 annually. Previously, they received between $36,000 and $48,000.

Congo Head Killed

Tavern Shoot-Up

OTTAWA (CP) — A city man was killed and two others were wounded early today when three masked men burst into a west-end hotel tavern and shot at about 20 patrons and four emplyees. The suspects escaped after robbing the tavern safe and patrons of an undisclosed amount of money.

FLIGHT BUG FELLS 21

KODIAK, Alaska (AP) — Federal health officials were investigating an outbreak of a flu-like illness on Friday that struck at least 21 passengers aboard a Wien Air Alaska flight.

Dr. Michael Moser, an Anchorage-based official of the United States public health service's centre for disease control, said there's no evidence to suggest that fumes from an engine malfunction caused the outbreak.

Moser, who has been attempting to contact all of the more than 50 persons aboard the flight, said:

"I'm not saying it's flu, but it's nothing more serious." He also said it appears the disease is infectious. As of Friday morning, he had contacted 26 passengers. All but five had experienced the symptoms of the illness.

Dr. Spencer Falcon of Kodiak, who has treated some of the passengers, said he doubted the illness was a virus. He said a chemical or fumes could have released into the cabin while crews were working on a malfunctioning engine during a stop in Homer, en route to Kodiak.

The illness, is characterized by chills, fever and muscle aches.

12-Year Wait Ends for Killer's Family

VANCOUVER (CP)— Ronald Eugene Ingram, 48, who has spent 12 years in a mental institution for a killing in 1962, can expect to be reunited with his family soon.

An order-in-council made public Friday authorizes his release from the Forensic Psycxiatric Institute at Coquitlam.

The cabinet order followed a bid by Ingram's lawyer, George Macintosh, to have his client released on grounds that his mental condition had drastically improved from 1966 to 1971.

Ingram was incarcerated in Riverview Mental Hospital in 1965 after he was found not guilty by reason of insanity in the murder of Dianne Phipps, 19. The crown entered a stay of proceedings on a second murder charge in the death of Leslie Dixon.

The bodies of the young woman and her boyfriend were found in the area of Piper's Lagoon, at that time a Nanaimo lovers' lane. Both had been shot with a .22-calibre rifle and Phipps had been beaten with a rock.

Conditions of Ingram's release specify that he must reside in the Lower Mainland area of British Columbia, he will be subject to supervision, and he must avoid alcohol and firearms.

Macintosh said the order-in-council "is wonderful news."

"I fully expect the family will be reunited very soon."

However, Ingram's release met with a different reaction in Nanaimo.

"We're not very happy about it — we're sure upset," said Arthur Phipps, the father of the nurdered girl.

And Nanaimo Mayor Frank Ney called Ingram's release "a matter of concern to many people."

"The judgment and decision for this must rest on the shoulders of the cabinet, each and every one of them," he said.

"I wish you could get someone who decided to release him to say they'd be glad to have him move next door."

Ingram is the husband of Carol Ingram and the father of three children.

Their lawyer said "the togetherness shown by Carol and Ron Ingram has been amazing."

In a recent affidavit filed by Mrs. Ingram as part of the family's three-year campaign for Ingram's release, she said that when her husband was first incarcerated, she tried to stand by him, visiting him every day for two years.

Then she stayed away for four months "trying to decide if I was going to stay with him."

"I was sick with loneliness and miserable but I decided to stay with my husband because I still loved him and my life was empty without him."

Mrs. Ingram said in her affidavit that she was pregnant with their third child, now 13, when her husband became "very troubled and very nervous."

"I considered his anxiety to be a reaction to the pregnancy.

"I was unaware of the gravity of the conflict between him and his mother who was continually nagging and belittling him (and) the effect of these confrontations on my

No Illusions for PLC In Anti-Trident Fight

By AB KENT
Times Staff

It's a David versus Goliath situation.

Goliath, is this case, represents nuclear weaponry.

David Jackman, 30, a member of the PLC, tends to shrug off portrayals of either the organization or himself as giant-killers.

But he makes it clear he and the PLC will continue to make a strong effort to slay Goliath, represented by the Trident nuclear submarine complex at Bangor, Washington.

He has no illusions that tilting at the Bangor missile base will by itself stop the project or change the U.S. first-strike weapon policy.

He believes his commitment — along with other members of the community — to oppose nuclear proliferation, war and other forms of social waste and violence brings its own reward.

Pacific Lifers are realistic enough to recognize their non-violent stance will have little direct effect on the American military colossus — or the equally abhorrent Soviet nuclear machine.

"Trident is a symptom and there is no way Pacific Life Community can stop it," Jackman said.

But if the PLC can inspire others to support its protest, on both sides of the border and across the Pacific, then eventually policies can change and help make the world a safer place, its members feel.

A major achievement this year has been PLC's campaign against Trident among members of the B.C. legislature, where 35 of the 50 members canvassed to date agree with the protest.

SUB MISSILE
. . . death from depths

Jackman said elected people must step out and politicians must stick their necks out and take a moral and ethical stand.

"We don't expect everyone to go out cutting fences with us at Bangor, but I do expect them to reassess things," he says.

The Pacific Life Community is an informal organization of people on both sides of the Canada-U.S. border dedicated to non-violence.

Jackman came to British Columbia looking for a self-supporting existence in the so-called counter-culture, but failed to find it.

He became involved with PLC soon after its formation in late 1974, with the return to North America of pacifist Jim Douglass, a theologian, and his wife Shelley, from Hawaii.

While there, Douglass was involved in an anti-war demonstration at Hickam air force base and was eager to sustain the campaign.

At a meeting of about a dozen interested people on the mainland it was decided to combine in one "community" of spirit, politically active force with inner constructive energy.

Ian Gibson, 26, gave up a fledgling medical practice to join the PLC last November, and finds it liberating after six hard years of study.

He agrees that if Trident is halted, it will not be due to any small group of people engaged in experimental living but through the support of many groups having similar philosophies.

"Whether we will forestall the end of the world or prevent the world from ending is a question none of us can answer. But we know we are moving in the right direction," Gibson said.

"Trident is a symbol of the utmost evil used for the utmost evil purpose. If we as a group can find it in ourselves to oppose that implacable thing, we know we can accomplish anything else."

The Trident project gives the PLC a focus that is easily identified.

But even without it, the need for non-violent solutions to problems will remain and similar techniques will continue to be explored for many years — in groups or by individuals, Gibson said.

The PLC, unlike many organizations seeking public support, does not engage in recruitment as a means of adding impact to its influence.

"It is not for us to tell them what they should do."

The amount of publicity and the attention drawn by the group to Trident is astonishing considering the PLC's numerical size.

In Victoria, about five members form the core of the group numbering 12-15 in active roles. They are all Canadians.

About 30 Victoria and Vancouver Island people are on the group's mailing list and there are other groups in Vancouver, Powell River, Bellingham, Seattle and San Francisco, totalling about 100.

DAVID JACKMAN
. . . Trident fighter

The groups usually meet monthly for informal discussion. There are no officers or group leaders, but discussion may be segregated into men's and women's groups.

Meetings are Quaker style, in that individuals are free to speak without interruption or debate.

Jackman said participants sit in a circle and speak in turn and where there is disagreement, no action is taken until there is a consensus.

Linda Green, also a physician, said these talks are considered "safe periods," taking place without confrontation.

Jackman describes the community as a non-violent revolutionary group, implying widespread social change emanating from individual relationships.

But they decided the best approach was to talk person-to-person with office staff and the men in the yard.

One of the Vancouver community dressed himself as Death and sprinkled symbolic ashes on the floor, which upset some of the office workers.

But Jackman said it is the simple, personal approach and discussion that is sometimes disconcerting to the other side, and even to outsiders who support anti-violence campaigns.

"You have to find the right tension in a situation. We don't want to stimulate a violent reaction, but to communicate that we are human, too," Jackson said.

Green said before going out on a demonstration members try to put themselves in the position of those they want or expect to meet, helping to foresee what may develop and avoiding an un-wanted situation.

PLC shuns subversive arts, preferring to conduct its campaigns openly, even to telling authorities beforehand exactly what they intend to do so there can be plans to deal with the action without frightening anyone.

One Trident Has Killing Power Equal to 2,000 Hiroshimas

Its aim is to modernize the sea leg of the strategic "triad" of land-based, air-borne and submarine missiles.

Each Trident submarine will carry 24 atomic missiles, half as many again as the navy's existing Polaris and Poseidon submarines.

Trident I missile is an interim weapon which will be deployed on the first submarine in 1979. The second generation missile — Trident II — will be almost twice as large.

Each Trident submarine, therefore, will be able to incinerate 408 targets from a range of 6,000 nautical miles.

Each commander of a Trident submarine will control a force of destruction equal to 2,000 Hiroshimas.

RCMP Building Bid Premature

An application before Victoria council from a Burnaby construction form to erect two new buildings in the 2800-block Blanshard to house RCMP headquarters may be premature.

A spokesman for the federal public works department says no decision has been made yet on where the headquarters will be located.

In a letter to city council, deputy city engineer W. N. Jorgensen said Foreman Enterprises of Burnaby has taken out demolition permits to tear down buildings in the 2800 block Blanshard to make way for a new four-storey building for the RCMP divisional headquarters and a new two-storey building for the sub-division.

The first project would cost $1¼ million, the second $700,000.

But the DPW spokesman said tenders for the subdivision headquarters, presently located at 999 Fort, are still being evaluated and, in any event call for leasing existing office space, not a new building.

Seven bids were received, three from Foreman Enterprise and one each from Hawarth Investments Ltd., Roanne Properties Ltd., Michael and Williams, and Point Properties Ltd.

A condition of the tender is the RCMP must be able to move into the new quarters within five months of the announcement of the winning bid.

Car Clinic Just for Women

A car repair clinic for women only will be held in the evening Tuesday and Thursday at Metro Honda Ltd., 2151 Blanshard.

Admission is free but tickets must be obtained in advance by phoning 384-5312.

The program includes training films and instruction on how to do simple repairs.

There will be no classroom lectures. Both sessions involve demonstrations using various vehicles.

The program is sponsored by the Automotive Retailers Association. The Tuesday program deals with starting the car and keeping it running, the exhaust and suspension system, cooling, brakes, wheels and tires.

The Thursday program deals with understanding a work order at a repair shop.

Statistically, 88's a Bad Year

. . . And March Is Bad Month

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

There are 15 people in the Capital district over 100 years old, more local people died last year at age 88 than at any other age and premature deaths meant 8,781 "work years" were lost.

These are among voluminous statistics on the life, death and health of the 228,815 people from Sooke to the Gulf Islands in 1976, compiled by Dr. Allan Arneil, regional health officer.

There's a lot of information on people dying, 2,321 or them in the district last year of whom 1,250 were male.

"More men than women die each year," Arneil explains. "That this should happen each year is explained by the fact that more boys are born than girls and women live longer than men."

Average age at death was 75. For women it was 77 and for men 73. Diseases of the heart and blood vessels were the commonest cause, claiming 1,177 or just over half. Cancer was second at 538 and accidents third at 177.

People in their 80s formed the largest age group dying with the peak year being 88. Except for the first year of life, where the death rate was 14.8 per 1,000 live births, mortality remains very low (especially among females) until the poulation reaches into the 40s. Oldest death last year was a woman 105.

Graphs show that whatever the cause, March is the peak month for deaths. Of 45 deaths last year blamed on flu, 32 were last March, with elderly people the victims.

A chart shows the vast majority of cancer victims are over 70 years old. People 90 to 96 formed the largest age group of cancer victims with females in the majority. Next came people in their 80s, with males in the majority.

A table on the 177 accidental deaths lists 44 of them from falls, 37 from poisonings, 37 from motor vehicles, 12 from firearms, eight by hanging, six by drowning, five involving boats, five in fires, five "struck by objects" and 18 "other."

Most of the fatal falls involve old people. Asked about poisonings, Arniel said they would include drug overdoses and these can be divided into four groups — suicides, people who accidentally took too much of an illegal drug for kicks, people who accidentally took too much of a prescription drug and people who were poisoned by someone else, although he knows of none in the last group.

Drug overdoses by people in their 30s to 50s are not likely to be accidents, he said. In his report he says probably 15 to 20 per cent of "accidental' deaths are actually suicides but this can only be a guess.

Under a graph which shows 20 of the road fatalities last year, more than half in the district, involved males 15 to 24, Arniels cryptic comment is: "The reason why young men pays so much more for insurance is all too obvious."

Birth rate in the Capital district last year was 10.5 per 1,000 of population in contrast to the provincial average of 14.4 for the year before. Rate of death was 10.3 per 1,000 where the provincial average was 7.7 in 1975 but Arneil says both comparisons can be misleading.

With 16 per cent of people in the Capital district over age 65, in contrast to a provincial average of nine per cent, "there is an obvious physiological explanation of our lower births . . . similarly more old people than young people die."

He calculates the loss of "productive" work years by premature death by subtracting age at death from 65 and counting those who died under 15 at 15.

That produces a total of 8,781 productive work years lost, with deaths from accidents the biggest factor at 3,499 lost years.

Many of the accidents were preventable, he says. "Truly in preventative medicine we should be interested."

Private Eye Calls in Max in Missing Man Mystery

How on earth can someone just disappear?

That's what Jack Moxam wants to know.

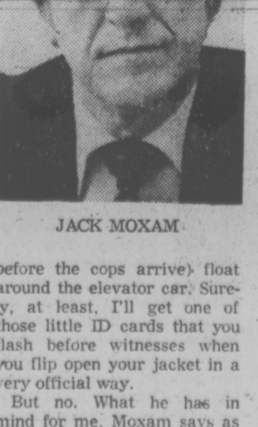
Now you'd think that Moxam would be the one with all the answers. After all, he's been chasing disappearing people around Canada for 23 years.

That's right. Moxam's a private eye. He had his own firm in Edmonton for some time and for the last year has been Vancouver Island manager of World Investigation Services (which also has branches in Vancouver, Winnipeg and Toronto).

It's obvious he knows the ropes. But there's this one job, see, that's got him in the corner. Quite frankly, he's baffled.

So what does he do? He calls me in on the case!

Feeling very much like Joe Mannix, I ride the elevator up to the sixth floor of the Sayward Building on Douglas Street. Visions of me out tracking the suspects (catching them red-handed seconds before the cops arrive) float around the elevator car. Surely, at least, I'll get one of those little ID cards that you flash before witnesses when you flip open your jacket in a very official way.



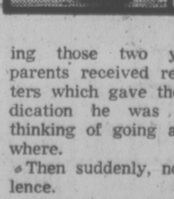
JACK MOXAM

But no. What he has in mind for me, Moxam says as he leans earnestly across his desk, is, perhaps a column about the vanishing Brian Guberman. He hopes I'll use a photograph so someone might spot it, say "Ah, isn't that the guy who lives next door?" and get straight on the phone to Jack at 382-8358. Something like that.

Though somewhat deflated, I sit and listen fascinated as Moxam flicks through the pages of the thick Guberman file.

It was back in June of 1974 that Brian Guberman's parents in Winnipeg last heard from their son. And it was in April, 1975, that he was last reported as being seen alive. What makes it so baffling is there seems no reason for him to disappear.

Well educated (he has a batchelor of arts degree in education, majoring in philosophy), Brian taught at Hugh John McDonald School in Winnipeg before going to Edmonton to work for a couple of years with Big Sisters, a government-funded group helping wayward girls. During those two years his parents received regular letters which gave them no indication he was upset or thinking of going away anywhere.



max low

Then suddenly, nothing. Silence.

The Gubermans checked with Brian's sister in Edmonton who told them he'd quit and gone to B.C. Their inquiries on the coast led them to a man named Paul Rattray, who Moxam says is leader of the Hare Krishna movement in Vancouver.

Rattray identified a photo of Brian and said in a letter to the Gubermann (signed in his Hare Krishna name):

"He has been a visitor to our temple but not a member and has since gone travelling n his van to other parts of the country."

That was April, 1975, and it's the last anyone has seen of Brian Guberman or his yellow and black 1964 Volkswagen van (Alberta plates ET 3366).

If he is still alive today, Brian will be 30.

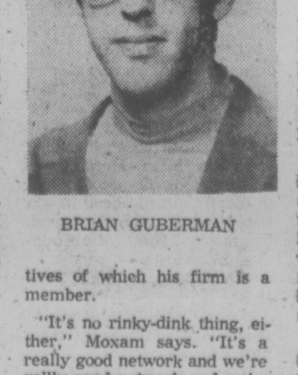
'So you' can see he's no runaway kid," says Moxam, who was put on the case by the Gubermans in March, 1976.

"We've contacted every corner in the country, the motor vehicle branches in each province to try to trace the van, and the Canadian Penitentiary Service," he explains. "Nothing! And, because he's listed as a missing person with the RCMP they've established he has not applied for work everywhere nor did he file a tax return for 1975-76."

Both the RCMP and Moxam have checked out a Hare Krishna retreat in Bridesville not far from Osoyoos with no results. The sect has about 80 temples scattered throughout North America so, if Guberman had chosen to go that route, he could conceivably be in one of those.

"But then his van registration expired in March, 1975," Moxam points out. "It has not been renewed anywhere and if he'd sold it we would be able to trace it. But it has disappeared, too."

The distraught Gubermans have offered a $750 reward for any information that leads to the locating of their son, and Moxam has contacted the World Association of Detectives of which his firm is a member.



BRIAN GUBERMAN

"It's no rinky-dink thing, either," Moxam says. "It's a really good network and we're rellly good network and we're putting a bulletin in their newsletter so if Guberman shows up in any other country they'll have a record of his Canadian passport number." (There is no record of your departure from Canada, just a record of when you re-enter).

But he can't help being puzzled over this one.

"Over the years, I've tracked down hundreds of kids and they all seem to have patterns or reasons for running away," he explains. "But this guy has no reasons. He just seems to have melted.

"It's not beyond reason that he's still living somewhere and that old truck's lying in the bush. But everyone uses his numbers nowadays for welfare, hospitals, unemployment, everything. And there has been no use of Guberman's numbers.

"This is definitely the most baffling case I've run into in 23 years," Moxam admits. "Normally, you get a whisper. But this time there's nothing.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR

Astrological Forecast for Sunday, March 20

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Diversify — highlight versatility. Communicate, spread influence — express views in artistic, humorous manner. Gemini, Sagittarius could be involved. Money and legalities dominate. Ask questions. Realize that one close to you wants to change, to move, to spend, to save, to dream, to bring goals into realistic focus. Cope with what is — cycle is high and you'll win!

TAURUS (April20-May 20): you mean, mean what you you mena, mean what you say. Do some "tearing down" for ultimate purpose of rebuilding on solid structure. Check behind the scenes. Finish assigment, task which has been shunted aside — too often!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Hopes, wishes are subject to revision. Get ideas on paper. Bring objectives into proper perspective. No one can stop you — except you. Know it and be confident — welcome change, travel, variety, communications, expression of feelings, concepts. Refuse to be intimidated — by any person.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Adjust to necessary changes within framework of "home life." Taurus, Libra figure prominently. Accent on contacts with superiors, ability to make room for yourself at top Obstacles are challenges, not hindrances. Know it and respond accordingly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Perceive subtle clues, trends. Perfect techniques. Streamline methods, procedures. What seems "obvious" could be a decoy. Know it, protect interests. Long-range prospects must be considered. You'll understand! Pisces, Virgo figure prominently.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Stress responsibility, willingness to invest in your own talents, ideas. Capricorn, Cancer individuals figure prominently. Tax matters, future investments, financial considerations involving partner or mate — these command spotlight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Finish rather than begin — complete task which has been somewhat of a burden. Another Libra — and an Aries — could be involved. You tend now to attract people with their problems. Emphasis on what is legal, how best to achieve goal without ruffling feathers of the law.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): New start, added chance for more independence, creativity — these are spotlighted. Leo, Aquarius persons figure in picture. You do best now by getting behind the scenes, uncovering layers of superficiality.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be wary of impulse dictating to logic. Take one step at a time. Attempting to skip essential would be an error. Teach and learn — review lessons. Young person could be making unreasonable demands.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Status quo subject to quick change. Study Sagittarius message for valid hint. Emphasis on home base, completion of transaction, a substitute for one you had been accustomed to dealing with — adjustment becomes a necessity. Values shift — be alert, versatile. Follow through on unorthodox, friendly counsel.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Check directions, instructions. Take nothing for granted, espeically where relatives are concerned. You may have to review, revise, even to tear down for purpose of rebuilding on solid base. Scorpio, Taurus individuals are likely to be involved.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Finances, savings programs, basic expenditures are featured. Gemini, Virgo individuals play key roles. Accent on payments, ability to collect what is due, protection of valuables, especially while in transit.

IF MARCH 20 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are sensitive, moody, at times arrogant, a wonderful chef in that you appreciate food, the security of warm relationships. You are a humanist. Cancer, Capricorn persons play important roles in your life. You succeed through new starts, contacts, added independence this year — July should be your most significant month of 1977.

Astrological Forecast for Monday, March 21

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Lunar cycle is high — you find that communications improve, what was out-of-reach becomes available. Position is strong — know it and be confident. A dream could prove prophetic. Heed "inner voice." Timing, basic judgments are on target. You receive aid from one who is "psychic."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Light touch, indirect approach should be advocated. Be ready for change, variety, special communications. Gemini, Virgo persons are in picture. What you seek is temporarily obscured. You will have to review sources and check behind scenes. Hospital visit provides enlightenment.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Friendship could become a romance. You find that individual you "like" is a special person. Married or single creative juices are anticivated. You imprint sytle, give of yourself. Taurus, Libra figure in important ways.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Many persons see you in different ways. Key is to be true to yourself. Avoid trap of self-deception — do what must be done and be realistic. Accent on career civic duty, recognition for job you did in exceptional manner, One who whispers "secret" is seeking attention, affection.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): you get involved — nothing occurs in lukewarm manner. If playing games, get out — feelings, emotions are at stake and stakes are considerable. Means if you are "stringing someone along," think twice. Accent on communication, long-distance, planning ahead. Display of affection is a highlight.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Study Leo message — dig for information. Reject rumor, reports based on speculation. What appears to legal obstacle could be a smoke screen. Know it and do some investigating on your own. One who taught you in past could make reappearance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A relative could get you back on course — sense of direction has been distorted. Now, renew confidence, set sights on goal, strive for a more creative approach — welcome chance for fresh contacts. Leo, Aquarius figure prominently.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Check accounts — count your change. Be realistic about appraisals, children, speculative ventures. Affair of heart could be high on agenda. However, do give logic equal time. You will have to face yourself in the morning. Cancer, Sagittarius, Aquarius persons are part of scenario.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You're abel to appeal to people on various levels. Key is to promise only what can be delivered. Be flexible, versatile without spreading yourself too thin. Another Sagittarian — and a Gemini — figure prominently. Bring forth creative capabilities. Love is very much in picture!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): Rumors, gossip come your way. Be selective — refuse to become part of any foolish group bent on character assassination. Insist on factual material. Stand tall for principles. Scorpio will become an ally.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Some wishes come true in most unusual manner — involving money. Written material aids cause — know it and analyze various factors. Individual studious and refined, confides problem and provides information. Be open-minded, alert and receptive.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Surprise comes in form of gift. Your "love life" changes from friction to harmony — one you respond to emotionally and mentally returns favor and makes you feel secure. Home, surroundings, family reunion — these figure prominently. Taurus, Libra individuals are part of scenario.

IF MARCH 21st IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have sense of humor and concern about weight, physical appearance. You are attractive — you live to travel, you are expressive, restless and artistic. You are also original, creative, in love with love and drawn to Gemini, Sagittarius persons. May should be an outstanding month for you in 1977, a year which will feature an expansion of your universe and greater personal happiness.

A Silly Ride, an Ego Trip

Two Movies Reviewed By NORA HUTCHISON

Lately, going to the movies has almost become a chore, and I'm beginning to begrudge the time wasted in dark theatres in pursuit of that elusive combination of entertainment and art that makes movie-going worth my time. This year, there seem to have been few movies that have caught the full attention of anyone in the audience; as they troop out you can read the dissatisfaction in their faces. Filmmakers are putting everything on the surface; nothing is held in reserve for closer inspection — it's all rapid-action flash, and as obvious as a commercial. There's no time left for reflection, for pulling together the nuances of plot. Are the filmmakers becoming so unsure of themselves and their product that they're afraid to leave space to accommodate our responses?

The Cassandra Crossing is a perfect example of the kind of slick, out-of-a-can kind of movie-making that causes me despair when I consider the possible fate of movies. Directed, written and scripted by George Pan Cosmatos, and produced by Carlo Ponti, the filmmakers have tried to combine elements of some of the most currently salable horrors — sci-fi plots about deadly bacteria escaping their maximum security test tubes, concentration camp recollections, heroin-running across international borders and disaster smash-ups. The plot concerns a U.S. Army Intelligence detail trying to contain a trainful of passengers, over 1,000, we're told, who have been exposed to a carrier of bubonic plague.

The cast of characters includes the usual mix you'd find in any train opus — a brilliant neurosurgeon, his twice-divorced authoress wife, a group of ski bums, the wife of a German ammunitions manufacturer and her young man companion, a CIA agent, a kindly old Jew who has survived the camps, nuns, kids, harried mothers, and pushy Americans on sabbatical.

I wouldn't have gone near the movie if it hadn't been for the lure of the cast: Sophia Loren, the authoress; Martin Sheen, the gigolo; Richard Harris, the doctor; Ava Gardner, the manufacturer's wife; Lee Strasberg, the old man; Burt Lancaster, the Army Intelligence man; and Ingrid Thulin as a Swedish doctor who tried to persuade the U.S. Army from sending the trainload of potentially infected people to their death — but I was foolish to have expected that their presence would have made a difference to the movie's make-up.

Harris, Loren, Gardner and Lancaster all look worn-out, and only Strasberg seems to be comfortable with his age and his role. Ingrid Thulin, one of Bergman's finest actresses, however, is the greatest disappointment. She has aged unremarkably, and now has the countenance of a disconsolate haus-frau. Her role is flat but her characterization is even flatter. Like Liv Ullmann, she seems to need Bergman to bring out the best in her.

Although I hadn't expected The Cassandra Crossing to be much more than a glossy disaster epic that might prove to be mildly diverting, I had expected Fellini's Casanova to be entertaining on a grand scale. For three years, word has been circulating about the film and its lavish production costing upwards of $12 million. A history of Casanova seems such an obvious choice for a Fellini film — the most famous libertine was at various times in his life a soldier, a gamester, a churchman, an engineer, a magician and a spy. He was, as well, a scholar who managed to live best by his wits, his skill with the dice, and his way with women. In his old age, he took up a post as librarian to Count Waldstein in a secluded castle in Bohemia, and it was there that he wrote his memoirs on which Fellini's sketches are based.

Casanova's history lends itself to a satiric mode, and since Fellini has a genuine talent for satire the film could have been a mocking, stylish epic of sexual mechanics and engineering, but instead Fellini appears to have spent all his time and energy on the creation of baroque imagery that reminds us uncomfortably of Ken Russell's excesses of taste.

Unfortunately for those of us primed for a Fellini adventure, the movie never really gets started. We come in on Casanova in his early 30's, at the height of his reputation as a libertine, and three hours later, after numerous amourous episodes, we bow out on Casanova as an old man, dancing on a frozen Venetian canal with his great love, a mechanical doll. In between, we've mostly been bored. There's really not a great deal that anyone can do with scenes of sexual athletics once the camera and the performers have gone a few rounds.

Donald Sutherland, who is a loose, casual sort of actor, playing a character who delighted in artifice, who played so many roles he lost his sense of self, but he manages reasonably well to convey a feeling for the egotistical dandy whose swollen head more often than not trips up his feet.

It's hard to know whether Fellini's heart was really in this picture, or whether he believed that as a potential money maker it could provide him with the freedom and the funds to do something more contained. Casanova appears to have gone beyond Fellini's means of control. Three hours of watching one extraordinary ego attempt to make art from the story of another extraordinary ego is too much for anyone to comfortably endure.

The clash of personalities — Fellini's and Casanova's — rings through this production. Fellini has grown too selfish to be interested in anyone else — he is his own best material. "I have invented my own life. I have invented it specifically for the screen. I know the unreality of it all: its limitations, the feeling of exhaltation and extravagance which it brings, the dangerous romantic risks, but outside the cinema, I know no other way in which I can feel at ease, and in tune with my own self." It's becoming so that reading about Fellini in the character of a filmmaker is more fun than going to his movies.

SUTHERLAND AS CASANOVA . . . baroque imagery.

Percussion Recital

Percussion student Dale Price will be presenting his degree recital at UVic's MacLaurin auditorium on Monday at 8 p.m. He will be assisted by Jane Davis at the piano in Concertino for Xylophone and Orchestra by Toshiro Mayuzumi, as his opening number.

Stephen Woodyard, trumpet, will join Price in a performance of Encounters III by William Kraft.

Among other works will be Philip Brown's Congo Fever, which was commissioned by Dale Price and consists of five parts. Concertino for Timpani by Michael Colgrass will be conducted by Peter Burris and accompanied by an ensemble of brass and percussion players.

There is no charge for admission.

Verdi's Requiem At UVic Gymn

By AUDREY JOHNSON

What will the University of Victoria's annual Taylor Scholarship concert of 1978 produce in the way of a musical work, one wonders. Brahms' Academic Festival Overture? Or some Wagnerian outpouring of triumph?

Or better still a Canadian composer's hymn to the rewards of patience and persistence in the clutches of perversity?

Whatever, that concert, barring extreme adversity, should be performed in the 1,000-seat concert hall of the new university centre now in the process of construction.

In the meantime it's over to the old gymnasium on UVic campus next week for a performance by the UVic orchestra and chorus of Verdi's Requiem. The event takes place Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. and will be conducted by James Walker.

Joining in the performance of this superbly eloquent work will be soloists Alexandra Browning, soprano; Audrey Glass, mezzo; Larry Potts, tenor, and Garth Gislason, bass.

Browning and Glass are both native Vancouverites. The former made her professional debut in 1966 with Britten's English Opera Group. She has appeared at the Aldeburgh and Edinburgh Festivals and has toured Europe.

She returned to Canada in 1975 and became first artist-in-residence at UBC. She has performed frequently in Vancouver with BBC and CBC.

Ms. Glass has been part of the Vancouver Opera Association's training program and a resident artist with the company for two years. She has performed numerous roles on tour and presented many recitals.

Potts has sung the Requiem role with the Mid-Columbia Symphony of Richland, Wash. A well-known Victoria singer, Gislason has performed extensively in Canada and England and most recently was seen in the major role of the Count in the Van Isle Opera Society's Marriage of Figaro.

Tickets for the Requiem are available at the music department office in the MacLaurin Building or from chorus members. Proceeds go to the Taylor music scholarship fund.

BROWNING . . . soloist

Montoya Here April 1

Regarded by many people the world over as the living symbol of Flamenco music, Carlos Montoya comes to Victoria for a single concert April 1.

Before Montoya, the Flamenco guitar was used only to accompany dancers and singers. He has performed with such great names as La Argentina, Vicente Escudero, Carmen Amaya and many others.

However, it was Montoya who believed that Flamenco guitar was worthy of a full concert recital and he was thus the first Flamenco guitarist to display his artistry in a solo concert. He is now known as the most recorded Flamenco artist in musical history.

Recital at Art Gallery

A joint recital by cellist Molly Wilbur and piantist Kristine Beny, will take place Sunday at 3 p.m. at the Greater Victoria Art Gallery, 1040 Moss. Ms Wilbur is a member of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra and studies with Linda Hougland-Daniels.

She obtained her Bachelor of Music degree from the University of Wisconsin, studied in Switzerland on scholarship, and has played in the Shenandoah Valley Music Festival with the American Symphony League Orchestra.

Ms. Beny is a music graduate of the University of Victoria and has appeared many times on local concert platforms. She has studied with Robin Wood and is on the Conservatory of Music faculty.

Gallery doors open at 2 p.m. There is no charge for the concert.
